ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
 The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 112. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Sept. 8; Madras, Sept. 9; Bombay, Sept. 11.

It is officially notified that from Sept. 26 the Overland Mail will leave Bombay on Saturday instead of on Friday as at present.

The next meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla was to be held on Sept. 17.

The Viceroy, accompanied by Dr. Fenn and Captain Brasier-Creagh, left Simla on Sept. 17 for the Chor Mountain, and returned on the 26th. His Excellency is in excellent health.

The Viceroy's visit to Cashmere cannot be divested of a certain political significance, as the State is practically in Commission, but there is not the least probability, the Times of India says, that any new departure will be made in the current relations.

Lord and Lady Harris reached Simla on Sept. 3, and were received by the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne at Viceregal Lodge. Their Excellencies left Simla on Sept. 9.

The Governor of Madras completed his month's tour through the distressed districts of the Presidency on Sept. 8.

A report that Sir David Barbour may retire shortly is unfounded, says an Indian paper. The Finance Minister will return to Simla with the Government next season.

The monument to be erected by the Government at Manipore over the grave of Mr. Quinton and his ill-fated companions is likely to be one of a simple character. A tablet to their memory will also be placed in the Calcutta Cathedral.

Lieutenant Davison, although employed by Captain Younghusband, it is said, is not placed on special duty. His story is that he went to Ladakh with the intention of exploring, that his party deserted him, and that he had no alternative but to proceed to Yarkand.

A Calcutta telegram of Sept. 17 says:—In the Imperial diamond case several applications have been made to the High Court and to the police-courts during the week regarding the custody of the notes said to have been paid by the Nizam to the defendant as earnest for the purchase of the stone. The centre of interest will now change to Hyderabad, where the Nizam is to be examined on Oct. 3. [A full report of the earlier proceedings in the case will be found in another column.]

Two of the Bengal gold mining companies, the Jut-Put Gold Mining Company and the Sonakhan Gold Mining Company have gone into liquidation.

The first train was run through the Khojak Tunnel on Sept. 5.

The Government of India has sanctioned the scheme for the Mushkhaf Railway through the Bolan Pass, and work will be commenced upon it in the coming cold season.

It is formally notified that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the construction of the Lucknow-Rai Bareli Railway.

It has been settled that a steam ferry shall be established at Dera Ismail Khan, where training works on the Indus will be undertaken to ensure the rapid crossing of the river at all seasons. This will enable a force to be concentrated rapidly on the Gomal route.

It is under consideration to locate the Surma Valley Military Police in Northern Looshai country, the principal posts to be held being Aijal and Changsil.

A scheme is under consideration for improving the telegraph service on the Cashmere line to Gilgit. In all probability it will be put in thorough working order very shortly.

Mahammad Mustafa Khan, Tehsildar, has been arrested at Cawnpore in connection with the murder of General Azimuddin Khan, President of the Rampur Council of State.

The tribesmen of Abor in the Assam border have been causing a great deal of trouble lately, and it is proposed to send a small expedition against them next cold weather.

The Chief Commissioner of Burma has proposed that the railway line from Samon to Myingyan shall be begun as a relief work, owing to the failure of the rains. The exact alignment has yet to be determined upon, as it is considered advisable to extend the railway to a point opposite to Pokoko.

Sir John Edge, chief justice of Allahabad, has arrived in England on leave of absence.

A dinner was given on Sept. 21 at the Siamese Legation in honour of the King's birthday. Those connected with the Legation, including Siamese students, both girls and boys, who had come from all parts of the United Kingdom, assembled to the number of forty-four to do honour to the occasion. Prince Damrong, brother of the King, now on a visit to this country and to the other Courts of Europe, presided, and was supported by the four young Princes, sons of the King, who are now being educated in England; also by Count Dithakar, Chargé d'Affaires, and by the suite of his Royal Highness. After dinner Prince Damrong proposed the health of the King of Siam and of the Queen of England, both of which toasts were cordially received by the company present.

It is not generally known that Sir Edward Braddon, the Agent-General for Tasmania in London, who has made himself so popular in London society, is not only a brother of Miss Braddon, the novelist, but was also at one time a distinguished member of the Indian Civil Service, which he joined in the Mutiny year, and after filling several important positions in Oude retired in 1877 on a pension. He then settled in Tasmania—a colony which has peculiar attractions for members of the British Services abroad, for it resembles home more closely than any other colony save in the single important detail of climate, in which respect it is more temperate than even the most favoured spots in the south of England, and more nearly resembles the Channel Islands. Sir Edward soon entered into political life, filled various offices in the Fysh Administration, and in 1888 became Agent-General in London.

Of all Anglo-Indian M.P.'s none would have been thought less ready to confess to the common complaint of increasing years and failing powers than Sir Richard Temple. Yet we see, says the Pioneer, from the current mail papers that Sir Richard has just announced to his Worcestershire constituents that he does not feel equal to contesting the seat again. Had he been able to commence Parliamentary life earlier, there can be no doubt that our ex-Governor would have climbed high. For Sir Richard Temple, late and brief though his English career has been, has shown that he possessed in Parliament, as in his Indian official life, the indefinable art of success. In spite of many disadvantages for parliamentary success, apart from the grand disadvantage of having passed the best part of his life in official harness in India, Sir Richard has gained himself a distinct and recognised position in the estimation of the House—above the little knot of bores and dullards, who misrepresent for the rest the English race in India.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs yesterday :—A good quantity of rain has fallen lately in Ganjam, Malabar, South Canara, parts of Vizagapatam, Godavery, South Arcot, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Salem, Chingleput, and North Arcot. There is no increase in the number of persons obtaining gratuitous relief. Native journals express their approval of the proposed agricultural banks and State loans for digging wells. It is reported that Lord Wenlock will shortly visit Salem, the condition of which district causes some anxiety. The last reports from some portions of Bombay are somewhat gloomy. Prices are said to be rising. The outlook in Rajpootana is also discouraging.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office :—
"From Viceroy, Sept. 26, 1891.—Prospects continue gloomy in Central Madras, and conditions unfavourable in Rajpootana. There is a marked improvement in Upper Burma in consequence of recent rain."

G U P.

MR. CHAMBERS'S clever play, "Captain Swift," has been produced at Simla, and the Times of India correspondent there, writing on Sept. 1, gives the following account of it :—Between Simla wet and Simla dry there is all the difference in the world, and we have now at last reached the limit of the obnoxious period of mist and rain. So far, it is true, we have only had the merest foretaste of the delightful season that is "about to begin," but the old residents predict "Queen's weather," for the visit of Lord and Lady Harris. There is undoubtedly a social re-awakening. Our amateurs are busy, and their energies have run into new dramatic fields. They are now playing the intense Anglo-Australian drama, entitled "Captain Swift," with which Mr. Haddon Chambers caused something like a sensation at the Haymarket Theatre last year. The play is sensational, although in a way quite distinct from the melodrama of the Olympic. It is commonly spoken of as something new for Simla, and yet this only shows how short is the public memory. Two years ago, a little earlier in the season, we were all talking of the daring experiment in which our amateurs were engaged. Then, as now, they had taken a flight into the realm of passionate drama, the play on that occasion being "Jim, the Penman," and the principal actors Captains Norton and Holland. The latter is still in Simla and takes the leading part in "Captain Swift," a play which is own brother to its predecessor in realism and intensity. As on the former occasion, the experiment must be pronounced a decided success, and this opinion may be maintained without any avowal of a preference for sensational drama. "Captain Swift" is admirably acted all round, and it is essentially an acting play. The cast is an exceptionally strong one, and the staging of the piece has been carefully studied. The scenery, which is by Mr. McCracken, is the best I have ever seen in an Indian theatre. The park scene in the second act is a most effective sylvan picture, while the conservatory scene in act three is equally artistic and ingenious. The cast is as follows :—

Mr. Wilding, an adventurer	Captain Holland.
Mr. Seabrook	Colonel T. Deane.
Mr. Harry Seabrook	Mr. Hunter Weston.
Mr. Gardiner, a Queensland Squatter	Major N. Davis.
Mr. Marshall, a butler	Captain G. Williams.
Mr. Ryan, a Queensland Detective ...	Mr. Hare.
Mr. Bates, an old servant	Dr. Taylor.
Mrs. Seabrook	Mrs. Deane.
Mabel Seabrook, daughter	Miss Way.
Stella Darbisher, niece	Mrs. Williams.
Lady Staunton	Mrs. Little.

As I have said, the acting was uniformly excellent. Mrs. Deane is more at home, perhaps, in lighter and less emotional parts, but she played the part of the sorely afflicted and true-hearted woman to the life. In the later scenes, especially, she acted with an intensity and naturalism which are surprising in an amateur. The part is a difficult one, which would make severe demands upon a professional actress, but it was ably rendered with a full appreciation of its scope and attributes. Mrs. Williams as Stella, and Miss Way as Mabel, gave a charm of their own to the play, which in a great measure relieved the deepening shadows of the tragic story. Looking the parts to perfection, both ladies acted with an unaffected simplicity which no training could improve. Mabel's love-making with Gardiner was delightful, while the pathos of Stella's acceptance of Wilding's offer was equally true and telling. Mrs. Little had a somewhat ungracious part in Lady Staunton, the cool, prudent woman of the world; but her quick, brisk manner was a capital foil to the emotional nature of Mrs. Seabrook, towards whom she stood in the relation less of sister than of monitor. It is not too much to say that with Captain Holland as Wilding, the success of the piece was assured. The actor has gained in force and freedom during the past two years, and his Captain Swift is a finished and elaborate study, worked out with an easy art that is apt to delude the superficial observer. To those who know what goes to the elaboration of such a character—romantic yet conventional, lofty but tinged with ignoble circumstance, an adventurer and a hero in one—it will seem no exaggeration to place Captain Holland's achievement in the highest amateur rank. In some respects it is stronger and fresher than first-class professional art, and to this we may add that his impersonation completely succeeded in winning the sympathy as well as the admiration of an audience which is at least fastidious.

As for what are called the 'character parts, I have left myself little room to speak; fortunately they do call for nothing but the heartiest commendation. Colonel Deane, as aged Mr. Seabrook, had a part after his own heart, and made the utmost of it. Major Newnham-Davis, in a wonderful get-up, played the manly, jovial, love-lorn squatter most efficiently. Mr. Hunter-Weston was excellent as the rash, inexperienced victim of a boyish passion. The minor parts were all well filled, and the manner in which the company acted together would afford a hint to Calcutta amateurs. On the whole, the A.D.C. is to be congratulated on having scored a success, which alone is sufficient to mark the season as memorable in the dramatic sense.

The marriage of Mr. Rees with Miss Mary Dormer took place on Sept. 9 in the Roman Catholic Cathedral, Ootacamund. Lord and Lady Wenlock, the Hon. Sir James and Lady Dormer, and their respective staffs, were present. The wedding was quite private.

The "Old Cheltonians" have dined together once more, writes the Poona correspondent of the Times of India. Hitherto this annual dinner has taken place at the Gymkhana, and has followed the termination of the Cricket Match versus the Poona Gymkhana. But what a falling is there! The old schoolboys of Cheltenham College were this year unable to get together a cricket eleven, in spite of the energy displayed by the Bombay D.A.A.G., who has given us his assistance as umpire in several of the recent matches played on the Poona ground. The glory of the Cheltonians is certainly faded when they find themselves unable to knock up a team to play the Gymkhana, especially when they have in their ranks Poona's "only bowler" this season—young Stuart, of the Worcesters. But if they failed to appear at the wicket, twenty of them banded together and dined right regally on Saturday night—apart from the general club table by themselves—at the Club of Western India, and every man put up a score. The only guest on the occasion was Poona's pet scorer. The first Old Cheltonian dinner at Poona was held in 1886, when thirty-four gentlemen attended, the chairman being Colonel K. Jopp, R.E. The following year there was no dinner, but in 1888 they mustered thirty-one. The number has gradually dwindled down to only twenty in 1891, when there were two "skulkers." One Cheltonian did a pilgrimage from Kolhapore to attend the dinner on Sept. 6. Those who were present were twenty, with the Hon. Mr. Moore as a guest, Lieutenant-General B. H. Pottinger, Military Secretary to Government, presiding. There were present Colonel E. Carrington, Major Gerald Martin, Captains L. L. Steele, R. B. Page, B. B. Russell, R. E., M. Brunner, A. Phayre, G. Porter, R. E., and M. Carthew-Yorston, Lieutenants B. F. Stuart, H. S. Benn, C. A. Brown, and R. Pottinger, R. A., Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, Chief Secretary to Government, Messrs. C. H. Candy, C. S., J. Dunsterville, R. Trevethick, A. C. Logan, C. S., and J. G. Collister.

The Maharaja Dhuleep Singh is quite upon his legs again as far as finance and luxury are concerned, writes the Paris correspondent of the Sunday Times. He has rented a splendid place at the Celle-Saint-Cloud, and his retinue consists of twelve servants, and a few of the faithful adherents who were missing in the days when his Highness was reduced to taking his meals at the Duval under the shadow of the statue of Joan of Arc. The fumes of curry reach the pedestrian and tricyclist as he passes the Villa Hogg, that being the name of the desirable suburban residence of the Maharaja and his charming English wife. Dr. Hogg is a Paris physician who, with Dr. Faure Miller, looks after Dhuleep Singh. The health of the latter is not quite satisfactory. Modified hemiplegia and great feebleness are the chief symptoms. This, however, is a good ending, and the Maharaja must look back with wonderment to the days when he went to St. Petersburg with a passport in the name of Pat Casey, and when, after having been robbed at Berlin, neither the influence of Mme. Edmond Adam nor the machinations of a Pan Slavist mercenary general could obtain for him an audience of the Czar. Paris, however, was worth a mass to Henri IV., and, doubtless, the ex-potentate thinks that his return and submission are not badly recompensed.

In the stirring days of the Mutiny the civil element of Madras hastily enrolled themselves as Volunteers, and pickets were posted at various important positions round the city. It was the custom of the then Governor, his Excellency Lord Harris (father of the present Governor of Bombay), to gallop round in the early morning and inspect the various posts, and to address to the gallant defenders of his Presidency a few complimentary remarks. It may easily be imagined that on first enrolment the Madras Guards presented a somewhat motley appearance, tops and caps being often mingled in the ranks, with Mr. Hawke's latest warlike production in helmets. A legal luminary of the local Bar, between whom and his Excellency some slight friction existed, commanded one of these posts. On the appearance of the Governor one morning the guard turned out with alacrity, and a honeyed address rose to the lips of his Excellency, when, with a start, he recognised his whilom enemy. "Ahem! Allow me to congratulate you, Mr. A—, on the fact that your men have more spikes in their helmets than those of the other pickets," said the Governor. "Your Excellency's remarks are always to the point," replied Mr. A—, as he bent his head forward, bringing the point of the spike in his helmet well to the front.

If we may believe the Bombay Samachar, the Hindoo nose-ring is in a fair way of being doomed. A late issue of that journal, according to the Times of India, states that a meeting of members of the Cutchee Veesa Oswal caste was held on Sunday evening at Mandvie Bunder, when it was resolved that hereafter their women should wear a flower in the nose instead of the customary nose-ring. It was stated that the wearing of nose-rings had led to "much unfavourable comment," and it was further resolved that if any woman were in future to wear a nose-ring she would be "liable to a fine of 10 rs. 4 a., in addition to forfeiture of the ornaments." To the Western mind there will be a quaint flavour in the Samachar's paragraph and nothing more, but to the castes concerned in this daring innovation it will savour, perhaps, of something very like tragedy, for the nose-ring of the womenfolk is a survival of especially memorable times, and, according to tradition, is the memento of an injunction from no less a source than the second deity in the Hindoo Pantheon. But why those four annas?

The Registrar of Native Publications, in his report for 1890, mentions a work in which Mr. Vyankat Rango Katti, late Principal of the Training College, Dharwar, has shown that the practice of shaving the heads of women after the death of their husbands, which obtains among the higher classes of the Hindoos of the Deccan and some other parts of India, is not prescribed by the Hindoo religious lawgivers, but has been borrowed from the Buddhists. He has challenged a contradiction, supported by authorities quoted from books written before the year 1450 of Shalivahana, and has offered a reward of 1,000 rs. for showing such authorities.

A memorandum, says the Madras Mail, that is likely to prove of the deepest interest to all students of Indian history has just been drawn up by Mr. G. W. Forrest. It deals with the discoveries that he made during his recent search among the records of Fort St. George. Selections from some of the more ancient Madras documents have already been printed, but they are too meagre to be of much use to the historical student. Something approaching to a facsimile is wanted for him, and this, we are glad to know, he will soon have.

A Zemindar in Lower Bengal has adopted a novel method of correcting the perversity of his ryots who have not been regular in paying their rents. He has ordered certain priests to visit the ryots and make them chant the names of the Hindoo gods they worship to the accompaniment of musical instruments. The religious feeling thus aroused, combined with the soothing charm of music, will, it is fondly hoped by the wily landlord, sufficiently calm them down to pay up.

The following remarkable words lately fell from the lips of a Brahmin social reformer:—"I go the length of believing that a European in the possession of the virtues mentioned in the Shaster, is a greater Brahmin than a Brahmin by birth who, however, does not possess these virtues. I often call a Beauchamp, a Hume, a Grose, a true Brahmin. My respect for them is greater than for nominal Brahmins."

PERSONAL.

It is proposed to give a public ball as a farewell to Sir James and Lady Lyall.

Sir Edward Buck probably goes in the spring on one year's furlough. Mr. Ney Elias, the newly-appointed British representative at Meshed, was to leave Simla on Sept. 20 and proceed to Meshed via Kurrahee and Bushire.

The Englishman is responsible for the following:—"The Bombay Government is likely to lose the services of the Hon. Sir Charles Pritchard shortly, his transfer to the Government of India being practically settled."

The Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley, on return from leave of absence, took his seat on the bench of the First Division Court on the Original Side of the Bombay High Court on Sept. 8. He would preside at the fourth Criminal Sessions, which was to commence on Sept. 16.

Dr. George Watt, economic reporter to the Government of India, returned to Simla on Sept. 2 from a tour in the provinces. Dr. Watt was somewhat seriously indisposed.

Mr. Trevor Plowden has rejoined his appointment as Commissioner of the Berars. He will relieve Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick at Hyderabad towards the end of October.

Mr. Forrest, Director of Records with the Government of India, is on a visit to Madras, in order to conduct some further searches for records of Clive in the archives of Fort St. George.

Deputy Surgeon-General Cleghorn took over charge of the inspector-generalship of the civil hospitals of the Punjab at Simla on Sept. 2.

The Bombay Guardian regrets to learn that the Rev. R. A. Squires, incumbent of Girgaum Mission Church (C.M.S.), Bombay, is so unwell that, acting upon medical advice, he will probably leave for England at once.

Mr. Baines, the Census Commissioner, had arrived at Simla. He does not come home till the spring. Mr. Baines and Mr. O'Connor, of the Finance Department, have been appointed a committee to report on a proposal for establishing a Statistical Bureau in connection with the Trade and Agricultural Returns.

We promote dead men in India. The following notification, dated Aug. 19, appears in the Assam Gazette:—"Mr. F. St. C. Grimwood (deceased), Deputy Commissioner, fourth grade, to be Deputy Commissioner, third grade."

The Maharaja of Durbhunga has intimated that he will allow Mrs. Williams, widow of the late Manager of the Raj, a pension of 150l. a year for life. His Highness, with characteristic generosity, also made the lady a donation of 10,000 rs., and paid her passage to England.

Mr. Atkins, Officiating Postmaster-General in Bombay, having just recovered from an attack of cholera, comes home on twelve months' sick leave. Pending the return of Mr. Symonds in December, Mr. Hutton, Presidency Postmaster at Calcutta, is to act.

Colonel Pitcher, who was deputed last year from the North-West Provinces to Gwalior for the purpose of organising establishments of patwaris and kanungoes in that State, would probably officiate for Major Barr as Resident when that officer went on privilege leave at the end of September.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

THE Pioneer of Sept. 9 says:—"We much regret to hear of the death at sea on Monday of the Rev. James Lillie, the Senior Chaplain of the Church of Scotland in India. The event is the more sad, that Mr. Lillie had just completed his term of service and was on his way home to enjoy a well-earned rest. For ten years between 1878 and 1888 the deceased gentleman was minister of St. Andrew's Church, Allahabad, and has since then been in Calcutta. Wherever he went Mr. Lillie won the respect and admiration of all by his unwearied industry and devotion to duty. He had a high idea of the responsibility and sacredness of the pastor's calling, and strove faithfully to act up to it. Few engaged in religious work in India succeeded better. [A brief notice of this gentleman appeared in our last issue.]

General Sir John Bloomfield Gough, who died at his residence, Knockeevan, Clonmel, on Sept. 22, was the second son of the Very Rev. Thomas Bunbury Gough, Dean of Derry, and nephew of Hugh, first Viscount Gough, and Benjamin Lord Bloomfield. He was born in 1804, and entered the Army through the Royal Military College in 1820, served in the 22nd Foot and the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, and exchanged as captain into the 3rd Light Dragoons. He proceeded to India with his uncle, Sir Hugh Gough, serving on his Staff throughout every battle in his campaigns in China, Gwalior, Suttlej, and the Punjab. He commanded a cavalry brigade at the battles of Moodkee and Ferozeshah, and was very severely wounded while accompanying Sir Robert Dick's Division, which led the assault on the Sikh entrenchments at Sohraon. For these services he was promoted through the various grades to the rank of colonel, and was appointed an aide-de-camp to the Queen and Companion of the Bath. In 1867 he was made a K.C.B., and in 1876 G.C.B. He was appointed colonel of the Royal Scots Greys in 1864. He leaves three sons surviving him, all serving in her Majesty's Army. One son fell in battle at Abu Klea, in January 1885.

THE PRESS PROSECUTION IN INDIA.

THE following telegrams in reference to this matter have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times:—

SEPT. 23.—The defendants in the recent Press prosecution have tendered their full submission and an apology. The Government has accepted the same, and has decided not to proceed with the case.

SEPT. 24.—The defendants in the Bangabasi case, in their petition to the Lieutenant-Governor, while disclaiming any intention of exciting disaffection, admit that the articles were intemperate, disrespectful, and unjustifiable; express regret at having published them, and promise never to repeat the offence. The British Indian and native Press associations also presented petitions condemning the tone of the articles, but praying the Government to accept the submission. In the circumstances, the Lieutenant-Governor considers that no adequate object would be gained by renewing the prosecution. The Supreme Government concur, adding that, the law being now clearly explained by the highest judicial authority, and defendants having expressed contrition, they do not desire to press the matter further.

SEPT. 27.—Some few journals refuse to accept the settlement of the Bangabasi case as satisfactory, but public opinion generally agrees with the Government in thinking that there is no reason to press the matter further, as it has been shown beyond a doubt that deliberate attempts to excite enmity and ill-will towards the Government are offences under the Penal Code, and the defendants have expressed contrition. The Government was careful to state in the letter announcing its decision that honest, independent criticism, however mistaken, has nothing to fear from the law so long as it is put forward in good faith, while such criticism, so far as it is well informed, is welcomed by the Government as a valuable auxiliary.

Commenting on the conclusion of the case notified in the above telegrams, the Times says:—The native journalists of India will be in no doubt hereafter as to the permissible limits within which their comments on the Government of India must be confined. These they have learnt on the highest judicial authority, and, though the language used by the Bangabasi was certainly all that the defendants have termed it, we may hope that the promise which they have made will be kept, and that an offence, committed possibly in ignorance of the law, will not be repeated in face of the Chief Justice's charge. If this proves to be the result the prosecution will not have failed, and we have welcome news that it has not failed, that the tone of the Native Press has shown distinct signs of improvement, and that all has thus been attained which a verdict for the Government could have secured. It was certainly high time that some check should be put on the licence taken by native Indian journalists. The language in which they have habitually indulged may be as absurd and nonsensical as the counsel for the late defendants described it. It does not follow that it is harmless. Its capability for mischief is not to be measured by its argumentative force. We must take into account the class of readers to whom it is addressed, the state of public feeling at the time at which it is put out, and, not least, the peculiar position which the Government of India occupies as the representative of a conquering race. The native papers of India circulate widely among a people not well qualified to form a judgment on the value of their contents. The passing of the Act altering the age of consent had been regarded with a suspicion, baseless indeed, but not altogether unnatural. The Act, however necessary, was certainly an interference with an established custom, not of immemorial date, but so old that it had come to be bound up with the religious feeling of the native. It was thus easy to represent it as a slight to the religion of the country, and to arouse disaffection towards the Government which had assumed the responsibility of passing it. It was in these circumstances that the articles in the Bangabasi were published, and it was not possible that the Government which they incriminated should suffer them to pass without notice. The fact, alleged by the defence, that no outbreak had followed them was no adequate excuse for them, and for a good deal else of the same kind which other native journals were circulating. Their undoubted tendency was to excite feelings of hostility to the British rule, and it is difficult to believe that this was not what they were meant to do. Reckless they most certainly were, and though the Chief Justice did not say that they were intended as an incitement to rebellion, the language which he quoted from them is hardly consistent with any other view, unless, indeed, one may regard it as a mere catchpenny contrivance to increase the circulation of the paper by fair means or by foul. The Bangabasi has escaped unpunished but not unwarned. The full submission of its authors, their acknowledgment of their fault, and their promise of amendment for the future, observed up to this time, are the best atonement which they could have made. The result of the prosecution has thus been all that the Government of India can have had in view. To have proceeded further with the matter would, we think, have been a mistake. It is quite possible, indeed, that a second jury would have been more regardful of their duty, and would have shown less tenderness to the accused; but to have pressed for a conviction after the accused had been brought to their knees would have been a needlessly vindictive course. It is enough that the Government has asserted itself, and has given the native Indian Press a lesson which it will do wisely not to forget.

LORD WENLOCK ON MR. CAINE'S MALICIOUS UNTRUTHS.

THE following is the full report of some remarks made by Lord Wenlock at Perambore in reference to Mr. Caine's letter published in the English papers:—

Before I continue my journey there is one matter which I would like to allude to, because I do not think any place would be more appropriate than the centre of the Chingleput District to refer to certain articles published in certain English newspapers. On leaving the North Arcot District and entering Chingleput my attention was drawn to a letter published in one of the English papers by Mr. Caine. I understand that Mr. Caine came out here last cold weather for a few months, and that from the knowledge he acquired then he assumed that it was in his power to lecture us on our duty here, and to take us to task on what he considers a neglect of our duty. It was rather appropriate that this information should reach me in this particular place, because I am able to, and am glad to, say from personal inspection that almost every single word that was written by Mr. Caine is absolutely and maliciously untrue, and when I read to you what he says I think that those of you who, like myself, know what is the position of affairs in this particular part of the country will agree with me that it is untrue. What he says is with reference to a Reuter's telegram to the London Times, and he, in what he calls "reading between the lines," draws on his imagination on this part, and for the rest relies on the information which he says has just been received by him from a correspondent at Madras; and the result of these two sources of information lead him to say that not only has a serious famine set in in Madras with all the horrors which accompany such a disaster, but that the Madras Government has been grossly neglecting its duty. These two statements I beg most distinctly to traverse. There is not a single word of truth in either of them. I shall go categorically through the various points he has raised. I think I can show you what has been done by Government and what Government is still doing. You will agree with me that such an accusation is absolutely false and baseless. He mentions in the course of his letter that while the people and cattle are dying by hundreds Government looks aside and takes absolutely no notice. These are two serious accusations, and I would ask you to go with me through the facts of the case. Take the Chingleput District. Not a single case of death by starvation has taken place. The death-rate in Chingleput is just normally the same, as last year. As regards cattle in Chingleput, I am sorry to say that there is a point of truth in it. This is the only point which he can make in the whole of the statements which he has brought forward. There is no doubt that there has been considerable mortality among the cattle in Chingleput, but I find, after careful inquiries, that the greater number of those that died were weak and useless animals which in times of drought are sure to be the first to die. We all know that the system of keeping cattle by the Indian ryots does not conduce towards the proper and scientific treatment of cattle. The old animals are allowed to live on what they can pick up with more useful animals, which is a most wasteful way and not the way of keeping cattle in a healthy and proper condition. There has been considerable mortality among cattle in Chingleput, but it was entirely confined to the old and valueless cattle. As regards the cattle in North Arcot, the death-rate is almost the same, though a little higher than it was last year. But if the rate of mortality continues to be the same for the next six months as during the last six months, the average at the end of the year will hardly be the same as in other years. I am sorry to say there are four cases which are authenticated of death by starvation in North Arcot, and although these were cases which Government tried its utmost to relieve, yet it was not on account of any neglect on the part of the Government that these unfortunate people met their deaths, so that as regards that we may say we have disposed of it. As regards cattle in Chingleput I have had returns sent me as to the number that have died of starvation, and when I say that one out of a thousand died of starvation you can hardly say that cattle are dying by hundreds. Mr. Caine goes on to say in his accusations that the taxes are collected with the greatest rigour and severity, and that Government is oppressing people in times like this and taking no notice of their distress. As regards the taxes, I find in Chingleput that out of 22 lacs collected 4 are remitted and 3 outstanding, making 7 lacs out of 22—nearly a third. The taxes of people paying less than 50 rs. have not been collected, and there is no pressure being put upon the people, and every consideration is given in every case. There has been the utmost care and attention on the part of the collector, and no one who knows Mr. Tremeneere can accuse him of any harshness and severity in dealing with the people. In the North Arcot District there are two millions of people, and to get taxes in that district cattle have been sold in twenty cases—twenty cases out of two millions of people, which hardly shows that Government is exercising extraordinary severity in a period like this, so that as regards this particular charge it falls to the ground. I now turn to the rest of the information which Mr. Caine has drawn from a gentleman—he says a native gentleman who has the "most exceptional means of obtaining information from the country districts of the Presidency." As regards this all I say is either that this is absolutely untrue and that this native gentleman knows nothing of the country districts of the Presidency, or if he does know anything about them he has wilfully closed his eyes to the state of affairs and has sent Mr. Caine a report which bears upon its face the impress of falsehood. Now what does this gentleman who knows all about the country districts say? He says that there is no water to drink nor provisions for men. As regards water, there are eighteen thousand irrigation wells now in good order which are available for drinking purposes as well as wells devoted to that purpose, and Government has already advanced 2½ lacs for the construction of wells, and 840 have been completed. I should like to know how he manages to say that Government has done nothing in this part of the country. The supply of food grains in the districts is perfectly sufficient. In the Presidency I admit that the prices are high, but ragi, the principal food of the poorer classes, is cheaper than it was in the famine of 1877. The same remark applies also to Chingleput, so that as regards drinking water and provisions, which this gentleman alluded to, Government cannot be accused in any way of neglecting the interests of the people. Numerous works were also provided in January in Chingleput and in February in North Arcot, and new works have been and are freely sanctioned wherever a large demand for employment exists. Wherever kitchens have been recommended by the Commissioner, Mr. Clogstoun, they have been opened by Government, and after my first visit to Chingleput and North Arcot in March, kitchens have been opened where necessary. At the present moment 18,000 people are being employed on relief works, and 5,000 are being fed in kitchens, and the monthly cost to Government of these measures is about 80,000 rs. This native gentleman goes on to say that the Governor and Councillors are on the hills; but my presence here to-day shows that that is not absolutely true. He then goes on to say that the collectors are de facto the rulers of the district. The collectors are de facto the rulers of their districts; the collector is the responsible agent. But there is a flaw in this also, because we all know the constant and unremitting attention which has been paid to this distress by Mr. Clogstoun, who has been unremitting in his attention, and has kept the Government constantly informed as to the position of almost every village in this presidency; and yet this gentleman sits down in a chair in Madras and says the collectors are de facto the rulers of their districts, and there are none to suitly the state of things here and move Government to help the people! These officials have been unremitting and constant in their attentions, and yet this gentleman has had the effrontery to write as he has done, and I ask him to come forward and state where he got the information from, and not to shelter himself under the cloak thrown over him by Mr. Caine. I ask him how he dares to come forward with this unwarrantable statement against these hardworking officials. I do not know who I can accuse the most, but I feel the greater indignation against Mr. Caine. If he had ridden around North Arcot and Chingleput with me, his body would have been much reduced and his mind enlarged as to the facts of the situation. I may say that I do feel this, I feel it is wrong for a public man to sit down in England and write things like this of the Government at times of considerable anxiety, and to write a letter like this and publish it abroad to the English people, that we here in Madras are grossly neglecting our duty. I designate this at once as absolutely malicious and a downright falsehood. I am sorry I have been betrayed into any undue warmth, but naturally I feel warm about it. That because the Governor and his Councillors happen to be in the Western part of the Presidency instead of the Eastern, and that they thus cease to take any interest in the other parts of the Presidency is false. So long as I have any interest in the affairs of Madras I shall spare no pains to improve the condition of the people entrusted to my care, and there is nothing that I can possibly spare that will not be spared in meeting the reasonable wishes of the people of this country. I thank you very much for the manner in which you have listened to the remarks I have made. I think they are not in any way too strong, and that you will understand the position in which I have been placed by these scurrilous statements, and I hope you will agree with me in designating such statements as being absolutely and wickedly untrue. (Loud applause.)

The Madras Times, in a leading article headed "A Lying Spirit," alluding to Mr. Caine's recent assertion regarding famine in Madras, says:—"The falseness of these charges are so apparent to all out here that we do not propose to do further than endorse Lord Wenlock's speech in its entirety." And the Times then adds:—" 'Paget, M.P.,' and ex-M.P., is rapidly growing something worse than a nuisance. In his feverish desire to re-enter the Hall of Westminster, or in his anxiety to give fifth-rate conversations on the outskirts of Mayfair, he flings to the winds all sense of shame and all respect for truth, and to be proved a liar is only encouragement to him to utter grosser falsehoods than before. The harm that he does to his fellow-countrymen out here is nothing to him, if only he can catch the eye of the British public for a second. Unfortunately such men cannot be prosecuted for the seditious sentiments to which they undoubtedly give utterance, and it is well nigh as impossible to prevent them from speaking as it was for Balaam to prevent the quadruped which he bestrode on a memorable occasion. If such men really are so anxious for the welfare of India, why do they not come out here, and see with their own eyes what is taking place on the plains of India; but it would not suit their purpose to study the subject which they profess to have nearest their heart during a London season, for their names would not then figure in the pages of the Morning Post or the World, and if they indulged in such letters as Mr. Caine's recent one, the reply that they received might cause them to 'be reduced in body, if enlarged in mind.' And so they trust to a 'lying spirit,' hoping to be borne aloft, above the heads of their fellows, on its obscene wings."

THE HYDERABAD DIAMOND CASE.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLEMENT OF TWENTY-THREE LACS.

MR. WOODROFFE with Mr. Dunne (instructed by Mr. Buckland, of Messrs. Sanderson and Co.) applied to the Chief Presidency Magistrate at the Calcutta Police Court on Sept. 4, on behalf of the Nizam of Hyderabad, for a warrant for the arrest of Alexander Malcolm Geary Subonjee, alias Alexander Malcolm Jacob, under sections 406, 409, and 403, for criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust, as a merchant, in respect of 23 lacs of rupees, and also for a summons under section 94, to produce a certain valuable stone, and a search warrant under section 96. The complaint, Mr. Woodroffe said, was signed by Albert Abid, Chamberlain of his Highness the Nizam, and the circumstances of the case were as follows:—Jacob arranged with his Highness in March last to sell him a diamond, a model of which he showed his Highness. It was an Imperial diamond, and the price was fixed at 46 lacs of rupees. Jacob then told his Highness that unless he got an advance of 23 lacs of rupees, which was to be deposited in his name, he could not get the stone. If the diamond was not approved, the 23 lacs of rupees would be returned. After this Jacob, acting in the first instance through a Mr. Tremearne, arranged that the diamond should be sent out from London by Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co., jewellers, through their agents, Messrs. Kilburn and Co. A sum of 2,200*l.*, including insurance, as security against all risk, was to be deposited, and if the sale of the diamond was not completed before July 31 this amount was to be forfeited and the diamond returned to the owners at London. It was arranged that the diamond should come out by the first steamer in June, and on May 24 Jacob wrote to Mr. Abid, who was present when the arrangements were made with his Highness for the purchase of the diamond, that he had to deposit with Messrs. Kilburn and Co. a sum of 50,000 rs. before he could receive the stone, and he must have half the amount of the stone, 23 lacs of rupees, as agreed upon, before he could take the stone down to his Highness. If his Highness approved of the stone he could pay the other half, and if he did not approve of it the diamond would go back to the owner, and his Highness would get back the 23 lacs of rupees. Subsequently Jacob sent a telegram to Mr. Abid, saying that the diamond had arrived for his Highness, and to ascertain whether the 23 lacs of rupees had been deposited in the bank at Hyderabad or Calcutta, as he must have the money, or forfeit the 50,000 rs. deposited by him with Messrs. Kilburn and Co. His Highness listened to the solicitations of Jacob, and gave him credit for 23 rs. lacs, which was deposited in his name in the bank. On July 10 Jacob drew out 22,50,000 rs. from the bank, which he paid to Messrs. Kilburn and Co., and got possession of the diamond, which was valued by Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co. at 150,000*l.* Jacob got possession of the stone, together with the 50,000 rs. which he had placed in deposit with Messrs. Kilburn and Co. He also drew out the balance, 50,000 rs., from the bank. Jacob then went to Hyderabad with the stone, and asked Mr. Abid if he had the model in his possession. He explained to him that the stone was not the same as the model, but was smaller, and suggested that he would change the model, which, however, was with his Highness. Jacob was ushered into the presence of his Highness, to whom he showed the stone, which was rejected. Jacob was put out considerably by the transaction not being concluded, and at a subsequent interview with Mr. Abid, said he had been put to great expense, which he hoped would be paid to him. This was conveyed to his Highness, who said he had nothing to do with that, the arrangement being pussund or no pussund. Jacob had purchased with the 50,000 rs. balance of the 23 lacs deposited in the bank, and the 50,000 rs. deposited with Messrs. Kilburn and Co., a large quantity of jewellery from Messrs. Hamilton and Co.'s toshakhannah sale, which he asked his Highness to purchase, but which offer was declined. In fact, Jacob had used the Nizam's money for the purchase of the jewellery, and in obtaining possession of the diamond, which he retained and had by him. On July 21 Jacob wired to Messrs. Kilburn and Co. that the diamond was rejected, as there had been some foul play. Messrs. Kilburn accordingly wired to Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co., London, that the diamond was returned, by which Jacob would lose the security of 2,200*l.* Jacob then sent another telegram to Messrs. Kilburn and Co., asking them to "secure draft, if favourable; Nizam cut me six lacs," implying that he had sold the diamond for 40 lacs. Jacob, however, kept possession of the diamond, which he took away with him from Hyderabad, but he did not return the 23 lacs nor the 50,000 rs. given to him for a deposit to Messrs. Kilburn and Co. These monies were, counsel said, entrusted to Jacob, under express conditions from his Highness the Nizam, and he had committed criminal misappropriation of this sum and also criminal breach of trust as a merchant and agent. Jacob says now the Nizam had purchased the diamond for 40 lacs, and he would give it to his Highness if he gets all his expenses. A summons, Mr. Woodroffe said, was also required for Jacob to produce the diamond and also a search warrant. The diamond which Jacob took to his Highness was not the same as the model, nor was it such a diamond, counsel said, as anyone in their senses would pay 40 lacs for. In reply to the court, Mr. Woodroffe said that Jacob was now at Simla, but the offence was committed here.

Albert Abid, the Chamberlain of his Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad, said:—I have been sent here by him in this matter, to lay this complaint against Mr. Jacob. I have known Jacob for three years. I saw him in January this year at Bombay, at Watson's Hotel. I had a conversation with him there. He said there was a diamond which he had spoken to his Highness about, and he had a model of it, which he would show me if I liked. He asked me to go with him to David Sassoon's, and he would show me the model of the diamond. He took me to Sassoon's, but said the model had been taken away by someone. We returned to the hotel, and I did not see him again till at Hyderabad four months after. I saw him in the Lingumphulli Gardens at Hyderabad. His Highness the Nizam was seated in a room upstairs. Jacob had an interview with his Highness, and showed him the model of a diamond, which he asked His Highness to buy. He said formerly the price of it was 1 crore and 20 lacs, but it was now being offered very cheap. His Highness asked what the price was, and Jacob replied 50 lacs. His Highness said it was too much, and Jacob said he would have to bear a lot of expenses, but he would take 46 lacs, the diamond to be returned if not approved of. His Highness agreed saying "pussund or no pussund." Jacob then sold 5 lacs' worth of jewellery to his Highness. Jacob asked me to get an advance of 50,000 rs., to get the diamond. He told his Highness that they would not trust him with the diamond, but if his Highness would deposit in his name 23 lacs in the bank, he would deposit that amount with the owners, and obtain possession of the diamond, to show him. His Highness replied: "Very well, I will deposit the money accordingly." Jacob then said if his Highness should approve of the diamond, the other 23 lacs would be paid to him. If his Highness did not approve of the diamond, it would be sent back to England, and his Highness would get back the 23 lacs deposited by him. His Highness replied very well, but told Jacob to remember that the agreement was pussund or no pussund. Jacob then went away. Witness deposed to letters and telegrams that had passed between him and Jacob.

Mr. W. H. Cheetham, of Messrs. Kilburn and Co., was also examined. He said he had some business with Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co. regarding a diamond known as the "Imperial Diamond." In the first instance the arrangements were made with Mr. Shirley Tremearne. Jacob came on the scene later. Previous to the deposit of 50,000 rs. he had communication with Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co. and Mr. Tremearne. Jacob was to deposit 50,000 rs. to secure the return of the diamond. He had the option to return the diamond up to July 31. In the event of the diamond being returned, Jacob was to forfeit 2,200*l.* to cover insurance and other risks. The price of the diamond at London was 150,000*l.* The diamond was to be sent out by the first mail in June. The diamond arrived on June 26. He saw Mr. Jacob on July 10 at his office, and they went to the Bank of Bengal. Jacob handed over 22,50,000 rs., and the diamond was handed to him. On July 10 witness understood from Jacob that 23 lacs had been deposited by the Nizam, and transferred to the Bank of Bengal here in Jacob's name. He understood that Jacob was to take the diamond to Hyderabad, and submit it to the Nizam for inspection for an intended sale. The 50,000 rs. deposited with the firm was returned to Jacob by cheque. Witness believed that on the same day Jacob drew out from the Bank of Bengal the balance of the 23 lacs. He handed the diamond to Jacob on receiving 22,50,000 rs. transferred to the credit of the firm. Witness also gave evidence in regard to the telegrams received from Jacob, and those sent by his firm in connection with the diamond.

Some formal evidence was tendered, and Mr. Woodroffe submitted that there was now sufficient on record for the issue of the process asked.

His Worship observed that this was a very serious matter, and it was a non-bailable offence. If arrested, Jacob would have to be brought down to Calcutta in custody.

Mr. Woodroffe replied that the man could apply to the High Court for bail.

His Worship said Mr. Cheetham's evidence showed that the purchase was at first cancelled by Jacob, who afterwards said the Nizam had offered him 6 lacs less than agreed upon.

Mr. Woodroffe replied that this was false on the face of it, as Jacob had left Hyderabad after the diamond was rejected, and he had no other interview with the Nizam after the first one. He had taken the diamond away, and if purchased, the Nizam would not have let it go.

His Worship thought there was no concealment.

Mr. Woodroffe said that an enormous sum of money was in question, and Jacob's statement and telegrams to Mr. Cheetham did not agree with a long telegram he had sent to Mr. Abid. It was a fraud from beginning to end, and for the ends of justice a warrant should be issued. There was the fact that Jacob had spent the Nizam's money in purchases at Hamilton's sales before even he had seen the Nizam.

After some further argument his Worship directed the issue of a warrant against Jacob, and a subpoena to produce the diamond. A search warrant was also granted to search the house and office of Jacob for the diamond and documents connected with the matter, as also to produce the diamond if with the bank, and also to produce books and documents relating to the bank's transactions with Jacob and in connection with the diamond.

From further particulars of the case it appears that Mr. Jacob arranged with Messrs. Kilburn and Co., Agents for Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co., jewellers, to get the brilliant out after paying them a deposit of 2,200. On July 21 Mr. Jacob telegraphed to Messrs. Kilburn and Co. that the diamond had been rejected owing to foul play, and left Hyderabad. On July 22 Messrs. Kilburn and Co. telegraphed to Messrs. Pittar, Leveson, and Co. that the stone called the Imperial had been rejected, and received a wire from them to return it uninsured. This rendered Mr. Jacob liable to forfeit the 2,200. It appears then that Mr. Jacob on his way down wired Messrs. Kilburn and Co. that the sale had gone through and to arrange for a remittance home of the purchase money, and on arrival in Calcutta he confirmed this, giving Messrs. Kilburn and Co. to understand that the Nizam had subsequently accepted the stone for 40 lacs of rupees. On his instructions Kilburn wired the remittance home, and Jacob thus parted with his dominion over the money entrusted to him, and, as between the home owners and himself, became the owner of the diamond. Meanwhile, however, in pursuance of his subsequent intention of alleging that Mr. Abid, on behalf of the Nizam, had agreed to give him 40 lacs for the stone, he had sent Mr. Abid a wire, which resulted in a reply to him stating in unmistakable terms that the money must be refunded at once. This telegram was received by him on the morning of July 20, and it was in the face of this that he instructed Messrs. Kilburn and Co. to remit the purchase money home out of the 23 lacs deposited by his Highness the Nizam. The remittance home, owing to an improvement in exchange, left a surplus out of the Nizam's money of 1 lac and 70,000 odd rupees, and this sum Mr. Jacob received from Messrs. Kilburn and Co., and has never refunded it or accounted for it to the Nizam.

At Calcutta, on Sept. 9, Mr. T. Apar appeared before Mr. Handley, chief Presidency magistrate, and surrendered Mr. A. M. Jacob on the warrant which had been issued. Mr. Apar explained that Mr. Jacob immediately on hearing of the issue of the process left Simla with the Imperial diamond in his possession, which he deposited in a sealed packet in the Bank of Bengal. Counsel applied for the release of his client on bail, and also for withdrawal of the search warrant which had been granted and under which his house at Simla had been sealed. The magistrate refused both applications. An hour later an application for bail was renewed at the High Court before Justices Beverley and Ameer Ali, Mr. Apar arguing that the Court had full power to admit Mr. Jacob to bail. Mr. Woodroffe opposed the application on the ground that the Court had no power under Section 498 of the Criminal Procedure Code to interfere with the discretion of the magistrate in refusing bail, as the High Court could only interfere when commitment by the Lower Court had been made. Their lordships held that they had full power to admit the accused to bail at any stage of the proceedings, but thought that a sufficiently strong case had not been made out on the present occasion to interfere with the discretion of the magistrate, who had refused bail. Their lordships added that the accused could at any future stage of the proceedings apply to the magistrate to be released on bail.

It is believed that the present is only one phase of the case.

Although not among the largest of known diamonds, the Imperial, which is at present the subject of litigation, is by repute a gem of the first water. It was once the property of the ex-Emperor of Brazil, and an attempt, which unfortunately fell through, was made to present it to her Majesty the Queen-Empress on the occasion of her Jubilee. The stone is said to be elongated in shape, and perfectly pure and white, and to weigh 180 carats. The Koh-i-Noor weighs 106, the Pitt 136, the legendary Great Mogul 279, the Nizam 340, and the Matan 367 carats. The weight of the Braganza, popularly regarded as the largest diamond of which there is any record, is open to considerable doubt. Several diamonds from 200 to 300 carats have recently been discovered in South Africa.

PARSEES IN ENGLAND.

A CORRESPONDENT sends to a contemporary an account of the celebration the other day of the Zoroastrian New Year's Day by Parsee residents in England. In response to invitations issued by Mr. Dadhabhoi Naoroji, Mr. M. M. Bhownagree, C.I.E., and Dr. S. A. Kapadia, some thirty-five Parsees, ladies and gentlemen, assembled at Paddington and travelled to Taplow in a large saloon carriage kindly placed at their disposal by the railway company. At Taplow, during the recreations which preceded luncheon, a member of the party photographed the group. At luncheon the principal dish was "sev," without which no Parsee's New Year's banquet is considered complete. This was prepared under the personal supervision and direction of a Parsee lady, Mrs. Tarachund. The company afterwards went as far as Marlow in two electric launches, and, returning at about 7 P.M., dined at Skindie's Hotel. Mr. Dadhabhoi Naoroji presided.

The toast of "Her Majesty the Queen-Empress" was pledged in champagne, and, the whole assembly rising, sang the Gujarati version of "God Save the Queen." "The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family" was not less enthusiastically received, the assembly joining in singing "God Bless the Prince of Wales."

Mr. M. M. Bhownagree, C.I.E., then gave the toast of "The Viceroy of India and the Governor of Bombay," the Presidency in which he said Parsees most do congregate. He acknowledged that under the government of Great Britain in India the Parsees had experienced an amount of prosperity and progress such as they had never known under any other rule. Regardless of party considerations, the Parsees were bound in loyal attachment to those eminent statesmen who had filled the high posts of Viceroy and Governor of Bombay, and whether they were Liberals or Conservatives had shown most zealous solicitude for their welfare. The speaker read, amid loud applause, a long letter addressed to the chairman by Sir George Birdwood, who expressed great satisfaction at the public celebration of the Zoroastrian New Year's Day in London as marking a step towards the national unity and religious fervour of the race.

Dr. K. N. Bahadurji next proposed "Our English Friends," selecting for particular mention, among others, the names of Lord Northbrook, Lord Ripon, Lord Reay, and Sir George Birdwood. Mr. Framji B. Cama proposed "Prosperity to the Parsee Community"; and Dr. S. A. Kapadia, replying, observed that the Parsees were proud to be bound in devotion and friendship to the English. Other toasts included "The Ladies," "The Press," and "The Chairman"; the speakers being Dr. S. C. Hormasji, Mr. B. R. Bomonji, Mr. M. P. Modi, Mr. N. R. Chichgur, Mr. D. R. Colah in giving, and the Chairman in reply. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Dr. S. A. Kapadia for organising the entertainment of the day.

PORTUGAL AND OUR INDIAN RECORDS.

REFERRING to the fact that the British Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon has succeeded in obtaining the necessary authorisation for making a search among the archives of Portugal with a view to discovering whatever may help to throw a light upon the early history of the English in India, particularly about the time of the formation of the East India Company, the Morning Post says:—

Mr. Danvers, the registrar and keeper of the records in the India Office, has been appointed by the Secretary of State to undertake this duty, and it is said that every facility will be offered to him by the Portuguese Government, so that a rich harvest of result may with some confidence be looked for. There is no place where we should so naturally seek to supplement our own Indian records as at Lisbon. Even if we accept the very unreliable narrative of Sir John Mandeville, or the still older story of the monk whom Alfred is said to have sent from Sherborne to the shrine of St. Thomas, the fact would still remain that the Portuguese were the first European nation which established anything like a permanent connection with India. Stephens, who may be regarded as the earliest of the English gentlemen adventurers, found the subjects of Dom Sebastian in full possession of their Indian Empire, and carrying on extensive trade relations with the Native States. The Kings of Portugal were never, indeed, able to justify their high-sounding title of "Lord of the Navigation, Conquests, and Trade of Ethiopia, Arabia, Persia, and India," but they enjoyed what almost amounted to a monopoly of Oriental commerce during the greater part of the sixteenth century, when "from Japan and the Indian Archipelago to the Red Sea and Cape of Good Hope they were sole masters and dispensers of the riches and treasures of the East." Their empire was a real one, supported by the fleets and armies of the Kingdom at home, and administered by royal officials, whose reports and correspondence are still extant. English enterprise in India was, on the other hand, confined to private individuals, and the patronage of the Government was extended no farther than the granting of charters of incorporation to successive trading companies. But our earliest rivalry with Portugal in the East was of a decidedly casual and informal kind, and its history is correspondingly obscure. Thus we know that in 1583 Fitch and Newbery attempted to "shake the pagoda tree" upon their own account, and were promptly thrown into prison at Ormuz, but information upon the point is extremely scanty, and it would be both curious and valuable to be in possession of the Portuguese narrative of the transaction. Similarly it would be interesting to know if there is anything to be learned from the Portuguese records of the disastrous expeditions of Raymond and Wood, of Drake's high-handed seizure of the carrack from Goa the year before the Armada, or of the similar capture in 1592, which really led to the formation of the East India Company. The records of the Company have been exploited to good purpose by Sir George Birdwood, but they are unfortunately very far from complete. The earlier marine records are lost, and thus the particulars of the first voyages of the Company are left to be imperfectly gleaned from the researches of Purchas and Hakluyt. It may be hoped, however, that the muniment-rooms of the Colonial Office at Lisbon will be able in some degree to supply this deficiency, and to furnish us with some particulars of the pioneer journeyings of Keelinge and Lancaster and Middleton, and, above all, of that famous victory at Swally which consolidated the establishment of the English factory at Surat, and really laid the foundation of our Indian Empire.

THE INDIAN FACTORY QUESTION.

THE Pioneer has a good leader on this subject. It says:—

Mr. Holt Hallett deals with the subject at great length before one of the sections of the great Hygienic Congress, and Sir William Hunter, writing in advance one of his articles in the Times on Indian affairs, bespeaks respectful attention for Mr. Hallett as a man who had given serious study to the state of things which he reprobates, and has clear ideas as to the changes he desires to bring about. Perhaps the careless reader of Sir William Hunter's remarks might erroneously imagine that the Times Indian specialist is backing up Mr. Hallett in all his views. The question, he says, is one for experts; for men who have carefully studied the factory system, and therefore Mr. Hallett is to be congratulated on his intention to bring the matter before the Hygienic Congress, as a course much better adapted to the emergency than that taken at the last sitting of the House of Commons by members not altogether free from the suspicion of being self-interested. In reference to this, we may note in passing that an Indian mill-manager writes to the Times with a view of dissipating some of Mr. Provand's inaccuracies. First, as regards the days of rest, he points out that Mr. Provand omits to calculate for the native holidays, which add a very important number to the fifty-two Sundays of which he alone takes account. Then in an Indian mill during any hour of the day any man, woman, or child can leave his or her machine for purposes which generally include a smoke and a quiet chat with friends. Such absences are only limited by the rule that not more than 25 per cent. of the workpeople can be out at the same time; but as the hands take full advantage of this arrangement, it follows that one-fourth of each worker's time is lost to the master. In the mill-manager's opinion, if they are really anxious to prevent a grievous wrong being done to a subject-nation, English members of Parliament should not only refrain from tampering with Indian factory laws, but should even repeal the Act lately passed.

If this view may be tinged with partisanship, it is to be deplored, on the other hand, that Mr. Holt Hallett allows himself to stimulate unfounded suspicions on the part of English philanthropists by declaring, as he does in his paper read before the Hygienic Congress on Thursday, the 13th ult., that the Government of India denies due protection to the working-classes in this country, and that its Legislative Council is dominated by the capitalist interest. Capitalists, he says, form part and parcel of it; the working-classes are not represented, and a deaf ear is therefore turned to their claims and entreaties for protection. This assertion is in such monstrous and impudent defiance of the real state of the facts, that it ought to put all readers of Mr. Hallett's paper on their guard against its statements of detail. To suppose that the Government of India is neglectful of any interests which are not "represented" in the technical European sense on its councils, is to misunderstand its whole character to an extent which involves something like an absurd disregard of its records. Just because no class or interest is represented upon it at all, and because it is an abstract official organisation designed to work out the great principle that the Government of this country under English influence is to be carried out for this country's good, it may fairly be argued that in truth the interests of Indian helplessness in every shape and form are represented upon it before all others. Assuredly the Government of India may make mistakes in endeavouring to carry out its lofty theory, but nothing is more certain than that the lofty theory is really operative in its councils, and that whatever mistakes it may make in dealing with the infinite complexities of Indian administration, no other governing body that could possibly handle these problems, would fail to make mistakes of a very much more serious character.

Coming to the details of Mr. Hallett's paper we find him beginning with the assertion that the last census classed one-twelfth of the population of India as workers in various materials, eight millions being distinguished as females, and thirteen millions as males. Having thrown this great idea to the audience, he leaves them to infer that the "one-twelfth" is the fraction of the population affected by factory legislation, and that this enormous body of persons is at present subject to the tyranny of a factory system almost uncontrolled by such regulations as European experience has shown to be necessary. Protective legislation, he says, is refused to the great bulk of the working classes. Barely 50,000 women and children are brought within the scope of the recent Factory Act. Without stopping to quarrel with Mr. Hallett's figures, should it not be obvious, even to newspaper readers at home, that this is because the enormous majority of the workers in various materials are carrying on their industry in accordance with the old customs of their country, and have nothing whatever to do with the factories which have grown up under the European régime? In India, says Mr. Hallett, where the patience and endurance of the people surpass imagination, the "sweater" is master of the situation, and protective legislation is refused to the great bulk of the working classes. It is almost as ludicrous as it is exasperating to find such a picture of Indian productive industry presented to English opinion as the outcome of special industry applied to the study of the subject, and "expert" knowledge such as that assigned by Sir William Hunter to Mr. Holt Hallett. Imagine the Indian Government attempting to send its agents into the Benares bazaars to regulate the hours of work and terms of employment to be permitted for the patient artists who sit there engraving their brass work. Imagine the much-burdened industries of Oude subject to the disastrous pressure of an inspection which should reach the whole of the people, and cross-question every family in reference to the hours that it spent on labour. In one breath English philanthropists enjoin the Government of India to respect the tastes and tendencies and habits of the people it rules and also advise it to outrage these habits in the most dangerous way possible—by an interference, that is to say, with their private occupations, which no possible agency it could construct would be qualified to undertake.

By resenting Mr. Hallett's interference, of course we do not mean to imply that even in India the growth of great organised manufactures should be left to run entirely wild, and be free from the careful supervision of Government. But it ought to be readily intelligible, even in England, that we have a far more delicate problem to handle in such matters here than that which gives quite sufficient trouble to English philanthropists at home. We have to take care that in a terribly crowded population, living for the most part on the resources of the soil, and multiplying down to the lowest limit of subsistence, an altogether new development of industry should not be crippled and destroyed by a course of legislative discipline only adapted to the mature and vigorous growth of similar industries carried on in the strong civilised communities mainly devoted to manufacturing pursuits. The future welfare of India, in so far as that has to do with its material prosperity, is dependent very largely on the extent to which the application of Western capital here may develop and encourage manufacturing pursuits, not only of the kind already planted amongst us, but in the future of many other kinds as well. It would only be at the dictation of an extremely misguided zeal for philanthropic ideas of a very narrow range, that those who are responsible for guiding the economical development of India could recklessly imperil the expansion of the growth that has now set in. The steps that have actually been taken by the Indian Government in the direction of bringing European ideas to bear upon factory organisation, have already been pressed to the utmost limits of prudence. It may be that for some time to come a very close examination into the conditions of labour in Indian factories will bring much to light that may offend humane sentiment, but most assuredly an equally close examination into any other department of Indian life would have the same effect, and it is quite beyond the power of legislation, whether carried out by the authorities of this country or at the dictation of ignorant impulses in England, to neutralise with one blow the painful conditions under which the vast population of this great country carries on its struggle for life.

The Reorganisation of the Indian Forest Department.—

A telegram from the Secretary of State sanctions the scheme for the reorganisation of the Indian Forest Service. The scheme places the following officers serving in the Bengal Presidency, besides the inspectors-general, on a general list:—All conservators, the assistant inspector-general, officers attached to the Forest School, those deputed to native States or the Colonies. It converts the following posts into special staff appointments, to be held at the pleasure of the Government of India:—Assistant inspector-general, deputy director, Forest School, all officers serving in native States or the Colonies. These officers will draw the salary to which they are entitled on their respective lists in addition to the local allowances already sanctioned. They will, however, be seconded on their lists, and will not interfere with local promotions, whether permanent or officiating. The Government of India has a free hand in selecting and deputing officers to special duty, and retains the following permanent appointments:—Thirteen conservators on the Imperial List, costing 210 rs., 600 rs., and 110 rs.; deputy and assistant conservators on provincial lists, costing 757 rs. and 200 rs. The extra outlay involved by the new scheme is trivial.

Rain Percentages, &c.—A Simla telegram of Sept. 4 says:—During the week rain has fallen in all divisions of India, though in Sind and part of the Punjab and of Madras the total fall has been small. Seventeen out of forty-nine divisions have had more, and thirty-two less, than the normal fall during the week. The regions in which there was excessive rain were Orissa, the greater part of the North-West and Central Provinces and of the Punjab, and Guzerat, Central India and Ganjam; while the regions of deficient rainfall were roughly Burma, Assam, Bengal, and the Peninsula. The total rainfall of the week was heavier in parts of the North-West Provinces than in any other part of India. Thus 9½ inches were reported from the Hardoi district, 18½ from Cawnpore, 16½ from Farukhabad, 10 from Muttra, 14 from Bareilly, 12 from Moradabad, and 11 from Badaun. The percentages of rainfall for the whole of India show the same condition as was shown last week, i.e. for the monsoon period from June 1 to Aug. 29, 80 per cent. of the normal amount of rainfall has been received. The regions where the fall up to date equals or exceeds the normal include the Burma divisions, the Central Punjab, South Central Madras, Bombay and the Deccan. All the other divisions have received less than the normal, but excepting Sind, which has received only 18 per cent., the Madras divisions with about 40 per cent., the Western Punjab with 50 per cent., and Rajputana and the South Punjab with about 60 per cent. of the normal, the deficiencies are generally small.

The season and crop report for the week ending the 2nd instant states that in the Punjab rain has fallen in all but two districts. Cattle are in good condition everywhere, except in Hissar. The water-supply is generally sufficient. The crops are in fair condition and flourishing. Fodder is scarce in Delhi and Lahore, and locusts have caused some damage in Lahore and deposited their eggs at Dera Ismail Khan, where measures are being taken for their destruction.

In Rajputana agricultural operations are progressing, and are satisfactory generally, except at Ajmere, Jeypore, and Kishengarh. Standing crops are withering at Ajmere, and poor in five States for want of rain. Prices are steady but high at Ajmere and Jeypore. About 3,469 persons are still on relief works.

In Upper Burma, owing to general rainfall, ploughing and sowing have recommenced. Standing crops which have withstood the drought have improved. Special advances have been made to cultivators for the purchase of seed, and to keep their plough cattle. The opening of relief works in Yamethin and Meiktila has provided work and food for all needing relief, and considerable numbers are now engaged.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Sir James Hanbury.—Sir James Hanbury, K.C.B., the principal medical officer, Her Majesty's Forces of the Madras Army, who completes his tenure of appointment on Jan. 13, 1892, on which date he will attain his three score years, proceeds on furlough to Europe early next month, prior to his retirement from the service, in which he will have then spent thirty-eight years of his life. His first commission, as assistant surgeon, dates Sept. 30, 1853; surgeon, Feb. 20, 1863; surgeon-major, March 1, 1873; brigade-surgeon, Nov. 27, 1879; deputy surgeon-general, May 5, 1881; surgeon-general, June 14, 1887; and was appointed to the position he now holds on March 10, 1888—so that he has been the principal medical officer of the Madras Army for nearly three and half years, and during this period he has succeeded in maintaining the efficiency of the Medical Department, of which he is the head. During his tours of inspections of hospitals, &c., nothing escaped his keen attention, and his earnest desire has always been to provide for the comforts of the soldier medically. His war services according to the Army List are:—Afghan War, 1878-9-80. Bazar Valley Expedition; the memorable march from Cabul to the relief of Candahar, and battle of Sept. 1. Despatches, London Gazette, Nov. 7, 1879, and Dec. 3, 1880, medal with clasp, bronze star, C.B. Egyptian Expedition, 1882; battle of Tel-el-Keber. Despatches, London Gazette, Oct. 6, and Nov. 2, 1882. Medal with clasp, bronze star, 2nd class Medjidieh, and K.C.B.

The MacGregor Memorial Medals.—The conditions under which the MacGregor Memorial Medals are to be given will be as follows:—Medals in silver will be awarded yearly by the Council of the United Service Institution of India to a British officer and to a soldier, British or native, belonging to the army in this country who have during the year rendered conspicuous service in reconnaissance and exploration. In the case of a soldier a money gratuity will always be added. A gold medal will be given occasionally to any officer who has won special distinction as reconnoiterer and explorer. Colonel Mark Bell, V.C., Captain F. G. Younghusband, and Major H. A. Sawyer, have already received the medal, and in years to come it will doubtless be a prize to which officers of this stamp will aspire.

The Indian Marine.—The new scheme for providing for the naval defence of India, which has recommended itself to the approval of the Admiralty authorities, does not give satisfaction in less exalted naval circles, apparently. A Home correspondent reports that various objections are taken, the majority of which appear to rest upon jealousy or distrust of the Indian Marine officers. Among other points of criticism, it is contended that the Indian Marine being purely a trooping and harbour service, it is a mistake to make it a fighting one. But this objection, asserts the Indian Daily News, supplies no reason why Indian Marine officers may not be made, by proper training, efficient combative officers. That they are capable of good work has been proved on more than one occasion. With special instruction in modern gunnery and other technical matters, the Indian marine officers should prove fully capable of discharging the duties that will be required of them in connection with the working of gunboats and torpedo boats for coast defence purposes. Some Indian Marine men have already been sent home to be put through gunnery and torpedo course. The naval critics might at least await the results of this step before ventilating their somewhat ungracious objections. The fact is, we are afraid, there never has been much love lost between the Naval officers and the Indian Marine officers where they have been brought into contact.

Garrison Artillery for India.—The home authorities agreed that in working of heavy guns at Aden and the fortified ports of India European gunners should be employed, Lascars being trained for manual work under their direction. This necessarily will involve an increase in the number of garrison artillerymen in India, and some 800 of these will be sent out in due course. The strength of each battery at the various ports will be increased by fifty or sixty men, so that the unit will be larger than at present obtains. Special officers are also to be appointed under a recent general order, who will be skilled in range-finding and fully acquainted with short defences.

The Camp at Kurrachee will only be pitched for the months of December and part of January; that is, while the three troopers allotted to Kurrachee are running. It is estimated that Government will save about a lac and a half in railway fares by using the Kurrachee route. On the other hand, however, the Kurrachee Camp with the three rest-camps, which will have to be pitched between it and Lahore, will mean an outlay of about two lacs, working on the most economical lines. In fact, the Kurrachee Camp is to be merely a rough rest-camp pitched for six weeks or so without any of the permanent arrangements of a standing camp. It is believed that the Kurrachee scheme is rather an experiment with the object of establishing a means of throwing troops rapidly on to the North-West frontier in case of an emergency more than anything else. It is certain at least that it will financially be rather a loss than a gain to the State.

The Pioneer regiment and two companies of Sappers, to be employed in making a road from Nichugard to Manipore, will probably be taken from the Madras Presidency.

The statement that the Rawul Pindi defence works are expected to be taken in hand shortly is scarcely accurate, the Times of India says. No orders have yet been issued on the matter, and consequently no engineer has been appointed to carry out the work.

The Statesman regrets to hear from Darjeeling that the health of Lord Frankfort, commanding the Presidency Division, has not improved by his visit to that sanitarium. The weather has been very unfavourable to his recovery from the fever from which he is suffering. Darjeeling has had a good deal more than its usual quantity of rain lately, and every one is longing for a break in the weather.

A proposal is now before the Government of India to send a wing of the 13th Native Infantry from Dinapore to Shillong to relieve the 36th Sikhs. It is not improbable that the garrison of Dinapore may be permanently reduced. There is an idea of building barracks at Darjeeling for a wing of a British infantry regiment, and when this has been carried out half a battalion will be withdrawn from Dinapore.

The Governor-General in Council has been pleased to sanction military officers serving in Burma being allowed to present themselves for examination in the following Border languages:—Group I.—The Tashou, Baungshé, Chinbök, Chimmé, and Siyin dialects of the Chin language. II.—The Chin language as spoken on the borders of the Arakan Hill tracts, or of the Akyab, Thayetmyo, Henzade, Kyaikpyu, or Sandoway district. III.—The Kami, Taungsa, Yaklaing, Bokyi, and Sebaung languages. IV.—The Chinpaw dialect of the Kachin language. V.—The Manipori language.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Hugh Gough has been admitted to the colonel's allowance.

General Brackenbury, during his cold weather tour, will take occasion to visit various depots of the Army Remount Department.

The command of the 1st batt. Leinster Regt., at Agra, which has become vacant by the retirement of Col. J. H. Campbell, will be given to Major A. S. Woods, of the 2nd batt., at Aldershot.

Major Dobie, R.A., ordnance officer, Bombay Arsenal, has been transferred to Allahabad.

Col. C. W. Babington, 12th Bengal Inf., has been granted one year's leave to England, on private affairs; and Lieut. R. E. Foley, 45th Sikhs, one year, on medical certificate.

Brig.-Surg. Harvey, who will shortly assume charge of the Punjab Frontier Force, has been gazetted to the rank of deputy surgeon-general.

Capt. Duff, 6th Bengal Inf., has been appointed deputy assistant adjutant-general at army headquarters, vice Major W. B. Wilson, who vacated his appointment on Sept. 7.

Col. Elphinstone Begbie, D.S.O., took over the duties of assistant adjutant-general at army headquarters, Ootacamund, from Col. Wratislaw on Sept. 9. Col. Begbie's duties will be confined to the Native Army.

Major Moss, 1st Worcestershire Regt., having resigned the acting appointment of paymaster, Deolali Depot, will probably be replaced by Capt. C. Sandes of the Army Pay Department, attached to the 1st Royal North Lancashire Fusiliers, as a temporary measure, and now at Deolali on sick leave.

Col. Pitcher, who was deputed last year from the North-West Provinces to Gwalior, for the purpose of organising the establishments of Patwaris and Kanungoes in that State, will probably officiate for Major Barr as Resident when that officer proceeds on privileged leave at the end of the current month.

BENGAL.

OUR advices from Calcutta are to Sept. 8.

The Calcutta Drainage System.—At a meeting of the Calcutta Corporation on Sept. 3, Mr. Kimber, the engineer, submitted his proposals for completing the drainage system of this city, and his remarks on Mr. Baldwin Latham's suggestions. The project recommends for the town area a combined system of disposing of sewage and drainage by the same conduit; but for the added area it proposes a separate system for conveying sewage by underground conduits, and the rainfall by surface drains. The total cost is estimated at over 170 lacs. Mr. Kimber dissents from some of the recommendations of Mr. Baldwin Latham, who was in Calcutta barely three weeks, and before the rains broke.

Bengal Gold Mines.—The liquidation proceedings of two of the Bengal gold mining companies form anything but pleasant reading, says the Times of India; nor are the details of how the concerns were floated calculated to increase our respect for the sagacity of Bengal. Mr. Justice Wilson, in the course of the Jut-put proceedings, went so far as to observe that it was impossible that any sane person who had read the articles of association should have taken shares with the intention of holding them. Mr. Hill, who applied on behalf of the shareholders for a winding-up order, stated that the articles of association of all the Bengal gold companies were drawn up in the same form, which can hardly be a pleasing prospect for holders. One Mr. Posner, it seems, purchased for 50,000 rs. the leases and mining rights of certain tracts of land in Chota Nagpore and sold them to the "company" for 2,00,000 rs. The capital of the company was to be 3,00,000 rs., and shares appear to have been greedily taken up. Receipts for the amounts paid for these shares were in all cases signed "Posner and Co.," on behalf of the "Jut-put Gold Syndicate," which, however, was never registered under the Companies' Act. "So far as the present petitioners are aware," said Mr. Hill, "Mr. Posner alone constituted the 'Jut-put Gold Syndicate,' and they say they believe that that was merely a temporary trading name of Mr. Posner." Moreover, the agreement with this gentleman especially protected him in his fiduciary position, and provided that he should not be held accountable for any profit made in the re-sale of the leases to the company. No gold, silver or other metallic substances appear to have been found on the company's land, and Mr. Posner has left for Europe. In the case of the Sonakhan Company, one Mr. Thomas Beard Cass entered into negotiations with the estate of a Mr. Borrodaile for the purchase of the Sonakhan estate for 1,75,000 rs. Mr. Cass had no funds to pay the purchase money, trusting to the sale of his right to a company to enable him to pay for the land to purchase and work which the company was to be formed. In due course the company was formed, and six lacs of rupees were received from the public for shares up to September of last year, when the lists closed. On Oct. 8 Mr. Cass paid Mr. Borrodaile the 1,25,000 rs. purchase-money, on the 10th he sold the rights thus acquired for 4,00,000 rs. (half in cash and half in shares), and on the 11th the company was registered with a capital of 8,00,000 rs. in one-rupee shares. The petitioning shareholder in this case alleges that the sale to the company was a fraud, and asks that the defendants shall be held liable in respect of some 4,00,000 rs. He alleged also that the defendants were seeking to effect the voluntary winding-up of the company. "their object being to escape, if possible, all investigation." Mr. Justice Wilson granted in this case leave to sue under sect. 30 C.P.C., but refused an injunction to restrain the voluntary winding-up. Thus the Jut-put, the Dhadka, the Baghmundi, and the Sonakhan are all in process of liquidation, and the gold seems to be as far off as ever. Nearly twelve months ago we foreshadowed the sequel to the mad rush for shares in the Bengal gold companies, and the event seems to have justified the prophecy in almost every particular.

Common Carriers in India.—The judgment in the case of White v. The India General Steam Navigation Company, Limited, decided in the Calcutta High Court, by Mr. Justice Hill, on Sept. 8, in favour of the plaintiffs, settles, in the negative, says Capital, the important question whether a common carrier in India can, under the Act of 1865, contract himself out of the liability which section 8 of the Act, following the common law of England, imposes on him for loss or damage to property delivered to him to be carried, arising from the negligence or criminal acts of himself or his servants. It further disposes, against the carrier, of the question—if after this ruling any question could be said to exist—whether the burden lies on the owner of the goods to show that there has been such negligence or criminality, or on the carrier to show that there has not. Though the law, as thus interpreted, may give rise, in practice, to some hard cases, there can be little doubt that it is just and in accordance with common sense. The opportunities which the owners of the goods possess for ascertaining the precise cause of the loss or damage are generally so slender that the right of action would be of very little use to them if they were required to prove that it was not accidental.

Assam.—Attention has recently been drawn to the decline of immigration of labourers into Assam. The Chief Commissioner having reported that the numbers had fallen from over 55,000 in 1889 to 36,000 in 1890, the conclusion has been somewhat too hastily formed in some quarters that the tea-gardens in Assam had suddenly acquired an exceptional unpopularity. Such a supposition, says the Pioneer, is in accordance neither with probability nor fact. The fall is merely a fall to a normal level. The exceptional circumstance was the rise to 55,000, not the fall to 36,000. The Chief Commissioner himself notes this, remarking that if we include children, the figures "closely approximate to what they were three years ago."

Excavation near the site of the old Black Hole, in Calcutta, has discovered an underground room or cell, but no bones or treasure as rumoured.

Native graduates of the highest distinction being now available for teacherships or professorships at smaller salaries than ten years ago, suggestions have been made to the Bengal Government to reduce the present liberal scale of salaries allowed to the officers of the Educational Department under it.

Forest administration in Bengal appears to have been fairly profitable last year. The net revenue for the twelve months ending March 31 last amounted to some four lacs, a slight decrease as compared with 1889, but nearly half a lac better than the average of the preceding five years. Owing to the spread of cultivation in the Sunderbunds there was a slight falling off in the area under charge of the department.

MADRAS.

OUR advices from Madras are to Sept. 9.

The Distress.—The Governor of Madras, on receiving an address at Palladam, said that the inquiries made in the districts showed that no signs of emaciation had been detected in any quarters, and that it was premature to speak of famine existing in the Coimbatore district. No doubt there was some distress, which was being sufficiently dealt with by the relief works and by the kitchens. There is some danger felt here, a Coimbatore telegram of Sept. 5 says, that the relief works will attract able-bodied coolies, who are quite able to find work if they are prepared to go as far for it as they often do in years in which no relief works have been opened. The people of Pollachi, in their address, stated that though the season had been unfavourable for two successive years, the authorities by adopting timely measures of relief, and by suspending the collections of land revenue, inspired them with the belief that no attention would be wanting on the part of the Government to take all possible precautions to divert the worst effects of the famine.

The Governor and the Commander-in-Chief returned to Ootacamund on Sept. 7. The Governor visited the distressed portions of Coimbatore. During the latter portion of his tour the Land Revenue Commissioner accompanied his Excellency. It is reported from Coimbatore that the impression produced was that the people there were not suffering to any great extent. A labour famine is, no doubt, existing in part, this being relieved by the works.

Lord Wenlock, in the course of his reply to the address presented to him by the Pollachi Union Punchayet, said that it was a matter for special gratification to him to receive an assurance that the Government officers were acting in the best interests of the people. "To me it is more gratifying to receive this from you living in this part of the country, because it is the best answer to the strictures that can possibly be made on the conduct of Government officers by certain people in the English Press. This is the most conclusive proof, if indeed proof is necessary, that these strictures are entirely and absolutely untrue."

The Madras Small Causes Court Bill.—The following amended resolutions were placed before the deferred public meeting at Madras, on Sept. 4, in re Small Causes Court Bill, and carried unanimously:—"That this meeting is of opinion that the proposed extension of jurisdiction of the Small Causes Court is undesirable and disapproves of it, and believes that it will be likely to impair the efficiency of that Court in its summary side." "That this meeting is of opinion that there do not exist a hardship and a practical denial of justice to a not insignificant portion of the inhabitants of this city under the present system of judicial administration in the Presidency town, but that a proper remedy should be sought in the creation of a new tribunal presided over by judges selected from the legal profession, and having regular jurisdiction to try suits with certain exceptions up to 2,500 rs. now tried by the High Court, and suits above 1,000 rs. now tried by Presidency Small Causes Court." "That, in the opinion of this meeting, under no circumstances should the executive Government be in any way empowered to alter the pecuniary or other jurisdiction of Courts administering justice in Madras." "That this meeting condemns the Bill as it stands." "That a memorial be addressed to the Governor-General in Council, and that the following gentlemen be invited to draw up the same:—Mr. Turnbull, the Hon. Bashyam Iyengar, Mr. Orr, Mr. Norton, Mr. Ananda Charlu, Mr. Morgan, and Mr. Kiarughava Charry."

Recoveries from the Sea.—Though the erosion of the sea at St. Thome may be a source of anxiety to holders of property on the beach there, says the Pioneer, yet to those interested in archaeological lore it promises to prove fruitful of results which may cast considerable light on the ancient history, religion, and architecture of the southern coastline of the Madras Presidency and of the cities which have been for centuries, as tradition asserts, submerged. Several pieces of sculpture have been washed up and lie buried in the sand along the coast. Five of these have been exhumed, and three of them represent fragments of quadrangular pillars, bearing on their faces Indian deities, carved in high relief in symbolical attitudes, and the two others are portions of cornices. Gold, silver, and copper coins have also been collected; but as they are all encrusted with rust it will be some time before they can be deciphered, and their era and mintage ascertained. Museum officials are busy excavating and removing these relics to the Museum. But would not a little dredging and diving result in "miraculous drafts that would delight the hearts of the many archaeological experts in which this Presidency abounds?"

The Madras-Bezwada Railway.—The Madras Mail is glad to be able to state that the proposal for the construction of the railway from Madras to Bezwada by the agency of the Madras Railway Company has received the approval of the Madras Government. "We understand that H.E. the Governor in Council is strongly in favour of the direct route from Madras to Nellore, including the conversion of the metre-gauge railway from Gudur to Nellore. His Excellency further considers that the line from Madras to Bezwada should be undertaken as soon as funds can be provided, and that its construction should be entrusted to the Madras Railway Company, who should also be given the working of the East Coast Railway from Bezwada to Cuttack. The Government of India is to be addressed accordingly."

The cultivation of the Yokohama and Hong-Kong bamboos is to be tried in various parts of the Madras Presidency, and arrangements have been made to import a large quantity of seed for the purpose.

Mr. Patrick Macfadyen and Mr. William Digby, the two trustees of the balance of the Indian Famine Fund of 1877-78, have authorised the third trustee, Archbishop Colgan, to release the money now with Messrs. Arbuthnot and Company, on certain conditions, to be expended in the relief of the existing distress in the Presidency. The Archbishop has referred the matter to Government for an expression of opinion.

BOMBAY.

OUR advices from Bombay are to Sept. 11.

The Proposed Lighting of Poona by Electricity.—The proposal to experiment with the electric light in certain parts of the Cantonment of Poona, though at first scouted as being much too expensive, still hangs fire, says the Times of India. Mr. E. O. Walker's latest proposal, together with a minute thereon by Major E. D. Newnham-Smith, the secretary to the Cantonment Committee, were submitted to Mr. Rienzi Walton, the executive engineer of the Bombay Municipality, who was asked to state his opinion thereon. Mr. Walton's letter in reply was placed before the members of the Poona Cantonment Committee at their meeting on Sept. 8, Major-General Blundell being in the chair. Mr. Rienzi Walton was of opinion that Mr. Walker's offer to the Cantonment Committee was a very advantageous one, for it offered to replace the 575 kerosine oil-lamps of 9½ candle-power each with electric lights of 16 candle-power each, the cost of lighting in each case being 1'02 r. per lamp per month. If the experiment is at all made in Poona the wires will have to be overhead and not underground. The whole question has now been referred to a sub-committee, consisting of Major H. W. Duperier, R.E., executive engineer; Mr. E. O. Walker, C.I.E., superintendent of telegraphs (who have given the Cantonment Committee much valuable assistance in drawing up a scheme, &c.), and Mr. Rajana Lingoo, pleader.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times writes yesterday (Sept. 27):—

A memorandum on food stocks in Upper and Lower Burma has been issued by the Financial Commissioner. It represents the situation as much more serious than any previous official report has indicated. It announces that the Government will not import any rice stocks. After pointing out how completely Upper Burma is depleted of food stocks, the Financial Commissioner discusses the causes of such depletion, and remarks that the question is whether supplies from Lower Burma can be depended on for the next three months, by which time the crops in Upper Burma, such as they are, will have been harvested and the new paddy from Lower Burma will have come in.

The Financial Commissioner gives it as his opinion that the supplies from Lower Burma will not suffice. The total stocks of rice in Rangoon are estimated at 70,000 tons, of which 20,000 tons are believed to be engaged for Europe. The city of Rangoon requires for its food supply 4,500 tons a month. Other districts in Lower Burma will need to be supplied from Rangoon, while for the next three months Upper Burma will require 20,000 tons monthly. The Financial Commissioner predicts that in October and November the price of rice, which is already very high, will rise rapidly and considerably, and recommends dealers in Upper Burma to secure without delay part of the stocks held in Rangoon.

In the concluding paragraph of his minute the Financial Commissioner says:—"I believe that at least one million out of three millions of people in Upper Burma have means of buying as much grain as they require; but, so far as I can see, the grain is not likely to be forthcoming." This apparently means that in Upper Burma there are two millions of people without means to purchase food, and that, even if they had means, no food will be available for them. If this opinion be correct, the quantity of food required for Upper Burma has certainly been greatly under-estimated.

The draft of the Financial Commissioner's minute was submitted before its publication to the leading millers and merchants, and was, it is understood, altered in certain portions at their suggestion. Under existing circumstances these gentlemen, who hold stocks, can hardly be regarded as unprejudiced judges on the question of prices.

The number of men employed on relief works in Upper Burma is steadily augmenting. In Sagaing it has increased by 9,000 during the week.

The Wuntho country is troubled by the ex-Tsawbwa's bands. Four serious dacoities have been committed near Mansi. One dacoit band was attacked by the Karen military police, who wounded three men and captured some stolen property and ammunition.

Mr. Adam, the mining engineer from Singapore, who was recently employed by the Government to make surveys in the Mergui district, reports having discovered deposits of tin ore of enormous value at Khaw Morang, near Maliwun. Unsuccessful attempts were made a few years ago by European capitalists to extract tin in paying quantities at Maliwun, very near the locality where Mr. Adam declares that deposits of extraordinary value exist.—Our Correspondent, by Indo-European Telegraph.

A Reuter telegram from Rangoon, dated Sept. 26, says:—It is rumoured that the Tsawbwa of Wuntho is collecting large bands of followers in different parts of the district with the intention of attacking that locality. The people are alarmed. Grave fears are entertained as to the possibility of holding the position by means of the existing garrison of Madras troops, and reinforcements have, therefore, been applied for.

A CORRESPONDENT WRITES from Bassein:—Last month Mr. Thomson, Superintendent of Excise here, was shot by the Assistant Excise officer, Maung Shwe Hla, when on his way to Waidoung. It is said that the latter being angered at a reprimand he received, took up Mr. Thomson's gun, which was loaded, and fired at him, wounding him in the right hand and the face. The Rev. Father Kern and the agent of the I. F. Co. had Mr. Thomson placed on board the Gyne and conveyed to Bassein hospital. Shwe Hla was arrested and is to be tried in a few days.

THE EXPEDITIONS projected in the coming cold weather in Burma are, the Mandalay Herald says, to be accompanied, it appears, by survey and exploring parties. Up to the present the programme includes the following places. The country about Fort White, principally that to the north and west, the country about Haka, the unexplored country situated between the habitat of the Chinboks and the Bounghshees, the Kachin country near and about the Jade and Amber Mines, and the north of the Upper Chindwin. It is anticipated also that the Burma-Siam and the Burma-China frontiers will be fixed.

AMONG THE MOST encouraging returns of the year are those which deal with the development of Upper Burma. So far as the internal affairs of the country are concerned, says the Englishman, progress has been rapid in every branch of administration, and the people at large show a growing inclination to settle down to peaceable and orderly pursuits. A recent report on the trade of the Province shows that commercial expansion is following close upon the heels of law and order. The total value of commodities exchanged between Burma and the adjoining foreign countries increased last year by over ten per cent. This improvement took place solely in the Upper Burma trade, for the combined exports and imports of the Lower Province decreased by some three per cent.

A FEW DAYS AGO, the same paper says, we referred to the marked increase in the inland trade of Upper and Lower Burma during the past year. It appears from recently published returns that the growth of exports and imports by sea has been equally satisfactory. The tonnage of ships entering and cleared from Burmese ports was over ten per cent. greater in 1890 than during the preceding twelve months; and it is noteworthy that the increase has been solely in steamers. The coasting trade meanwhile rose from about 650 to 740 lacs. The total imports, more than half of which came from Bengal, amounted in value to 450 lacs, the highest on record.

WE (Pioneer) noticed lately the proposal to extend the Rangoon-Mandalay Railway from Samon to Myingyan on the left bank of the Irrawaddy. It now appears that the Local Government are anxious to have a line from Myingyan to a point on the river opposite Pokoko, which is a flourishing trading town and daily increasing in prosperity. Under the circumstances, it appears that the alignment from Samon will scarcely be so advantageous as one through Meiktila further to the south. In the latter case some sixty miles would be saved in the distance to Pokoko and twenty in that to Myingyan, taking Rangoon as the point with which rapid communication by rail is desired. This line would run direct to Pokoko from Meiktila, a branch being constructed to Myingyan. There can be no doubt that the export and import trade with Pokoko and the Chindwin Valley would be greatly stimulated by this extension of the railway. If the present distress in the Yamethin, Meiktila, and Myingyan districts increases owing to the deficient rainfall, the cultivators may be given employment on earthwork during the autumn.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

CERTAIN VARIETIES of Indian wheat from the Punjab and the N.-W.P. and Oude have, the local paper understands, been supplied for experimental cultivation in Russia. They are to be tried on the estates of Prince Kotschnkey who, it may be remembered, was one of the suite of the Czarevitch during his recent visit to India.

BULWANT RAO'S CASE has been decided by the Sessions Judge of Ujjain. Asad Yarkhan, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Indore, and two of his sepoys were convicted of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment each, with 2,000 rs. fine for the former, and 50 rs. fine for the latter. The Kotwal of Ujjain and the Railway Police Constable were convicted of the same offence, and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment and a fine of 200 rs. and 50 rs. respectively. The Thanadar of Ujjain was sentenced to six months' and three constables of Ujjain to seven years' each, for abetment of the offence.

ON SEPT. 3, at about 11 P.M., there was an outbreak in the Central Prison, Agra. The life prisoners, chiefly notorious dacoits under sentence of transportation, managed to free themselves of their fetters, and after wrenching out the iron gratings of the barrack in which they were confined, and forcing open the door, were preparing to make good their escape when they were spied by some of the convict burhundazes and warders on duty, who gave the alarm. All hands in close proximity to the scene of the occurrence quickly collected and endeavoured to capture the convicts. A hand-to-hand fight then ensued, the prisoners making a stubborn resistance, freely using stones, brickbats, and such missiles as came readily to hand. At this juncture the police guard were called in, and it was not until they had fired a few shots to intimidate the prisoners that they submitted. As a result of the affray three of the prisoners succumbed to the wounds received from lathi blows, and others lie, wounded more or less, in hospital. The European Jailor and some of the convict burhundazes and warders have also received injuries. Their conduct throughout the affair was very creditable.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

REFERRING to the news telegraphed from India, to the effect that Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison have been refused admission into the Little Pamir and the adjoining region by the Russian expedition, the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says:—This, if true, presumably means that the Russians have so far carried out their threat of claiming and taking possession of the Pamir, or of as much thereof as is referred to in the above-mentioned telegrams from India. Such a threat, it will be remembered, was started and agitated by Captain Grombtchefski through the medium of the Novoe Vremya last winter, and was ridiculed by Anglo-Indian newspapers and some of their contemporaries in London when reported in the Times from St. Petersburg. It was probably also treated with contempt at the time by the Anglo-Indian authorities. In the next place the exclusion of members of the British expedition from the Little Pamir will certainly be reported with great glee by Russians interested in this question as a quid pro quo for the exclusion of Captain Grombtchefski last year from certain parts of the Pamir by the Afghans and from Cashmere by Colonel Nisbet, and the bad treatment which he complained of thereby receiving at the hands of the British Resident. Colonel Nisbet, it is true, wrote to Grombtchefski that in refusing him admission he was only acting under superior orders from India, but this did not make any difference to the Russian explorer, who told me himself that in the cold and barren mountainous region where he was thus forced to wander he very nearly died of starvation in consequence. Of Captain Younghusband, however, who entertained him and his Russian colleagues with much hospitality in Kashgar, Captain Grombtchefski spoke in terms of the highest praise.

The St. James's Gazette says:—"We have been placed in possession of the latest news from Captain Younghusband. In a letter dated Aug. 11 he gives further details of the Russian movements on the Chitral and Afghan frontiers. As he was travelling from Kashgar news reached him that 100 Russian soldiers had crossed the Russian frontier, and, in spite of remonstrances, had forced their way on to the Pamirs, the 'roof of the world.' Captain Younghusband immediately set off to verify the news, and came up with the rear-guard of the Russian party on Aug. 10 at Bozai Gumbaz, and found that the officer had gone off to the Chitral frontier. He at once communicated with Gilgit, with the result, as we have heard by telegram, that 200 of the 5th Goorkhas were pushed forward to that place. This sign of activity was sufficient; for the Russian party is reported to have recrossed the Pamir and returned to the Russian frontier. Incidents like this point to the great necessity of carefully watching our neighbours. Bozai Gumbaz lies some 200 miles as the crow flies due north of Abbottabad, and only eighty miles as the crow flies from Gilgit, our advanced post on the Cashmere frontier."

Subsequently the same journal adds:—The interesting account we were able to give yesterday of Captain Younghusband's movements will have shown that the Indian Government and its officers serving beyond the frontier are doing all that is possible to circumvent the Russians on the Roof of the World. Bozai Gumbaz, or, more correctly, Gumbaz-i-Bozai, where Captain Younghusband came up with the rear-guard of the Russian expedition, is between 12,500 ft. and 13,000 ft. above the sea level. The mountain peaks to the south between this and our outpost at Gilgit rise to a height of over 25,500 ft.—that is to say, they are some 9,500 ft. higher than Mont Blanc; a fact which may give the reader an even better idea of the scene of this Anglo-Russian dispute than any more elaborate descriptions. The situation is certainly not elucidated by Professor Vambéry. The Russians have crossed and recrossed the Alichur Pamir freely for years past; and unless the Aksu is to be recognised as the boundary of Afghanistan, it is difficult to see how we can prevent them. The claim they are alleged to have made to the Little Pamir is another matter; but even here it is hard to say what the Indian Government can do more than it has done already, in establishing an outpost at Gilgit and extending British influence in Chitral and Hunza. But for our friend the Ameer Abdur Rahman, we should by this time have established friendly relations with the Kaffirs as well.

The Pester Lloyd publishes an article from Professor Vambéry on the exclusion of Captain Younghusband from Little Pamir by the Russian authorities. The writer declares that the Russo-Afghan Treaty definitely fixed the frontier between the two countries, and that the Czar, in conversation with the British Ambassador, pledged himself not to allow that boundary to be crossed by the Russians. Since then, however, observes the Professor, Russia has secretly pushed forward her frontier to the eastward at two points, and is now doing so at a third. In conclusion, the article points out that the Alichur Pamir, over which Russia is now stated to claim supremacy, is situated about 230 miles beyond the frontier defined by treaty, and that it is in England's interest to prevent similar violations of the boundary in future.

With regard to the important news from the Pamir the following telegrams have been published:—

CALCUTTA, Sept. 21 (Times).—Captain Younghusband, travelling from the Little Pamir, met Lieutenant Davison, of the Leinster Regiment, at Kashgar. They went to Alichur Pamir to learn the truth about the Russian exploring parties. The latter claim to exercise supremacy over Little Pamir and Alichur Pamir, and have excluded Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison.

BOMBAY, Sept. 21 (Reuter).—Captain Younghusband has left Bozai-Gumbaz for the Tagdumbash Pamir.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 27 (Times).—Considerable uneasiness prevails regarding the Russian movements on the Pamirs. The reports are still vague and indefinite. One rumour is that Lieutenant Davison has been taken prisoner, another that a Chinese general vainly tried to prevent the advance of the Russians. The exclusion of Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison would seem to support the theory that Russia has actually annexed the Pamirs. Probably more definite news will arrive within the next few days. Meanwhile it cannot be denied that the situation is one to cause some anxiety.

The Russians are reported to be collecting stores and erecting quarters for troops at Shikhjunid, on the Kushk River, on the north-western border of Afghanistan. It is also said that they have increased the garrison of Yulutan.

To-day's Standard publishes the following, written from Moscow on Sunday:—The rumour that Russia is massing troops towards the Afghan frontier continues to gain ground here, and is even referred to in certain unofficial organs. These, however, affect to believe that England is the aggressor in Asia. The truth appears to be that Russian political agents are abroad in Afghanistan, endeavouring to foment a quarrel with the Afghans against the Turcomans and Bokharians in such a manner as to render the Afghans the aggressors. Should they succeed, Russia would, according to oft-repeated precedent, step in to protect the tribes within her sphere of influence, and thus sweep away the puppet Khan of Bokhara and his nominal autonomy. Russia has long aimed at this. Having failed to persuade the Ameer to visit St. Petersburg, leaving his capital under the protection of a Russian garrison, she has developed her energies for the past year to developing the Russian town of Aramed, the Bokharan station on the Trans-Caspian Railway, ten miles from the ancient town of the Ameer. A church has been built from imperial funds, money has been expended on education, a good road has been made between the old town and the new—in short, everything has been got ready for the final act. For this some pretext is wanted, even by Russia. It is possible she is at present only working out the little Bokharan problem; but from the tone of an article in the Moscow Gazette, one must conclude that Russia is entertaining larger designs than the mere engulfing of Bokhara. The Gazette is much amazed at the "bravado of the Standard in speaking of the power of the English fleet at the Dardanelles, as though the latter were only a piece of English territory," and is highly indignant at the threat to send British ships through the Straits. The Gazette reminds the Standard that in Europe the Great Powers of the Triple Alliance may possibly aid England against Russia, but that in Asia at least Russia has the Englishman alone to deal with. The article concludes thus:—"Russia has in such case (the Dardanelles Question) the right to put in practice the theory in mechanics of the elastic body, and every blow struck at her in Europe will be answered by a similar blow in Asia—a blow calculated to disturb the tranquil surface of the English power in India, and this will be the more dangerous for England in that Russia would not have to move a single soldier of the garrisons in Europe maintained to repel any sudden attack of our so-called friends, who, for their part, will quite understand that, if England has a right to defend her interests by sending fleets to the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, Russia has also no less right to defend her interests by sending an army to Herat or Candahar." Russia is massing troops towards the Afghan frontier in the hope, first, of influencing English diplomacy in Europe, and, secondly, in the certainty of sweeping aside the last seeming independency in her newly-acquired Central Asian possessions.

The Berlin correspondent of the Central News writes (Sept. 27):—The new-born vigour which is now being evinced by the Chinese Government to put an end to the anti-foreign movement has possibly been stimulated by the receipt of a very unpleasant piece of news of an act of Russian aggression that has just been received at Peking from Kashgaria. A Russian exploring party of 150 men, which, however, is now being reinforced, has invaded the Alichur and Little Pamirs with the object of pushing forward the frontier to the point extorted from Yakoub Khan by Prince Kuropatkin, which, in the negotiations that led to the treaty of St. Petersburg, China positively refused to admit. The new frontier now claimed by the Russians would give them the posts of Engghen, Irkistam, Nagra Chalby, and the important fort of Oolookchat, a place which is far on the way from Osh to Kashgar. This would, in addition to placing in the hands of Russia all the passes to the west of Kashgar, have the effect of altogether excluding China from the Alichur Pamir, which she claims up to a point a little to the west of Samurtash. It is expected Lieut Ching-Tang, the military Governor of Chinese Turkestan, will leave for the Altisheyr immediately.

The Vienna Presse, commenting on a recent article in the Times, says:—"In speaking of Russia's approaching supremacy in Central Asia, the Times expresses a fear which has been justified for some time past. What is apprehended will happen sooner or later because England did not at the proper time resist Russia's advance, and above all because the Gladstone Cabinet, shortsightedly and frivolously, threw overboard Lord Beaconsfield's Asiatic policy. It will be difficult to correct these errors, and we are afraid that the next conflict between Great Britain and Russia will lead to a struggle which will take place with unequal forces on the two sides."

According to letters received at St. Petersburg from merchants now attending the fair at Nijni Novgorod (says a Reuter telegram), a number of Afghan traders lately arrived there with a letter for General Baranoff, the Governor, from the Ameer Abdurrahman, requesting him to inform the Russian merchants that he had decided to open Afghanistan to free commercial intercourse with Russia in consideration of the good quality of the Russian products imported into Afghanistan during recent years. The Ameer is stated to have been greatly flattered by the various valuable presents sent him by the Czar, General Baranoff, and the Russian merchants at Nijni Novgorod. The Mussulman clergy in Afghanistan also appear to be becoming favourable to the Russians.

The Ameer of Bokhara has arrived in Russian territory with a large suite, on his way to St. Petersburg, which he will reach next month.

The Society for Promoting Russian Commerce and Industry in St. Petersburg intend establishing an office for information concerning Russian trade with Persia and the Balkan States.

The Ameer of Cabul, says the Pioneer, seems to have been favoured with his usual good fortune in dealing with the malcontent Hazaras in the Urugan country north of Kelat-i-Ghilzai. He concentrated his troops from three directions, with the result that the submission has been secured of the principal chief, who was sent to Cabul, where he has been well treated and allowed to return to his home.

The Paris correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Sept. 25:—"It is understood that a treaty is now being arranged between Russia and Persia, half political, half economic, containing the following two stipulations:—A commercial union between the two countries which will have the effect of all but absolutely excluding other Powers from commercial relations; and, secondly, the relegation of political representation abroad to a single one of the two Powers, either Russia or Persia. It is well known that this probably implies a Russian protectorate. A project, moreover, is under way to comprise all the Khanates, Khiva, Bokhara, &c., under the hegemony of Russia, with the title of the Federation of Central Asia." This statement is, however, contradicted by a Reuter telegram from St. Petersburg.

Nérیمان Khan, the Persian Minister to the Austrian Court, has been summoned to Teheran by the Shah. He has already left Vienna.

The Leprosy Commission.—After having been nearly a year in India, says the Bombay Gazette of Sept. 11, Dr. Rake and Dr. Buckmaster, members of the Leprosy Commission, sailed for England by the last mail steamer. Mr. Kanthack and Surgeon-Major Thompson, the other members of the Commission, remain at Simla to complete the preparation of the report, and to obtain the necessary census figures. We understand that a great part of the report is in draft form, but that the information contained in it will not be available until the completion of the document in England. In the pursuit of their inquiry the Commission have travelled over twenty thousand miles, the area visited extending from Bombay to Calcutta, and from Madura to Peshawar, besides visits to Burma and Cashmere. Their investigations have been as thorough and exhaustive as it has been possible to make them, the method rigidly adhered to throughout being to draw no conclusions except from such a number of instances as would supply the broadest basis for induction. About sixty institutions in which lepers are detained were visited, and a long stay was made in several places, notably at Almora, where the subsidiary but important question of a possible causative relation between vaccination and leprosy was gone into. This question has been raised in our columns this week by two anti-vaccinationist correspondents in England, and it is understood that the Commissioners have gone very carefully into it. Other questions relating to diet, climate, famine, and insufficiency of salt as conditions favouring leprosy have also been gone into, and the theory, of which Sir William Moore is the most noteworthy exponent, that leprosy and syphilis may both be the modern forms of what in ancient times was recognised as leprosy, has also been subjected to careful inquiry. The indications of uniformity in leprosy have, it is understood, been most convincing, and there seems to be no warrant for belief in the existence of varieties, though, as was long since pointed out, the diagnosis of leprosy in India has often been loose and unreliable.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE CHINA RIOTS.

THE following telegrams have been published since our last issue :—

On Sept. 23 the New York Herald received the following message from its correspondent at Shanghai :—

The situation is becoming worse. The disturbances at Ichang are growing, and are the prelude to other disorders. The valley of the Yangtse is in rebellion. Wuchang, the central seat of the Viceroy, is ready to revolt, and then the towns open to foreigners, Hankow and Chungking, are likely to follow. The latter town is difficult to defend by warships, owing to the shallowness of the river. Great excitement prevails, and strangers are fleeing. Shanghai is among the threatened towns. Measures have been taken to despatch three ships of war to Wuchang, and the combined fleets are concentrating at Shanghai. M. Lemaire, the French Minister, has left here for Peking.

SINGAPORE, Sept. 23 (Times).—Shanghai advices to Sept. 12 prove that the Ichang riot was an organised outbreak of Hunan soldiers. The central Government is powerless to stop the riots unless by sending soldiers from a distance and risking a civil war. Gunboats cannot ascend to Ichang, and a merchant steamer takes the British bluejackets. Placards issued to students at Nankin accuse the Christians of gross crimes. People at the treaty ports say that nothing but the landing of a well-armed force of foreigners will quell the troubles.

FOOCHOW, Sept. 23 (Times).—A secretly-organised scheme to take the arsenal has been discovered by the foreigners employed there. Foreign residents consider it absolutely necessary that a gunboat should remain here.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 26 (New York Herald).—Threatening rumours come from the north of China. At Tientsin it is asserted that the French Consul, De Beyaure, has demanded indemnity from the Viceroy as well as effective measures for the protection of foreign residents.

A great many rifles have been confiscated that had been concealed on a steamer bound for Tientsin and Peking. They were intended for the rioters.

The New York Herald to-day learns that threatening rumours have reached Shanghai from the north of China. At Tientsin it is asserted that the French Consul, De Beyaure, has demanded indemnity from the Viceroy, as well as effective measures for the protection of foreign residents. According to information published by Le Jour, the Chinese Government has already given compensation to the Jesuits for losses suffered by them in the recent riots. The Jesuits have, it is said, received an immense grant of land.

The Central News learns from an official and trustworthy source that, according to a telegram dated Peking, the 21st inst., specific sums have been offered to the Treaty Powers by the Chinese Government by way of compensation for the loss of life and property at Wuhu, Wusieh, Tan-Yang, Woosieh, and other places where disturbances have occurred. Four of the ringleaders have been executed and twenty-one others sentenced to banishment for longer or shorter periods, whilst five mandarins found to have been culpably remiss in taking measures to preserve order have been reported to the Throne for punishment. The Imperial Government, recognising their entire responsibility for the preservation of order at the Treaty ports and the protection of missionaries in the interior, have ordered the Viceroy of Chihli and Nankin to despatch the Northern and Southern squadrons of the Chinese fleet to patrol the Yangtse and afford protection wherever the life and property of Europeans may still appear to be threatened. Though rumours of further troubles still excite uneasiness at certain places, the Imperial Government does not doubt its ability to cope effectively with any attempts at the committal of new breaches of the peace which may occur, whether from operations of secret societies or as the result of local and accidental circumstances. The examinations which during the last months were being held at Nankin, Wuchang, Nanchang, Hangchow, and Foochow, the provincial capitals of the Leang-Keang, Leang-Hoo, Chekiang, and Fukien Governments, have come to an end without any of those disturbances having occurred which so often, even on ordinary occasions, attend the assemblage of so many thousands of students. At Nankin alone the number of students who usually attend these examinations exceeds 20,000, and that of the other provincial capitals above-mentioned does not fall far short of the same number.

Nothing is known about the reported conspiracy to seize upon the arsenal at Foochow, but undoubted evidence of the activity of secret societies has come to light in other quarters. Thirty-five cases of foreign rifles consigned to a British subject, an employé in the Imperial Customs at Chin-Keang, have been seized by the Customs authorities at Shanghai. The officer in question, who has been arrested and forwarded to Shanghai, there to be dealt with by the British authorities, was found to be in possession of a quantity of dynamite, which, with the rifles, he has confessed to have been intended for the use of a secret society at Chin-Keang. The arms came from Hong Kong. Two other British subjects and six other foreign residents at Shanghai, but whose nationality has not yet been ascertained, are said to be implicated in the transaction, which is now the subject of investigation by Sir Robert Hart, the Inspector-General of Chinese Maritime Customs, and the British Consular authorities at Shanghai and Chin-Keang. Notwithstanding this awkward and disquieting discovery, the Chinese Government entertains no doubt of its entire competency to preserve order.

The Times correspondent wrote from Paris on Sept. 25 :—The French papers published yesterday an authoritative statement to the effect that the Chinese Chargé d'Affaires in Paris had communicated to M. Ribot a note from the Chinese Government declaring that China has taken all the necessary measures to repress and to prevent the outbreak of further demonstrations. M. Ribot has meanwhile simply declared that he is taking this communication into consideration. For some time now a rumour has been in circulation that the Chinese

Tsung-li-Yamen has addressed a circular to the representative of China in Paris, and that in this circular the Tsung-li-Yamen declares that the Chief of the Foreign Office, the uncle of the Emperor, has informed the various Governors of the Chinese provinces that for every disturbance which happens in their provinces they themselves will be held responsible. They are said to have been directed to repress agitations by every means at their disposal. But at the same time it has become known that the governors of the provinces in which the riots have taken place, and in which Europeans have suffered such losses and such ill-treatment, have distinctly asserted that they cannot be held responsible for these movements, and that it is impossible for them to pay any indemnity. They have imputed the outbreak, and consequently its unfortunate results, to the encroachingly-aggressive attitude of Christian missionaries. The statement has at the same time got abroad that the Chinese Government are anxious to have the contents of these circulars extensively made known in the European Press, and the inference is that its chief aim is thus to delay the threatening action of the Powers, and to exercise once more the policy of procrastination, which is so peculiar to the Chinese temperament, and in all probability, above all, to shirk the difficult duty of giving to the sufferers an indemnity. Now it must not be forgotten, as I have before pointed out, that these riots are not organised against the Chinese Government; but, on the other hand, are excited either at the direct or indirect inspiration of those who belong to the Government itself, and that they are chiefly directed by a spirit of anti-European feeling, not against any one nation, but against the subjects of all. And this circular, which is thus intended to interrupt the action of the European Powers in the eventual coercion of China, will most likely have as little effect on the minds of European statesmen as on the minds of those to whom it was addressed.

The Paris correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Sept. 24 :—China is doing its utmost to delay the threatened action on her coasts. Tchong Tchang, the Chinese Chargé d'Affaires in Paris, had an audience of M. Ribot at the Foreign Office this morning, and showed him a telegram he had just received from Peking, setting forth that the Chinese Government is taking all necessary measures to secure the protection of foreigners, and has ordered the Northern Squadron to proceed immediately to the disturbed districts. Under these circumstances, he was instructed to express a hope, on behalf of the Chinese Government, that the French Cabinet would wait for these measures to take effect before proceeding to take action. I am informed that M. Ribot confined himself to acknowledging the receipt of this communication.

The Chinese Ambassador called upon Baron von Marschall, Minister for Foreign Affairs, at the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon, says the Reuter correspondent at Berlin (Sept. 27), and a protracted conference took place on the subject of the recent anti-foreign riots in China. It is understood that the Ambassador, on behalf of his Government, made a communication similar to that which was conveyed to M. Ribot in Paris, to the effect, namely, that the Chinese Government had made complete arrangements for the suppression of any further rising that might occur, and that the interference of foreign Powers would be unnecessary. The reply of the German Government to this communication has not yet been delivered.

According to information published by Le Jour, the Chinese Government has already given compensation to the Jesuits for losses suffered by them in the recent riots. The Jesuits have, it is said, received an immense grant of land.

In an article on the position of affairs, the Viedomosti considers that Russia should observe an attitude of strict neutrality and await calmly further developments in Peking, the Yangtse-kiang, and Amour. The Novoe Vremya holds similar views, and says that Russia should abstain from taking part in any demonstration. This journal is further of opinion that she should take advantage of the present state of affairs in China to strengthen her position in the extreme East. The Grashdanin strenuously advocates the observance of absolute neutrality by Russia in Chinese matters. The journal is of opinion that in making common cause with the other European Powers against China, Russia would but serve the ends of France and England to the prejudice of her own interests, which demand that she should not jeopardise the security of her Asiatic shores nor contribute to the complete ascendancy of Great Britain in the Pacific Ocean by arousing the antagonism of China. The paper concludes that by remaining neutral at the present moment Russia would lay the foundation of a future Russo-Chinese alliance, which she might use hereafter, in case of need, as an effective weapon against Great Britain in the far East.

A St. Petersburg telegram of Sept. 24 states :—In view of the present threatening situation in China, the Russian Government appears disposed to take part in any diplomatic action undertaken by the other European Powers for the purpose of assuring the safety of Europeans and native Christians in the Celestial Empire, but would probably hesitate in carrying this common action so far as to participate in a naval demonstration. Such a course of action is foreshadowed by the language of the Russian Press, which, while advising the Government to take advantage of the present situation to adopt precautions against the ulterior ambitious aims of China, dwells on the necessity for Russia, on account of the small number of warships at her disposal in the Pacific Ocean, to remain neutral in the event of a naval demonstration.

Mr. MacLagan, of the Scottish Foreign Mission Society, in Edinburgh, received the following telegram on Saturday from the Rev. G. Cockburn, head of the Church of Scotland Mission at Ichang :—“Sudden (probably a mistake for ‘suburb’) houses burnt; narrow escape; lost everything; come to Shanghai. City Mission still safe.” Mr. MacLagan hopes these words indicate that the church and dispensary have not been destroyed, but that the missionaries evidently consider it would not be prudent for them to remain at Ichang, and are now in Shanghai.

The North China Herald (Aug. 15) writes:—The foreign powers having treaties with China have unanimously determined to support Great Britain in the demands formulated and presented to the Tsungli Yamen by Sir John Walsham, and they are decided that Hunan shall be opened, and shall cease to be the fount of the anti-foreign publications which do so much to poison the minds of the Chinese people. If these demands are not granted promptly and fully, force is to be used, and for this purpose it is probable that Great Britain will receive the mandate from all the Powers to execute their decision. No non possumus is to be accepted, no trifling or prevarication will be allowed. The Powers have determined that the treaties safeguarding foreign life and property everywhere in China—Hunan included—shall be fully and honestly observed; and if diplomacy fails now, the cannon is to speak in tones that the Chinese will not be able to disregard.

The Chinese fleet, which so imposed on the mercurial Japanese, seems to be thought very little of by some of China's foremost governors. Chang-yao, Governor of Shantung, news of whose death has just been received, was engaged with his Excellency Li Hung-chang in the recent inspection of the Peiyang and Nanyang Naval Squadrons, and he made a separate report to the throne on his own account on the Nanyang Squadron. He reports that it is absolutely useless; the ships are in bad order and not properly found, the officers are totally ignorant of their duties, and, in the event of the services of the squadron being required, no reliance could be placed on it. He recommends that the officers and crews should be at once discharged, and the ships laid up, the money now spent on the maintenance of the squadron being put aside annually and accumulated to form a fund to provide the expenses hereafter of a proper naval establishment.

Captain Piorkowsky, of the German Army, who has been for some months past engaged on behalf of China surveying the Russian-Chinese frontier of the Shingling Province, with a view to its adequate fortification, has returned to Shanghai.

The mail steamer from Indo-China arrived on Sept. 25 at Marseilles. Tonquin papers received by the mail bring the following news:—The province of Cao-Bang has been purged of the Hang-Son pirates. This band has been several times dispersed, but never actually broken up until now. Captain Lassalle, after storming the stronghold of the Chinese pirates at Ngoi-Hutt, joined the detachment arriving from Finh-Hoi. Carrier pigeons, travelling at the speed of 80 kilometres per hour, brought the news to Hanoi that the rebel chief had been killed. Subsequently his body was carried to Hanoi, where it was beheaded and the head was exposed to the public view. In addition to repressive operations by land, measures were taken at sea by Rear-Admiral Fournier, who impressed the Custom House boats and junks into his service and gave chase to the pirates. At present sampans can safely ply between Haifong and the Bay of Along.

Indian Cotton Prospects.—The first general memorandum on the prospects of the Indian cotton crop of the season 1891 is as follows:—Except in the Bombay Presidency, where the deficiency is less than 4 per cent., or 50,480 acres, the area of the early cotton crop has been seriously affected by the absence of rain during June and the greater part of July, which is the chief month of sowing operations. In Berar there is a falling-off of about 402,000 acres, or 18 per cent.; in the Punjab of about 234,000 acres, or 28 per cent.; in the North-Western Provinces of about 510,000 acres, or 30 per cent.; and in Madras of about 34,609 acres, or 45 per cent. In the Central Provinces not more than half or two-thirds of a full crop is expected. The plant is everywhere unusually backward, and has been much damaged by excessive rain in the Central Provinces and the northern parts of Bombay, in the Punjab by locusts, and in Madras drought. In Berar prospects are favourable.

The Jute Forecast.—"Cassandra" writes to the Englishman:—I am afraid that the Government final forecast of the jute crop issued to-day must be taken cum grano salis, or it will have a misleading effect. The report says that the area under cultivation this year is 1,556,492 acres, as against 2,002,671 last season, and that the outturn per acre (taking 16 a. to represent an average yield) this year is to be 12 a., as against 14 a. last season. The report further states that the total exports last year amounted to 10,606,145 cwt., and then proceeds to prophecy that the quantity available for export during the present season is not likely to be more than 65 per cent. of this amount. This prophesy may or may not turn out to be correct. We will be able to tell in July next year, not before. Meantime, the Government reporter is entitled to his little guess as well as any other prophet, and he certainly knows as much about the subject as any in the jute trade, and that is nothing. He is wrong, however, in some of his figures. The total exports last season (I quote from G. M. Blacker's statement) amounted to 3,421,350 bales, or 12,219,107 cwt., which is about 11½ per cent. greater than the figures given in the Government report. The crop this past year has been the biggest on record, and the exports exceeded the average of the three previous seasons by 511,680 bales. If we take the average exports of these three previous seasons (2,909,670 bales) as representative of the normal crop, then the last year's crop may be set down as being almost a twenty-anna one; and fully that, if the mofussil reports are correct in stating that 2 a. of the old crop have still to come in. With these facts before us, we can, with all due deference to the Government reporter, afford to look a short crop—even to the extent of 4 a.—in the face with the greatest equanimity, as the surplus of the past year will equalise the deficiency of the present and guarantee us against anything approaching scarcity.

Reduction of Foreign Postage.—The following notice has been issued by the Postmaster-General:—

On and after Oct. 1 the postage on letters addressed to places abroad will be reduced in all cases in which it is now higher than 2½d. the half-ounce, except in the case of the Transvaal, Orange Free State, British Bechuanaland, and other more remote places in the interior of Africa, served by way of the Cape Colony or Natal. To those places in the interior the postage will remain unchanged for the present; but for any other part of the world outside the United Kingdom the postage to be prepaid on a letter will be 2½d. the half-ounce. From the same date the foreign postcard rates of 1½d. and 2d. will be suppressed, and 1d. postcards will be available for transmission to all places abroad to which postcards are at present transmissible. In like manner reply-paid postcards at 2d. each will be available for all destinations to which the reply-card arrangement at present applies. Another notice states that commencing on Oct. 1 next, the postage to be prepaid on letters passing between this country and Bermuda will be reduced to 2½d. the half-ounce.

On Oct. 1 the British Colonies of Australasia—namely, New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, Queensland, Western Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, British New Guinea, and the Fiji Islands, will enter the Postal Union; and the prepaid correspondence for those colonies will thenceforward be subject to the following rates of postage by all routes:—Letters, 2½d. per half-ounce; postcards, single 1d., each, reply 2d.; each; newspapers 1d. per four ounces for each newspaper; printed papers and patterns up to one ounce 1d., one to two ounces 1½d., each additional two ounces 1½d.; commercial papers, the same as for printed papers, except that the minimum charge will be 2½d. Unpaid and insufficiently paid correspondence will be charged on delivery with double the deficient postage. Letters, postcards, newspapers, commercial papers, printed papers, and patterns, may be registered, the registration fee being in all cases 2d., which, in addition to the postage, must be prepaid. Correspondence for the above-named colonies will be subject in every respect to the conditions of transmission applicable to correspondence addressed to countries of the Postal Union generally.

LONDON: MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1891.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE AND ITS CRITICS.

THE INDIAN CIVILIAN who has written a clever and amusing letter to the Times, complaining of the "general tone of the criticism to which Anglo-Indians are subjected," when they arrive at home on furlough or after their official life has ended, must not be taken as expressing more than a cynical and half-serious reaction against some of the more extreme instances of ignorance or prejudice which it falls to the lot of all foreigners or colonists to encounter in such a society as ours. We cannot know everything, superior persons as we are, and no doubt judge our visitors by standards more or less arbitrarily set up by the circles into which we are divided; and when a gentleman who has been a satrap in India arrives in England he finds tests applied to him in a manner which is rather wounding to his amour-propre. The INDIAN CIVILIAN however seems to have had an exceptional experience. A more common complaint of the returned Civilian is that so little notice is taken of one who in India has controlled millions, and ruled tracts of territory beside which English provinces are as fields. We may pass over, as a humorous extravagance, the complainant's shock at finding that his readiness to return to a civilised diet, his retention of a blond complexion, and the absence of vulgarity create some wonder in the country-houses he visits. His other complaints are worth more serious attention. MR. OSCAR WILDE has repudiated the charge that he had discovered in Indian Civilians an element of "vulgarity" which those of his school affect to regard with so much horror. If he had made the imputation, the Civilian might have consoled himself by the reflection that he shared with the Atlantic Ocean the disrepute, if any, of MR. OSCAR WILDE's disappointment. That, he might, like the ocean, have survived. But the charges that he is overworked and underpaid, that his morals leave much to be desired, and that, in his treatment of the natives of India, he is a brute, give a much better-founded ground for resentment—though an INDIAN CIVILIAN perhaps attaches to them a somewhat exaggerated importance. On the first point, the opinions current at home are undoubtedly unjust, and if permitted to go unchallenged might become impolitic. The INDIAN CIVILIAN admits that "the emoluments, even of the Indian Civil Service, the best paid service in the country, are such that they attract but few men of the highest ability." That is an admission which gives ground for grave reflection. The desire and hope of every intelligent Englishman must be that for the colossal, the difficult and delicate task of controlling the administration of our vast Empire in India we should secure the highest talent available; and if the terms at present offered fail to attain that object, steps cannot too soon be taken to bring about its realisation. As regards the morals of Anglo-Indian society, the Times pertinently remarks that if the virtues of the Anglo-Indian official classes, as to which the INDIAN CIVILIAN gives striking and even touching testimony, have been overshadowed by a reputation for frivolity and vice which, to say the least, is grossly exaggerated, that is in a large degree owing to pictures of Anglo-Indian life which have by their cleverness and vivacity made so powerful an impression on English readers in the "Chronicles of Dustypore," "James Vraile," the tales of MR. RUDYARD KIPLING and others. In fact, as the INDIAN CIVILIAN suggests, by a clever satirical review of society as he finds it at home, there is not much difference in point of morals between Anglo-Indian official society and that higher class with which it corresponds in this country. In England there is, it is true, the restraining influence of a superior and enlightened public opinion which in India is wanting; but it is more than compensated for by the extremely narrow limits of the circle in which official life moves, and the consequent ease with which all the minutest details of a man's life and character are detected and brought into prominence. The charge of a want of consideration for native feeling, and even of brutality in treatment of natives, comes chiefly from persons who take extreme sentimental views on every question, or from natives on whom a European education has had the effect of creating an exaggerated sense of their own importance and an egotistic susceptibility, or who for personal or political reasons calumniate a governing class which restrains their mischievous and foolish ambitions. Very few intelligent Englishmen pay any attention to such imputations, which are indeed belied by the history of our administration, and the evidence afforded by its brilliant and overwhelming success. An INDIAN CIVILIAN has done no harm in unburdening his mind on these matters, and it cannot be denied that there is reason in some of the complaints which he expresses so humorously and so well, but we agree with the Times that he and his class have a high place in British sympathy and opinion. He cannot regret that he has drawn from the leading journal such a tribute as this:—"Anglo-Indians are altogether in error if they suspect any section of their countrymen, worth their consideration, of under-estimating either their industry or their patient and sympathetic enthusiasm. No public service in existence commands more devotion and, on the whole, more skill. Indian civilians must not wonder or be aggrieved if inordinate importance seem to them to be attached to the errors of individuals. The severity of comments is a measure of the supreme gravity of the functions they have to perform. In part, too, it arises from the flattering habit contracted by their countrymen of expecting discretion and dexterity in local Indian administration, which throws blunders into excessive relief." Such testimony as that cannot be affected by the vapourings of MR. CAINE or MR. SCHWANN.

TRUTH ON CHEAP PASSAGES.

THE Ego of Truth (Sept. 17) offers a long and somewhat confused reply to our note on his previous article about cheap passages for Indian Civil and Military officers and their families. He endeavours to conceal the issue between us by irrelevant appeals to prejudice and discussions of matters which are not in question. For instance, he throws out "a suspicion of our bona fides." We don't mind that, if it amuses him. Our bona fides really has nothing whatever to do with the soundness or unsoundness of our criticism. Even had the note we published been written in the P. and O. office, or been directly or indirectly inspired from Leadenhall Street—which most emphatically it was not—its force or weakness would be determined by the merits or demerits of the argument and not of the arguer. We must simply ask our sophistical critic to come back from his excursions and stick to the point. What, in effect, we said was—and all the ingenious twistings of the Truth writer cannot weaken the fact—that if the Indian officials are to have special cheap rates, the Government will have in some way to pay for it. We hinted that our sympathies went with such a solution, but went on to suggest that if all the Civil and Military officials and their families were to have the benefit of the bargain the cost would be considerable. There is no need of “legitimate evidence” to support that proposition. Its correctness lies on the surface. The largest proportion of the first-class passenger traffic between England and India must consist of the classes indicated in Truth.

But the “I” of Truth had suggested an alternative solution. We give the exact words:—

I think, and think very strongly, that the Government which is paying a very large sum per annum to the P. and O. Company might reasonably stipulate that its servants should be carried at cost price.

Well, the State has made a bargain with the P. and O. Company for the mail service, which we said must be presumed to be “carefully adjusted to secure the State a fair performance at a minimum rate,” and we added that the Company could not be expected to perform other services gratuitously. Truth replies that the payment is in fact excessive, &c. Whether it is or is not, that does not affect the soundness of our contention that whatever bargain may fairly be made for the service mails, the State will have to add something to it to secure cheap passages for its servants. If the bland and simple-minded writer in Truth requires the aid of an illustration to clear his mind, let him walk into Covent Garden market and buy a pineapple at three guineas, and then try to persuade Martin or Solomon to let him have a bushel of plums at cost price in consideration of the other purchase. We do the writer the justice to believe that he is too shrewd to be fooled by his own argument. He may as well urge that the contractors for Government stationery should supply all the civil servants of the Crown with stationery at cost price. There is in fact no end to the extension of his principle, which indeed does not bear examination. Coming down to “hard adnan” however, there is really not much difference between Truth and the Homeward Mail. We think that the cost of passages from and to India bears too heavily on Government servants, especially since the depreciation of the rupee. We think it is in the interest of efficiency that furlough, within reasonable limits, should be encouraged, and that the furlough regulations at present are not sufficiently liberal. The Indian Government would do well to negotiate for cheaper passages for its servants, and to pay for the boon.

THE Echo de Paris publishes the following à propos of the arrival of SIR EUAN SMITH in Morocco, where, as everywhere else, the feverish suspicions of the French are alive to the dangers which may affect their interests from the Machiavelian policy and sleepless energy of perfidious Albion. Says the Paris journal:—

Last August, with reference to the nomination of M. d'Aubigny to Morocco, we ventured to make some reflections. It seemed to us that the diplomatist who in Egypt had made so indifferent a figure and had so imperfectly defended the interests of our compatriots, was not exactly designed to fill at Morocco a post where it behoves us, almost as vigorously as in Egypt, to combat the incessant intrigues of England. We receive to-day from Morocco a letter from one of our friends who, having been for a long time resident in the country, is admirably familiar with its resources, and we deem it our duty to make some extracts from this important communication:—“You know (he writes) that the English have lately nominated as Minister at Tangiers, M. Evan Smith (sic), an old army man, a man of force (homme à poigne), who established the English protectorate at Zanzibar. M. Smith has announced his intention to follow the Sultan everywhere, like a veritable Resident, and not, like his colleagues, to remain at Tangiers. It is to combat a man of that temper that they have selected M. d'Aubigny, an amiable person, the one who thought that there was nothing to be done in Egypt. The English, indeed, are wont to choose as their representatives in the East energetic individuals, as often as possible military men. Was not M. Baring once a major in the Indian army? They are right, for it is not diplomacy, but piracy that they carry on outside the limits of Europe. The English (here) were delighted when they learned that our Government had contemplated sending as Consul to Morocco M. Lacau, who represented France at Zanzibar at the very period when England seized upon that Sultanate. M. Lacau married an English lady, niece of John Hay, the great enemy of France, who for thirty-five years as Minister of England at Tangiers foiled our action. Are not these selections significant after the speech in which Lord Salisbury announced that Morocco would ere long give as much anxiety to Europe as the Eastern Question? If we let things drift (here the writer takes to italics) we shall probably before long have an English protectorate in Morocco. They will, no doubt, make some small station for the Germans, whence they can menace our Algiers. There was another candidate than M. d'Aubigny, M. Flesch, to whom the Czar has just granted a decoration as a testimony of regard for his conduct in Bulgaria. M. Flesch was consul at Casablanca: he already knew Morocco, while it will take a newcomer a year to understand Moorish affairs, and he will perhaps, meanwhile, make some unfortunate blunders. There are a host of measures to be taken to safeguard our interests. First, we should re-establish our consulate at Tangiers, which it was wrong to suppress, whilst the English and Spaniards maintained their own. The consequence is that the French Minister is absorbed by petty matters of secretariat instead of being constantly in attendance on the Sultan. We should also appoint a Consul at Casablanca and Vice-Consuls at Rabat and Mazagan. Lastly, it is necessary to choose patriots—not married to Englishwomen—and to arrange that they are sustained by the legation and by the Ministry instead of being thrown over at the least difficulty. M. Ribot has stated in the tribune that we have given up nothing; you will allow me, who am no politician and see things from a distance and on their practical side, as becomes a sound man of business, to hold another opinion. England has profited more from our disasters than Germany, which is forced to ruin herself in armaments. England takes from us everything she wants, without being put to the trouble of fighting us. Yet all the world knows how easily she could be beaten. One need only have seen at Morocco how the English were driven wild by the news of the interview at Cronstadt.

LUANG PHRABANG.

We have received the following from an obliging correspondent on the spot:—

Bangkok, Aug. 24.

A letter which arrived to-day from a French officer seems to throw some light on the recent rumour that the French had occupied Luang Phrabang. Writing on June 26, he says that he was resting there a short time after a protracted pursuit of a large band of pirates that had given the French authorities great trouble, and which it was determined to pursue and destroy. The French forces were composed of several companies of native auxiliaries, together with a small number of French troops. Though not actually stating that the French troops were in Luang Phrabang, it is to be inferred that they were encamped in the neighbourhood, and that a few of the officers took the opportunity of visiting the town about which there has recently been so much discussion. This, in conjunction with the fact that the rumoured occupation emanated from Siamese sources, will probably account for the canard telegraphed to England. The letter was seven weeks in reaching Bangkok.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, September 7.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Sept. 3, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 2 per cent.

The Bank's statement for the week ending Sept. 1 shows the following changes in figures :—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 4,47,403	Decrease
Do. at Branches	4,99,851	Decrease
Other Deposits	45,90,448	Decrease
Post Bills	869	Decrease

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 1,75,348	Increase
Loans	42,939	Increase
Accounts of Credits	67,628	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	10,75,744	Increase
Cash at Head Office	21,22,582	Decrease
Do. at Branches	47,22,712	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows an increase of nearly 56½ lacs in public demand, made up as follows :—By a decrease of over 45½ lacs in "Other Deposits," together with an increase of about ½ lac in "Loans," and 10½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of over ½ of a lac in "Accounts of credits." The "Treasury Balance at Head Office" stands reduced by nearly 4½ lacs, and at the branches by 5 lacs. The bank's investments were increased by 1½ lacs. The final result of these changes is a falling-off of about 21½ lacs in "Cash at Head Office," and about 47½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 6,32,90,743 rs., which is equal to 67·9 per cent. of the current liabilities of the bank, against a proportion of 71 per cent. of last week.

TEA.—The first sale of the month was held on Sept. 2, 16,000 chests being catalogued. A heavy fall in values wired from London had some effect on prices, and rather lower prices were in many instances accepted. The most noticeable decline was in ordinary common and ordinary Pekoes.

JUTE.—The market has been very excited, prices rising daily up-country and in the local Bazar. Supplies continue small, and are eagerly bought up by the balers, who have to complete contracts for the first half of the month; good standard marks cannot be baled at less than 32·8 rs.

GUNNIES.—The market has again ruled very strong, with, however, a comparatively small business doing. Twills and corn sacks are the chief articles dealt in. Goods of all descriptions have been changing hands in the bazaar, and with mill sellers holding off prices show a further advance.

HESSIANS have been in request at higher rate. The rise appears to have checked business for New York, but 'Frisco is still buying to a small extent.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—Business has not improved. In gold, business is as dull as it can be. Although the rapid downward course in Sonapets observed last week has been arrested, and the market is a trifle firmer, yet the suspicion, particularly in the native mind, that the whole thing may eventually turn out a fiasco remains, and prevents the shares from rallying. The position is now beyond the reach of rumour and reports, and nothing but the production of gold itself, and in greater quantity than what has hitherto been obtained, will have any sensible or permanent effect on ruling prices. There has been a retrograde movement in Jute Mill scrip, and the tendency is towards still lower prices. This is occasioned not only by the prices of the raw material, but equally by speculators bearing the market. The reaction must set in sooner or later, and when it does big prices will probably have to be paid. Bengal Paper Mills shares continue to advance, but with this exception the transactions in miscellaneous stocks have been insignificant. In cotton a large line of Empress of India shares was reported at 270 rs., a drop of nearly 200 rs. per share on previous quotations, which, however, were purely nominal. In tea, Hoolungoories have been in request, and have moved up, and a parcel of Punkhabaree fetched the very fair figure of 38 rs. by auction.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, September 10.

With several native holidays, on one of which the banks were closed, intervening since the date of last report, the seasonable dullness previously existing has been intensified, and there is little of interest to chronicle. On two days in the week nothing whatever has been done in cotton, and on others very little has been taken by the local mills, and less for export; while only a small business has been passing in wheat and seeds, in quiet markets, and at some reduction in rates. Exchange has fluctuated to the extent of 1-16d., closing with a quiet feeling at that decline from last quotations. Government paper is 1-16 per cent. lower in Fours. Freights are weak, but the disinclination of owners to meet the lower views of shippers has latterly much restricted business. Imports show no improvement; but the firm attitude of manufacturers on the other side prevents any material decline in prices of staple goods, the slackness of demand and consequent increase of stocks notwithstanding.

MONEY.—Although following an increase of 39½ lacs disclosed by the previous return, the Presidency Bank's cash balance, according to the statement issued at the beginning of the week, showed a falling off of 8½ lacs, reducing the balance to some 348 lacs, the demand for money for the ordinary purposes of trade had not increased materially by the close of last week; and the almost stagnant state of the markets, with more holidays in view, holds out no prospect of expansion in this direction in the near future. The figures given in the return showed a sensible increase both in loans and bills discounted, which items, in the week covered by the previous return, had fallen off considerably in one case, and slightly in the other; but an accession of 11 lacs had meantime occurred in private deposits, reducing the net increase in trade requirements to about 2 lacs only, the other principal changes noticeable in the week under review having been some increase in Government securities held by the Bank, and a net falling off, to a small extent, in Government deposits. No change in rates was deemed necessary at the board meeting, and the Bank's minimum remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The up-country demand for staple grey goods continues very small, its slackness being partly accounted for by a want of rain in several consuming districts. Stocks are accumulating, but dealers refuse to give way in prices in consequence of the firmness in Manchester. Some of the mofussil buyers have offered to purchase large quantities of grey shirtings at a small reduction; but sellers have refused to accept offers below current rates. Bleached, Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods show no change whatever from last week. In local goods there is a considerable pressure of shirtings on the market, and weavers are prepared to make a considerable reduction in price to effect clearances, but they find no buyers. The off take of imported goods is estimated at 1,500 packages, and that of local goods at 1,010 bales.

YARNS.—There has been but little inquiry for imported twist, and only a small business has transpired in a quiet market, but with prices quite unchanged. The sales of local spinnings at Hong Kong are estimated at 4,000 bales, and those at Shanghai at 6,000 bales, making only 10,000 bales. Sales for the week ending Sept. 7, exchange not having moved either way. China buyers have, however, operated very freely, large sales having been made of 20s. and 10s. in an active market but at reduced prices; the better demand being due to the prospect that in a few days short time will be adopted by the Bombay cotton mills, millowners, with a few exceptions, having already agreed to suspend work on eight days in each month to the end of the year, in view of the present position of the industry in connection with the consuming markets. The sales for the week have aggregated some 15,000 bales.

METALS.—Copper and yellow metal have both been taken to a moderate extent on the basis of previous rates, the former market having been quiet in tone, and the latter steady. Only a small business has been passing in iron, and nails may be quoted 8 annas per cwt. lower, other descriptions being unchanged in value in a quiet market.

COAL.—Prices for this mineral continue to rule very low, especially for ready coal, a resale of Powell's Duffryn ex Knight Commander (s) having been made at 14 rs. per ton; the sale of a cargo of South Yorkshire on the way is also reported at 11½ rs. per ton.

Exports.—COTTON.—With native holidays superadded to the previously existing causes of dullness, there has been next to nothing doing in this staple, and the tone of the market from quiet has become dull, though previous prices have been generally quoted. Only about 1,500 bales, consisting mainly of Oomerawatte descriptions, have been taken by local consumers, whose requirements in the near future are likely to be curtailed by the short-time movement in connection with the Bombay mills, while for export only a few hundred bales of Oomras and Westerns have changed hands. The market closes with a steady feeling and with rates the same as they were quoted a week ago.

WHEAT.—A moderate business was passing in this article in a steady market when last mail left; but, by the close of the week, demand for export had further fallen off, and prices were quoted ½ to 1 a. per cwt. lower. Since then, on days when the market has not been closed for native holidays, the amount of business done has been small and the feeling quiet, while rates have further receded ½ to 1 a. per cwt.

SEEDS have attracted little attention from shippers, and the volume of business from day to day has been small when not stopped altogether by holidays, the tone of the market having been uniformly quiet. Prices of linseed and rapeseed gave way 1 a. per cwt. at the beginning of the week. Other kinds are unchanged.

Chlorodyne cannot possibly be dis-

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera, Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Sept. 15; Madras, Sept. 16; Bombay, Sept. 18.

The mail this week is very much behind time. Our last issue of the Homeward Mail was on the arrival of the mail on Sept. 28. As the Mirzapore with the next mail left Port Said at 10 A.M. yesterday, the next issue of this journal may be expected on Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning.

A Calcutta telegram says the Viceroy will leave Simla on Oct. 14, and will visit Cashmere, Gwalior, Bhopal, and Indore, reaching Calcutta on Nov. 28.

A Simla despatch adds:—Lord Lansdowne will enter Srinagar, the capital of Cashmere, on Oct. 23, and will be escorted up the River Jhelum by a procession of boats. On the following day his Excellency will be entertained at a State banquet given in his honour.

With reference to the statements that have recently been made respecting the post of Commander-in-Chief in India, we are requested to state that no successor to Sir Frederick Roberts has been appointed.

A Calcutta telegram of Oct. 7, however, states that the Viceroy, Sir F. Roberts, and General Brackenbury have all recommended Sir George White as the next Commander-in-Chief.

Sir James and Lady Lyall start immediately, a Simla telegram of Sept. 17 says, for a trip up the Shali beyond Mashobra. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab leaves Simla on Oct. 10.

At a public meeting on Sept. 11 it was resolved that the Simla farewell to Sir James and Lady Lyall should take the form of a picnic and a Gymkhana at Anandale. A memento will also be presented. A large and distinguished committee have been appointed to carry out the arrangements.

Her Majesty's cruiser Scout, under the command of Prince Louis of Battenberg, arrived on Oct. 1 at La Goletta. The Prince soon afterwards called upon M. Massicault, the French Resident-General, and upon General Leclerc, who at once returned his Highness's visit. Prince Louis was afterwards received by the Bey of Tunis.

Lieutenant-Colonel Warburton, Political Officer in charge of the Khyber, was at Simla on short leave when the mail left. It is satisfactory to know, says the Pioneer, that the good relations with the tribes holding the Pass have not been the least disturbed, in spite of the excitement along the frontier during the expeditions carried on in the early part of the year.

Mr. Mahomed Shah Din, a graduate of the University of Lahore, who was not long since called to the English Bar, has put forth an appeal to his countrymen to raise a fund for improving the sanitary condition of Mecca, and abating that frightful mortality among Mohamedan pilgrims both on sea and land, of which we have lately published some details. The poor people of Mecca, Mr. Shah Din states, are not to blame, nor does the responsibility lie at the door of the Sultan of Turkey or the Indian Government. It is the well-to-do Mussulmans of India who are, in his view, responsible. More than 200,000 people assemble for several days in the small valley of Mecca to perform their religious rites, and sacrifice at Mina "between 70,000 and 80,000 animals on one afternoon." How is it possible for them to do this without being afflicted with severe epidemic disease, so long as no effective sanitary arrangements are made?

Of six hundred memorials sent to Messrs. King, King and Co., Bombay, regarding the subject of accelerated promotion in the Staff Corps, only seventy-eight, says the Times of India, were from Madras officers. There are 402 officers of the Madras Staff Corps of the rank of Major downwards, so only one man in five has sent in a petition.

The local branches of the Uncovenanted Service Association in India have approved the views expressed by the Simla Committee, and urge the adoption of more vigorous measures, and the re-forming of the Calcutta Committee on broader basis.

The future policy of the Government with regard to Manipore is sufficiently indicated, the Times of India remarks, by the selection of Chura Chand, the five-year-old great-grandson of Raja Nar Singh, as Raja—not Maharaja: the distinction is important. During the minority of the young Raja, Major Maxwell will practically administer the State, and the present small force will probably be retained there. The succession will be by primogeniture, the succession of brothers having already caused disaster enough. A tribute will be imposed upon the State, and the principle of absolute subordination to the British Government will not be departed from. Indeed, it hardly could be, seeing that Chura Chand receives the State from the hands of the Queen-Empress, he himself having no sort of claim to the gadi.

The members of the Leprosy Commission to India, which was sent out to that country by the Executive Committee of the National Leprosy Fund, of which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is president, are now on their way home. Dr. G. A. Buckmaster, of St. George's Hospital, arrived in this country a few days ago. The Report of the Commissioners, which will deal fully with the questions as to the propagation of leprosy by heredity and contagion, may be expected towards the end of this year.

The Assam Coolie Question was before the Viceroy's Council when the mail left, and definite orders may be issued shortly.

It is understood that the scheme of fortification for Rawul Pindi has been sanctioned. The estimated works will cost upwards of 30 lacs.

The Government having sanctioned the commencement of the Attock defence works, the executive engineer, Major Shone, R.E., and his office, which was lately removed to Rawul Pindi, would go back to Attock at once, as the work was to be commenced from Oct. 1. Major Shone would have to be called back from leave, which was granted conditionally.

A conference will probably be held at Quetta towards the end of November, on Sir Robert Sandeman's return, at which the question of fuel and fodder supplies will be discussed. Mr. R. Ribbentrop, inspector-general of Forests, and Dr. King, director of Geological Survey, will probably attend.

The Government of India has been called upon by the Secretary of State for the returns asked for at the suggestion of Mr. Maclean, showing the expenditure for the last ten years on railways and roads on the north-western and western frontier and the outlay in subsidies to the tribal chiefs, and generally on the political management of the borderland. The return will be a very costly one, and give much trouble.

It is stated that the case of Mr. Hugh R. Hearson, late engineer R.N., will shortly again engage the attention of the English Law Courts. It will be remembered that he was arrested at the instance of the Naval authorities at Singapore in November last while on his way to China, and was brought back to this country for trial by court-martial. He was subsequently released by order of the Court of Queen's Bench under a writ of habeas corpus. Mr. Hearson instituted an action for damages for illegal arrest and detention, and Admirals Sir R. Vesey Hamilton and Henry Fairfax, Lords of the Admiralty, are among the defendants.

The French explorer, M. Joseph Martin, has arrived at Marghilan in the Russian-Turkestan province of Ferghana, after the successful accomplishment of his scientific researches in China and on the borders of Thibet.

The new Expedition to the Himalayas, organised by the Royal Geographical Society, for the purpose of making topographical researches and explorations on the glaciers, will be placed under the direction of Mr. O. Eckenstein.

An unprecedented rise of the river at Lucknow, to a height of five feet above the ordinary road, has done great damage to the native houses. The flood, a telegram says, is gradually subsiding.

The Government of India has declined to grant any further concession to the promoters of the Simla-Kalka Railway, and expressed the opinion that the line is not urgently required. The project is likely to be dropped, at least for some time.

The survey of the railway line from Midnapore to Sini, on the Bengal-Nagpore system, has been completed. The full survey from Howrah to Midnapore will probably be undertaken, as only a reconnaissance so far has been made.

The Secretary of State has given formal sanction to the construction of the Gauhati-Lumding section of the Assam-Bengal Railway.

The construction of the Assam-Burma road has been sanctioned. It goes from the river via Golaghat and Nichugard to Kohima and Manipore along the present track, and then by the new line to Kendat on the Chindwin River. Only the survey has yet been sanctioned. Construction may be delayed for financial reasons.

The Pioneer's statement that a line is to be made from Peshawur to Michni is, the Madras Times is informed on the best authority, incorrect.

It is intended during the ensuing cold weather to make a road from Gilgit to Chalt and Chaprote easily practicable for all arms. This step, says the Times of India, should effectually prevent the Hunza and Nagar tribesmen from repeating their old tactics on the Cashmere border.

A Simla telegram of Sept. 17 says:—Reuter's alarmist telegrams from Europe have caused much excitement in Simla, and there is some talk of Russian activity on the Afghan frontier. There is, however, no ground for such rumours in the direction of the Lower Oxus beyond the fact that the Russians are pressing for an improved position on the Afghan side of the frontier for one of their outposts, the reason they assign being that the water-courses leading from Afghan territory have been allowed to deteriorate to the injury of the health of the present Russian position. It is not in this direction, however, but in that of Badakshan that trouble is to be anticipated. Further aggression in Roshan, Wakhan, and other Khanates subject to the Ameer, might lead to serious complications.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Oct. 7:—The Ameer is anxious for a mission to visit Cabul. The Government of India is opposed to the idea, but has invited the Ameer to meet the Viceroy in India. The Ameer will not reply to the invitation, but has issued a proclamation stating that he intends to visit England. No official intimation to this effect has, however, reached the Foreign Office.

Cabul letters show that the belief still prevails with many there that the Russian spy, Ali Khan, who is still under surveillance, but well treated in Cabul, is General Alikhanoff. They say that no news had been received for some time from reliable sources of Alikhanoff's whereabouts, and add that Ali Khan was travelling incognito, and admitted that he had taken part in the Penjdeh business.

CAPTAIN A. C. YATE's opinions on the future of the Beloochistan Frontier Force, as set forth in a communication to the Pioneer of Sept. 3, will be received with interest even by those who do not agree with him. The late SIR CHARLES MACGREGOR was confident that something might be done with the races of Beloochistan. "Were an officer," he wrote, "who was really fond of Beloochees entrusted with the task, I think we might raise several Belooch regiments that would more than justify their entertainment in the hour of trial." But it must be admitted that the experiments made in this direction have not as yet been very successful; and it will most certainly be a long time before a Beloochistan Frontier Force can be brought to a state of efficiency in any way comparable with that attained by the Punjab Frontier Force almost as soon as it was enrolled. Whether it is to the difference between Pathan and Belooch, or to some inherent defect in the organisation of the Bombay Army, that we must ascribe this result, it is impossible to say, though a discussion of the subject would be incomplete without a careful consideration of both points. There is another point, too, which ought not to be overlooked. Military men with a longer and wider experience than CAPTAIN YATE can boast of are not altogether satisfied that it is wise to rely as much as we do on the frontier races for military service—on the warlike races that is, who occupy the north-west and west frontier. They say we have already too many Pathans in the Indian Army.

The following have been admitted to Sandhurst as candidates for the Indian Staff Corps under the new Regulations:—

QUEEN'S CADETS (4).—R. Dudgeon, C. R. Harbord, R. M. Hall, and E. G. W. Pratt.

QUEEN'S INDIA CADETS (9).—B. M. L. Brodhurst, W. F. Stewart, G. A. Watts, E. G. Barwell, E. C. Corbyn, J. D. Cadell, J. E. Hughes, G. M. G. Parker, and P. H. Dundas.

HONORARY QUEEN'S INDIA CADETS (2).—B. H. B. Magrath and S. K. B. Rice.

ORDINARY CANDIDATES (5).—Order of merit: W. B. T. Abbey, 1; R. L. Ricketts, 2; J. H. K. Stewart, 3; C. I. F. O. Johnes, 4; and John Corlett, 10.

A marriage has been arranged, and will take place in Lucknow early next month, between Major A. E. Duthy, of the Royal Horse Artillery, and Miss Madeline A. Price, eldest daughter of Mr. James Price, of Broxbourne, Hertfordshire.

Messrs. Henderson Brothers of the Anchor Line launched a new steamer on Tuesday, at Meadowside, Glasgow. The ceremony of naming the steamer, the Algeria, was performed by Mrs. T. Henderson, junior, of 47 Maresfield Gardens, London. The Algeria is a vessel of 4,358 tons burthen, and has been specially built for the Indian Service of the Anchor Line.

The 2nd battalion of the Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment), stationed at Woolwich, has orders to prepare a draft of 150 men to join the 1st battalion at Quetta, and the detachment will sail for India in the Euphrates on Nov. 12, to reach Bombay about Dec. 8. Captain E. Foster and Lieutenant A. V. Johnson will go out with the draft.

The following letter has been received by Mr. Alfred J. Cooper, of the P. and O. steamer Massilia, from the Board of Trade:—

Sept. 30, 1891.

SIR,—I have to inform you that the Queen has been pleased to confer upon you the accompanying Albert Medal of the Second Class, as a mark of her appreciation of your gallant conduct in saving a Lascar from drowning in the Gulf of Aden on April 8, 1890.

I have had great pleasure in recommending the case as one deserving of such a noble distinction, and it affords me much gratification to be the medium of conferring the distinction upon you.—Yours faithfully,

M. E. HICKS BEACH.

On the reverse of the medal is inscribed:—"Presented in the name of her Majesty to Alfred John Cooper, fourth officer of the P. and O. steamer Massilia, in recognition of his gallantry in saving a Lascar from drowning in the Gulf of Aden, April 8, 1890."

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Oct. 7:—

From information gathered at Madras, from official and non-official sources, I am certain that the state of the people will for some time demand vigilant attention. The rainfall in the affected districts amounts practically to nothing, and the attempt to grow dry crops has proved a failure. For months past the people have subsisted on a scanty supply of food. All depends on the expected monsoon; if it is timely and the rain plentiful, there will be no famine, but for the next four months there must be great distress. The Government has realised the gravity of the situation, and has been prompt in carrying out relief works. Lord Wenlock is about to visit Salem, the centre of the distressed area. The seriously-affected districts are North Arcot, Chingleput, and Coimbatore, which cover an area of 4,000 square miles, and contain a population of more than a million. The less affected districts are Cuddapah, Nellore, South Arcot, Salem, Madura, and Tinnevely.

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office:—

"From Viceroy, Oct. 3, 1891.—There is an improvement in Madras consequent on rain. Mysore in need of more rain. Rain has fallen where most wanted, in Upper Burma. Rajpootana in an unsatisfactory condition."

"From Governor, Madras, Oct. 2, 1891.—During past fortnight there has been considerable improvement in Nellore, Cuddapah, North Arcot, Chingleput, South Arcot, and Salem, owing to good falls of rain; condition of Bellary, Madura, and Coimbatore remains unchanged. Serious rise in the price of dry grains has occurred up to Sept. 26 last in all districts, except for northern and two west-coast districts, no doubt due to continued failure of south-west monsoon rains; trade active, and no reason to apprehend short supplies; all now depends on character of north-east monsoon shortly due. Number of persons employed on relief works, 8,090 in Chingleput, 11,399 in North Arcot, 6,716 in Coimbatore, about 4,500 in Salem, 3,582 in Nellore, 1,984 in Cuddapah; numbers on gratuitous relief, 2,161 in Chingleput, 4,708 in North Arcot, 434 in Coimbatore."

G U P.

INVITATIONS had been issued in Simla to a bal masqué, to be given at the Town Hall by the "Knights of the Order of the Black Heart," on Sept. 21, at which masques and dominoes were to be compulsory for gentlemen and dancers, but optional for chaperones. It is likely, says an Indian paper in anticipation, to be an exceedingly popular entertainment, although "Black-Heart Knights" does not sound very well unless very distinctly pronounced.

Great regret is felt in the Seaforth Highlanders at Colonel and Mrs. Hilton's departure from the regiment. The gallant colonel relinquishes the command, and he and Mrs. Hilton have proceeded into Cashmere for two months before leaving for England. The regiment, says a contemporary, is in splendid order, with highly-disciplined men, and, while we feel sure that their late colonel must be proud of their good form and esprit de corps, we heartily sympathise with him in leaving such a fine body of soldiers, with whom he has been for so long associated. In Mrs. Hilton the women and children have had a kind and sincere friend. Colonel Hilton is succeeded in the command by Major Grant, who is a son of the veteran Field-Marshal Sir Patrick Grant, Governor of Chelsea Hospital.

The Poona correspondent of the Times of India writes on Sept. 16:—The annual Club ball came off to-night at the Club of Western India, and was, it is almost needless to say, very numerous attended, the invitations being accepted in almost every case. His Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris and a large party from Ganesh Khind were present, as also were his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and staff, and the major-general commanding the division. The guests were received, as they arrived, at the carpeted steps by the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore, C.S., the club president, Mr. Tom Le Mesurier, the indefatigable and energetic secretary, and the members of the committee; and the string of carriages conveying the bidden guests continued to pour in till past ten o'clock, by which time, and, indeed, at an earlier hour, the handsome ball-room was well filled. The internal arrangements, no less than the outdoor arrangements, reflected the greatest credit upon all present, and it is satisfactory to note that the rain very graciously held off, and did not mar the pleasure of the proceedings as was the case last year. The decorations were very effective, while the numerous large glittering chandeliers, suspended from the roof of the ball-room and the ante-room, lighted up the whole place very brilliantly. The covered verandah on the west of the ball-room had been arranged as a sitting-out apartment, and chairs and sofas were also placed in other cosy little arbours outside, in the garden, which was made bright with hundreds of Chinese lanterns, which waved gently to and fro in the soft breezes. The roadway leading from the western gate to the portico at the Club entrance was lined on either side with numerous little lamps of various colours, while here and there were posts, upon which little lamps were fixed in the form of stars. Altogether, the scene was one of great splendour, and the ball was voted an unqualified success.

ONE INDIAN CAREER.

The punkah swings:

Restless I toss upon the cot
In the strange Indian room,
Wond'ring if prudence cast my lot
In my new life. A gloom,
Dark as the stilly night without,
Presses me down. I would not doubt,
I fain would take my ebbing pluck
Firm in both hands, and face my luck.

—The punkah swings!

The punkah swings:

Fortune has seemed to smile: the girl,
For whom I crossed the seas,
Sleeps here beside me; and a curl,
Responsive to the breeze
The noiseless punkah makes, doth rise
And fall above her sleep-bound eyes
On the broad forehead, where is writ
The wisdom mingling with her wit:

—The punkah swings!

The punkah swings:

Our firstborn blinks at it, and crows
As if 'twere made for him!
His mother kneels beside. God knows
Why now my eyes grow dim!
Thus far I've sped, why then lose heart?
Will not He stay? The strength to start
He gave in answer to our prayers—
Surely my joys outweigh my cares?

—The punkah swings!

The punkah swings:

And I can count the measured beat
That tells how moments fly,
Till men shall come, with shuffling feet,
To lift what now doth lie
Beneath its swing. The coffin holds
The treasured form, for Death enfolds
What once Sleep held. My gentle love
Has left me, and has gone above.

—The punkah swings!

The punkah swings:

Each swish I know may be my last,
My Indian work is done:
Gone all my doubt, all worry past,
No more I'll see the sun.
The nurse, who's waiting for the end,
Pities the man without a friend—
The worn sad man who's outlived all.
I'm free: I go: I hear her call!

—The punkah swings!

G. C.—(Madras Times).

The Bangalore correspondent of the Madras Times (Sept. 8) writes:—The elements were decidedly damp this afternoon when the match between Arthur Hancock, the 50 miles Champion "ped.," and Colour-Sergeant Cummin, of the 2nd battalion (P.W.O.) Yorkshire Regiment, came off on the Bangalore Gymkhana. The rain evidently frightened a good many of the natives away, but the European element was in strong force, and in gharries and underneath trees, or in the Gymkhana pavilion, or out in the open round the course, with umbrellas and without them, watched the contest with the keenest interest. The stake was for 500 rs., and the conditions of the match were that Hancock should give Cummin a mile and cover a greater distance of ground in the hour. The Yorkshireman is a tall, fair, sturdy specimen of an Englishman. He scales 13st. 3lbs. and stands 5 ft. 9½ in. in his stockings, is twenty-eight years of age, and is a pukka Yorkshireman, having first seen daylight in Bradford. His trainer was Armourer-Sergeant Erskine, 2nd battalion Yorkshire Regiment. The difference between the two men as they got on to the scratch was seen at a glance, Hancock's lithe, slim, wiry physique contrasting conspicuously with that of his opponent. The men walked over a two-furlong track picked out with flags. The ground had been measured in the morning by Hancock and the Yorkshireman's trainer, and also by Mr. Temple, Public Works Department. Mr. Dignum kindly undertook the matter of time-keeping, and Mr. T. C. Smith acted as referee and judge. The time fixed was 5.30, and, about five minutes after, both men emerged from the pavilion clad in their walking rig. They lost no time in getting away, and Hancock soon put on the pace and finally covered in the hour 7 miles and about 100 yards to Cummin's 5 miles, 6 furlongs, and about 115 yards. Cummin walked gamely, and his performance was an excellent one. He stuck to the track well, and did not seem much done up at the finish. Both men were repeatedly cheered. The 4th Pioneer band was in attendance.

The Deccan Standard says:—We find that the Safir-i-Deccan, the vernacular paper that was published within the Residency limits at Chudderghat, has followed the lead of the Deccan Times, and has stopped publication. The list of newspapers in Native States which have voluntarily stopped publication since the new rules of the Government of India regarding newspapers came into force is becoming a long one. The last that has discontinued publication is a weekly Hindi newspaper of long standing, and probably, in the course of a few months more, every newspaper in a Native State will have ceased to exist.

The correspondent of the N. C. Herald sends from Hangchow the following curious tale:—A few days ago, two friends were drinking tea in a tea shop and one of them made the payment in cash. The waiter returned one of the cash and asked him to give him a better one. An altercation then occurred, and the case was settled by the decision of the bystanders that the two friends should beg the waiter's pardon. This they did, but after leaving the shop they felt the shame so keenly that they could not bear it, so they purchased one dollar's worth of opium and swallowed it between them, and went back to the tea-shop and died there. This was too much for the proprietor of the shop, so he swallowed opium with the purpose of putting an end to the trouble this calamity was bringing on him. He came near dying also, but was saved by vigorous efforts. All this occurred over one cash of questionable value.

AN ODE TO CAINE.

Truthful Caine ! truthful Caine ! try it on, my boy, again ;
Your veracity is charming, don't you know—don't you know !
And the "gentleman" whose letters are but lies about his betters
Has let you in at last for a show—holy show !
And you play your part divinely, don't you know !
Truthless Caine ! truthless Caine !—you've been called it plump and plain

By a man who digs the truth out for himself, don't you know !
For he says that your assertions are all twaddle and aspersions
On our heavy worked officials in the plains, here below—
Who are doing more than you are—don't you know !

Silence, Caine ! silence, Caine !—your tongue, man, is a bane,
For discretion does not guide it in its speech, don't you know !
And as for your epistles—why they are like a field of thistles,
Food for asses—or yourself—or correspondent—don't you know !
Tell the truth—we like it naked—don't you know !
Silly Caine ! silly Caine ! is each lesson to be vain,
Can't you get a little wiser—don't you know, don't you know !
Just curb your growling bias, sack your native Ananias
And cross the briny ocean, P. and O., P. and O.
Come and see us, and we'll wine you—don't you know !
Mighty Caine ! mighty Caine ! if you come to us again
We'll take you to the ryot, don't you know, don't you know !
And instead of Hindoo fooling you shall have some wholesome schooling

That will open wide your optics, if you'll go—if you'll go
Where Wenlock now is keeping back the foe—don't you know !

PERSONAL.

THE Hon. Colonel Pemberton, says an Indian paper, is not likely to make a tour unless continued in office as member for the Public Works Department beyond January. He may visit Rupas head works and a few places on the direct line to Calcutta.

Colonel Parry Nisbet has been granted an extension of leave till May. It is almost certain he will not return to Cashmere.

The statement that Colonel Money is returning as manager of the Darbhunga Raj is unfounded. No appointment has yet been made.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durand was to leave Simla for Gilgit on Sept. 19, arriving at his post about Oct. 10.

Major Martin, private secretary to the Maharaja of Mysore, is about to vacate his appointment, and will be succeeded by Major Campbell, his brother-in-law.

The Asian writes:—Brigade-Surgeon A. C. Gaye has been appointed an administrative medical officer in the Bengal Presidency, vice Deputy Surgeon-General P. B. Smith, whose tour expires in November next. Calcutta sportsmen will be only too pleased to welcome "Mr. Herbert," and we trust that, despite his having recently gone into double harness, we shall sometimes see him in the saddle.

Mr. Tupper, chief secretary to the Punjab Government, probably returns to India at the end of December, when Mr. Fanshawe may take furlough.

Mr. H. S. Stanley Clarke, assistant district superintendent of police in the North-West Provinces, has retired on a gratuity.

It is incorrect that Mr. Baines and Mr. O'Connor have been appointed a committee on the proposed Statistical Bureau. No such committee, it is stated, will be appointed.

The engineer staff of the Assam-Chittagong Railway has not yet been appointed. Mr. Upcot, now in England, will be offered the post of chief engineer. He is not due in India till the end of January.

Mrs. Van Ingen, M.D., has been engaged by the Dufferin Fund Committee, Simla, for service in Ceylon.

On Sept. 15 Mr. and Mrs. Pranjeewandas Culliandas gave an afternoon party to Mr. H. A. Acworth, C.S., Municipal Commissioner of Bombay, at their residence, Green Villa, Tardeo, previous to his departure for Europe to enjoy his privilege leave for two months.

The Government of India has sanctioned a compassionate allowance of 16 rs. each per mensem to Daniell O'Brien and Isaac O'Brien, the two brothers of the late Signaller O'Brien, who was murdered during the outbreak at Manipore, the allowance to cease on each lad attaining the age of eighteen years.

An Allahabad telegram of Sept. 13 says:—Consequent on the retirement of Colonel Ross on the 22nd inst., Major Talbot will be confirmed as Resident in the Persian Gulf. Colonel Tweedie vacates his appointment as Resident of Bagdad on Oct. 31. Colonel Peacock, now on leave in England, will succeed him; Colonel Mockler, Political Agent at Muscat, acting until the latter's return.

A Simla telegram of Sept. 14, in reference to the same subject, says:—It is probable that the changes among the Persian Gulf Politicals have been somewhat incorrectly reported. Colonel Peacock has been appointed Resident of Bagdad, vice Colonel Tweedie, but as he becomes a Resident of the second grade, it is probable he will remain at Jeypore, while Colonel Prideaux will continue as Resident of Cashmere. Captain Stewart, Political Department, will go from Cashmere to Gilgit for the winter. Lieutenant Williams, 43rd Goorkhas, relieves Lieutenant Stewart, 5th Goorkhas, who returns to take up the adjutancy of his regiment.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Sir John Pope Hennessy, M.P. for North Kilkenny, died at his residence, Rostellan Castle, near Queenstown, on Oct. 7. He had been in precarious health for some time, but no apprehensions were felt by his immediate friends on that account. The immediate cause of death was failure of the heart's action. Sir John Pope Hennessy was born in Cork in 1834, and was called to the bar at the Inner Temple in 1861. He entered the House of Commons as member for the King's County in 1859, and was the first Catholic Conservative in Parliament. He opposed the Government system of education in Ireland, on the ground that the so-called national system was anti-national. He voted for Church rates, and in favour of the Church of England in England; but supported concurrent endowment in Ireland, by which the Irish ecclesiastical property founded before the Reformation would be restored to the Catholic Church, and some ancient abbeys in Ireland revived. In foreign affairs he exposed the conduct of the Russian Government in Poland, and moved an address to the Crown to carry out the stipulations of the Treaty of Vienna in favour of the Poles; he criticised the conduct of Lord Palmerston and Mr. Gladstone in their attacks on the Pope, and supported the independence of the Sovereign Pontiff. (He opposed the war in China and the bombardment of ports in Japan, but supported the Northern States during the American Civil War. He voted against the New Zealand War, but supported the claims of the Australian Colonies to complete legislative independence of Downing Street. He was appointed Governor of Labuan in 1867; of the West African Settlements in 1872; of the Bahamas in 1873; of the Windward Islands in 1875; of Hong Kong in 1877; and of the Colony of Mauritius in December 1882. On more than one occasion Sir John's conduct as Governor provoked remonstrances, the latest instance being disagreement with Mr. Clifford Lloyd, which led to questions in Parliament, and the despatch of Sir Hercules Robinson to Mauritius to investigate the quarrel. He was created a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in April 1880. In December last year, Sir John Pope Hennessy was elected for North Kilkenny in the Anti-Parnellite interest, after a keen contest, in which he received 2,527 votes against 1,365 polled by Mr. Scully, the Parnellite candidate.

Lieutenant W. E. Norris, of the 2nd battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, died on Sept. 12 at Poona of intermittent fever. He had been sick for fifteen days, but was present at a recent brigade parade. His age was twenty-eight. The funeral took place the same evening with full military honours. The whole of the Lancashire Fusiliers Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Goldsmith, and nearly all the military and civil officers in the station, including Major-General Blundell, commanding the district, Lieutenant-General Pottinger, military secretary to Government, the Hon. Mr. Moore, member of Council, and Mr. Reid, the collector, attended, and also a large number of ladies and natives. Mr. Norris' death, a telegram says, has cast a great gloom over all the station, and the races which were to have been held have been postponed. The Rev. Mr. Harrison officiated at the funeral.

A telegram from Ootacamund, dated Sept. 7, says:—The sudden death of Mr. Philip Smith, solicitor of this place, came as a great blow to his family and friends. On Saturday morning, the 5th instant, he was apparently quite well and enjoyed a game of tennis; whether it was this exertion that caused his death we do not know, but about the middle of the day he was seized with a sudden faintness and died in a few minutes. Heart disease was doubtless the cause of his death. Mr. Philip Smith was a highly respectable citizen of Ootacamund, and had been practising here as a solicitor for many years. His loss will be felt by many people who knew him well, beyond his own family. By his expressed wish Mr. Smith was buried yesterday with full Masonic honours. He was a Past Master of the Lodge "Faith, Hope, and Charity," and his brethren in the craft were glad to be able to carry out his last wish.

The death is reported of Miss Pratt, Lady Superintendent of the Bombay Presidency Training School for Mistresses, Egmore. She was taken ill on Sept. 12 with cholera, to which she succumbed next morning. The late Miss Pratt succeeded Miss Carr as superintendent of the Institution. She arrived in India in March 1889; she was trained in Whiteland's College, where she was a short time a teacher. She won a name for herself among both English and Hindoo pupils by the zeal and energy she displayed in the discharge of her duties, and succeeded in relieving the monotony of school routine from the beginning of this year by the formation of a club for out-door and in-door games, which was greatly appreciated by both students and pupils.

News has been received of the death of Raja Shanker Singh of Bilram, in the Etah District, on whom the British Government conferred the title of Raja Bahadur, eleven years ago, as a personal distinction. The deceased was noted for his charity and public spirit, was an honorary magistrate and a member of both the Municipal and District Boards. His untimely death is a loss that will be felt by his fellow-citizens, among whom he was much loved and respected. His son, Kunwar Sheo Raj Singh, succeeds to the estate.

THE SUPREME LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

At the Legislative Council on Sept. 17 Sir Alexander Miller presented a report to the Select Committee on the Bill to Amend the Law of Evidence with respect to Bankers' Books, and stated that no material alteration had been made in the suggestions already brought forward. It is ordained that a certified copy of any entry in a banker's book shall in all legal proceedings be regarded as prima facie evidence of the existence of such an entry, and shall be admitted as evidence to the same extent as the original entry is now by law admissible. No officer of a bank shall be compelled to produce any banker's book in any legal case in which the bank is not a party unless by order of the Court. On an application a judge may order that a party may be at liberty to inspect and take copies of entries in a banker's book, or may order the bank to prepare and produce certified copies of the required entries. A judge may order the costs of any application, &c., to be paid to any party by a bank if they have been incurred in consequence of improper delay on the part of the bank. The Bill as amended applies to all registered and incorporated banks, but local Governments are empowered to extend the Act to other banks on certain conditions.

The presentation of reports by the Select Committees on the Punjab and Burma Municipal Bills having been postponed, the Council adjourned till October 1.

REORGANISATION OF THE NATIVE INFANTRY.

THE Commander-in-Chief in India presided at a lecture given by Lieutenant-Colonel Young, Assistant Quartermaster-General, on Sept. 10 at the United Service Institution, Simla, on the Reorganisation of the Native Infantry.

Sir Frederick Roberts said: It is a great pleasure to me to preside at the meeting assembled to hear a lecture on such an important subject as that of the reorganisation of our native infantry. It is one upon which the efficiency of the army in India so largely depends that its discussion cannot fail to prove instructive, not only to those who belong to the particular branch of the service with which it deals, but to everyone interested in India. That the writer of the essay which gained the Special Silver Medal of this Institution in 1888 should treat this subject in an able and exhaustive manner is only to be expected. Having read the lecture, I feel sure that such expectation will be realised, and I think you will find that the question has been taken up by Lieutenant-Colonel Young in a spirit worthy of the very difficult task he has set himself. Amongst an audience so conversant with the history and traditions of the native army, and so intimately acquainted with its requirements, yet whose knowledge has been acquired from very different points of view, owing to the variety in race and religion of the men of whom it is composed, it is impossible that there should not be differences of opinion regarding some of the details of the scheme which is about to be placed before it. Some of you have doubtless got deeply-rooted opinions, and perhaps pet schemes for the solution of the great problem of how best to increase the efficiency of our native infantry; but even if you have, I am confident you will one and all find much food for reflection, and gain some new ideas from this lecture. I remember being struck, as long ago as 1885, by a paper of Colonel Young's on this subject published in the Journal of this institution, in which the outline of the scheme now put forward was hinted at. Although the drastic measures now advocated were not proposed, it seemed to me that the suggestions made were worthy of consideration. The question is such a large one, and involves so many issues of a financial and political, as well as of a purely military nature, that without much serious thought, and a very careful weighing of the varied considerations which have to be taken into account, I am not prepared to express a definite opinion on many of the points raised. This, however, I may say, that I believe that any reorganisation of the native infantry which may eventually be decided on, will be, to a great extent, on the lines of Colonel Young's lecture. These provide, in particular, for two great wants which have been, and still are, much felt—namely, a sufficiency of British officers in the fighting line, and a more extended field of employment for native officers. On the first point it is unnecessary for me to enlarge, as we are probably all agreed that financial reasons alone have limited the number of British officers with our native regiments. With regard to the second point I believe there are few of us who have thought seriously over the best means of increasing the utility of the Indian Army, to whom the present position of the native officer has not appeared to require improvement. (Hear, hear.) It is a subject which has been brought to notice on more than one occasion during the last five or six years, and has attracted the attention not only of the outside public, but also of Army Headquarters, and the Government of India. No problem connected with the native army presents, perhaps, so many difficulties, and, in endeavouring to solve it, it is necessary to proceed with much deliberation. No one can be more anxious than I am to increase the responsibilities of a class which fills so important a position in the native army, a class, too, which has afforded so many examples of devotion to duty and conspicuous bravery. But as things are at present, difficulties crop up at every turn, and the progress is necessarily, and, as I have said, advisedly, slow. (Hear, hear.) I feel sure, ladies and gentlemen, you will agree with me that anyone who contributes ideas for the accomplishment of our wishes in this respect is deserving of our gratitude: and I shall be surprised if you do not also agree with me that Colonel Young has earned it for himself. (Applause.)

Lieutenant-Colonel Young, in his opening remarks, pointed out that in India we had, in seeking for the best organisation for war, a much more difficult problem than they have in Europe; for we had to satisfy several very conflicting conditions:—

1. We have to find the best organisation for meeting European troops on a modern battle-field; of course all else should give way to this.

2. But, besides this, any proposals made must also provide for a thoroughly efficient garrison for India; and the organisation which is best for the first is not necessarily best for the second.

3. And on the top of this again we have also to satisfy certain half-political half-sentimental considerations, which are apt to conflict greatly with what is best for (1) and (2).

Our native infantry had hitherto been organised to meet Asiatic enemies, but now that preparations had to be made for facing Europeans a new organisation was inevitable. The organisation to be sought for was one embodying the following conditions: the greatest possible fighting power on the battle-field; a smooth, methodical, and efficient mobilisation; satisfactory arrangements for garrisoning India; if possible, some way of improving the position of the native officer.

The lecturer pronounced strongly in favour of the company as the tactical unit, its strength to be 110 privates on the theatre of war and between 70 and 80 men on the actual battle-field. Eight of such companies would form a battalion. Each company would require 6 havildars, 6 naiks, 6 lance-naiks, and 2 drummers; of these 1 havildar, 2 naiks, and 2 lance-naiks would not be present in the battle-field, their services being required for small guards, escorts, &c. After giving a vivid description of a battle in which the company is the tactical unit, Lieutenant-Colonel Young continued:—

And who is to command this tactical unit and take it through all that such a day means, besides making a successful result possible by long and careful training for it beforehand? I said that nothing short of the very best leading in the world will do it, that is, will carry our native infantry company through this and bring it out right side uppermost at the other end. Nothing short of the best will do here, and for this we must have the officer whom none in the world can touch as a leader of men—the one who, whether he equals them or not in the book part of it, beats Russians and French and German and every one else at this—the British officer. I submit that nothing else will make a native infantry company bear itself as it must do, or be destroyed; that any other opinion can but be due to a failure to realise the conditions involved; and that this is an essential item in any reorganisation of our native infantry for such a purpose as meeting the style of troops one means when one speaks of European troops in modern war. The native cavalry branch, whatever else it may lack, has at all events for years had the inestimable advantage of having its tactical unit commanded by a British officer; the admirable result we all know well, and what the native infantry so urgently needs, and has long needed, is to be given the same advantage, and to have its tactical unit so commanded also. It has little or nothing to do with the capability of the native officer; let him be as capable as possible, it will not alter the matter one jot. Its cause lies not in any failure on the part of the native officer who is to command, but in the character of the sepoy who is to be commanded, and who will, under a British officer, perform feats of endurance and bravery against heavy odds (witness Grant at Thobal), which nothing would induce him even to attempt under a man of his own race. All Indian history proves this; its roots lie deep in the national characteristics of the two races; and no excellence on the part of the native officer will ever alter it. I may also call to mind that all through the period when the native army performed its greatest deeds, all through Lord Lake's campaigns, and Sir Arthur Wellesley's campaigns, the company of native infantry was commanded by a British officer.

Lieutenant-Colonel Young then proceeded to sketch the organisation which he held to be necessary to enable native troops to successfully oppose European troops in the field. Dealing with the Bengal Presidency only, he proposed that of the 64 battalions of infantry 56 should be coupled up into 28 double-battalion regiments, 8 being kept as special corps. The 28 regiments would be: 15 Punjab, 6 Goorkha, 7 Hindustani. The two battalions of this double-battalion regiment would be organised differently, because their purpose is different. In the first battalion all the company officers would be British, and the only native officers would be in the position of the regimental staff; in the second battalion all the company officers would be native, and the only British officers would be in the position of regimental staff. In the first battalion there would be 20 British officers and 3 native; in the second battalion 4 British officers and 19 native; total 23 officers in each battalion.

The officers in the 1st battalion would be: 1 lieutenant-colonel, 1 major, 8 captains, 10 lieutenants (all British), 1 subedar-major, 2 jemadars. The non-commissioned officers and sepoys would be: 8 company havildar-majors, 40 havildars, 48 naicks, 16 drummers, 928 sepoys (8 companies of 116 each).

The second battalion would be officered as follows:—1 lieutenant-colonel, 1 major, 1 lieutenant and adjutant, 1 lieutenant and quartermaster (all British), 1 subedar-major, 8 subedars, 10 jemadars (including native adjutant and native quartermaster).

In peace time each battalion would have, approximately, 800 privates in the ranks; on mobilisation the second battalion would complete the first battalion to a war strength of 1,040 men. Further arrangements would be as follows:—All recruits and all reservists should belong to the second battalion; the battalion on service should own no men at any depot; all men sent back from the field to be transferred to the second battalion, and all the men sent up to the field to be transferred to the first battalion; all ranks to regularly pass in turn from the second battalion to the first battalion (exceptions to this to be allowed in the case of non-commissioned officers promoted on service when necessary); the lieutenant-colonel and major of the second battalion to be the juniors of their ranks, passing in their turn to the first battalion; a colonel to command the whole regiment, and control all transfers between the battalions.

As regards the native officers, the set-off against the reduction of ten out of every thirty-two now holding commissions would be:—1st, the improvement in the position of both the subedar-majors and the very large increase in the pay of one of them, viz.—from 150 rs. a month, as now, to 300 rs. a month as proposed; 2nd, instead of, as now, two jemadar adjutants, each with pay at 67 rs. a month, there would be two jemadar adjutants, with pay at 75 rs. a month, and two jemadar quartermasters, with pay at 70 rs. a month; 3rd, the creation of eight appointments as company havildar-major with pay at 32 rs. a month, which would make them (as they have not a native officer's expenses) practically as well off as a jemadar is now, and with more power.

Two hundred additional British officers would be required under this scheme of reorganisation. Captains of companies would receive 200 rs. staff. As regards expense, Lieutenant-Colonel Young puts forward a number of proposals. With twenty-eight double-battalion regiments and eight special corps the increased cost per annum would be about 9,34,000 rs.; if one special corps were reduced it would be 6,70,000 rs.; with twenty-seven double-battalion regiments and eight special corps the additional cost would be 3,72,000 rs.; with only seven special corps it would only be 1,08,000 rs.

INDORE.

It is not so long ago since Sir Lepel Griffin, at that time the Agent to the Governor-General in Central India, wrote of Indore, that the judicial administration was deteriorating and not improving; that the reforms instituted by Sir Madhava Rao were being abandoned through motives of false economy; and that it was impossible that such a Government could be other than evil. If, however, we can believe the report for the last administrative year, which the Prime Minister, Mr. K. C. Bedarkar, has just issued, says the Pioneer, things are changing for the better since the days of perhaps the most plain-speaking English Resident a Native State ever saw. Finance, justice, law, and police are always the weak points of Native States; but according to Mr. Bedarkar improvement is visible in all these branches of the administration. The work of the courts has been forwarded by the temporary appointment of two additional judges, and the reign of lawlessness, which for long made Indore a byword, is at length, it seems, showing signs of drawing to a close. "The plundering tribes of Bhils of the Vindhya and Satpura hills, and the Moghias of the Tarana Mahal and the Rampura district, have been showing a marked tendency to follow peaceful pursuits in preference to the desperate avocation of plunder." In particular, the gangs of the notorious Tantia and Bondrya Bhil have been effectually disorganised and dispersed; and of the Moghias, it is said, that they exhibit "great signs of reform." In dealing with the latter, Holkar seems to have proceeded on the principle that no one sins except unwillingly, and that if you fill a thief's pocket he will become a great stickler for the cause of law and order. "The effect of recent measures," writes the Minister, "granting them lands on favourable terms is likely to prove very salutary. Several Moghia families have settled down in the Tarana Mahal and Rampura districts as farmers. These measures have tended to reduce the number of robberies and dacoities generally attributed to these people, who, it is to be hoped, will in a generation or two shake off their thievish propensities." If Holkar can get rid of his dacoits in this way he may consider himself very lucky, although the fact may not be complimentary to the system of administration which used to prevail in his State.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Languages in Burma.—The Governor-General in Council in India has been pleased to sanction military officers serving in Burma being allowed to present themselves for examination in the following border languages:—

Groups.—I. The Tashon, Baungshe, Chinbok, Chinme, and Siyin dialects of the Chin language. II. The Chin language as spoken on the borders of the Arakan Hill tracts; or of the Akyab, Thayetmyo, Henzada, Kyaukpyu, or Sandoway district. III. The Kami, Taungsat, Yaklaing, Bokyi, and Sebaung languages. IV. The Chinpaw dialect of the Kachin language. V. The Manipuri language.

2. These examinations are held under the orders of the Local Government, and applications from officers desirous of being examined should be made to the secretary to the Chief Commissioner. The permission of the Chief Commissioner, which must be obtained by a candidate before he can appear for these examinations will not be granted in any case in which an officer purposes to go up for examination in a dialect which is spoken in a district in which he is not likely to be called on to serve.

3. The tests will be as follows:—(i) The candidate must be able to converse freely with the people of the tribe in whose vernacular he may wish to qualify; to understand, and to make himself understood by them. (ii) The candidate must write down, in English or Burmese characters, sentences spoken in the tribal language by one of the tribe, or a conversation held between two of them, and must explain it correctly in English. (iii) Translating sentences into the tribal language (written either in the English or Burmese character), without assistance, so that the translation shall be substantially correct, and shall be intelligible when read to a native in whose language it is written. The sentences to be translated from English under clause (iii) should be of the same description as, and not more difficult than, those under the second clause.

4. A reward of 500 rs. will be granted to an officer who shall pass, by the prescribed standard, an examination in any one language in any one of the groups of languages above mentioned. A second reward will in no case be given to an officer for proficiency in a second language of the same group.

The Simultaneous Rifle Match.—The Commander-in-Chief's Simultaneous Rifle Match took place at Simla on Sept. 11; 145 teams entered against 88 last year. From the reports received it seems the Changlagully School of Musketry leads with the splendid score of 939, the next being the 9th Bombay Infantry with 904 points, the South Wales Borderers with 900 points, the 3rd Punjab Volunteers with 898 points, the 2nd Punjab Volunteers with 895 points, and the Wiltshire Regt. with 884 points.

The Indian Marine.—An order in Council will shortly be issued, giving effect to the Royal Warrant of March 20, 1891, on the subject of her Majesty's Indian Marine. By this scheme the floating defences of India will be augmented, and the chief control will be vested in the Admiralty. The turret-ships Abyssinia and Magdala, the gunboats Plassey and Assaye, and the new torpedo-boats will be manned by the Royal Navy. A certain number of Indian Marine officers and Lascars will be appointed to this vessel. The Indian Marine officers will rank with the Royal Navy, and the uniform will be that of the Naval Reserve officers; and the men of the Indian Marine, employed in the above vessels, are to receive from the Admiralty the same pay as they would be entitled to receive from the Indian Government.

The Assaye and Plassey, each of two guns, 735 tons, 4,500 horsepower, arrived at Sheerness on Oct. 3 from the works of Sir W. Armstrong and Co., of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and were delivered to the naval authorities to be commissioned for active service. They are the exact counterparts of the new first-class gunboats Gossamer and Gleaner, which have been built at Sheerness under the Naval Defence Act. They are armed with two 4.7-inch and four 3-pounder quick-firing guns and five torpedo-tubes.

H.M.S. "Blanche."—Her Majesty's cruiser Blanche, 1,580 tons, under the command of Capt. G. R. Lindley, arrived at Bombay on Sept. 11 from Trincomali, which port she left on the 4th. Since July last she has visited Calcutta, Madras and Pondicherry. At the last-named port, on Aug. 8, cholera attacked five men on board, and two English seamen succumbed to the terrible malady. The Blanche has 176 officers and men all told. During the voyage she experienced fine weather, and when she arrived at Bombay the health of the crew was very satisfactory. The following are the names of her officers:—Commander Lindley, Lieut. Hutchison, Lieut. Lewes, Lieut. Guest, Paymaster Green, Chief Engineer Jones, Engineer Williams, Ass. stant Engineer Vibart.

H.M.S. "Brisk."—Her Majesty's cruiser Brisk, of 1,770 tons, Capt. Winslow, arrived at Bombay on Sept. 13 from Zanzibar, which port she left on Aug. 25, touching at Seychelles on Aug. 30, where she remained for about five days, leaving there on Sept. 4 for Bombay.

H.M.S. "Clive."—The Indian Marine steamer Clive, under the command of Capt. B. P. Creagh, arrived at Bombay on Sept. 10 from Bushire, Sept. 3, via Kurrachee, with the following details and mules:—Col. Hughes, Major Rind, and Mr. Bhickajee Shapurjee, Commissariat Department; Mr. Sharp, Telegraph Department; two dufedars, 15th Bengal Lancers; 34 followers, and 294 mules. The Clive left Bushire with 350 mules, of which 150 were landed at Kurrachee on Sept. 7, and on the same day 94 mules were shipped at Kurrachee. During the voyage she experienced monsoon weather with south-westerly breeze.

I. M. S. "Lawrence."—The Indian Marine steamer Lawrence, Commander Butterworth, arrived at Bombay on Sept. 13 from Bushire, which she left on the 1st, calling at Muscat for the purpose of coaling. She brought one lady, four servants, and nine distressed Indians from Bushire, besides three liberated slaves and one servant from Muscat. During the voyage she experienced fine weather. She will be docked for the usual repairs.

It has not yet been decided whether the Cavalry Camp will be held at Manipuri or Aligarh. Both places are partly inundated.

It is almost certain that the 4th Punjab Cav. will be again raised, whatever decision may be come to regarding the late 3rd Punjab Inf.

The Adjutant-General's office moves to Calcutta rather later than usual this season. The Adjutant-General will probably join Sir Frederick Roberts on tour at Quetta.

The new Zouave tunic is likely to be adopted for the native infantry. It is smarter in cut than the one in use, and slightly longer, which in itself is a great improvement.

In the match for Honour and Glory, the first Leinsters at Agra made 778, the Agra Volunteers 682, the 2nd Field Batty. 479, and the 16th Bengal Inf. 709. A gale was blowing at 600 yards, and at 500 yards it was very breezy on the Leinsters' range when the match was fired.

The 5th Goorkhas will supply 200 men for the additional escort of the British Agent at Gilgit. Capt. Barrett and Lieuts. Boisragon and Badcock will accompany them from the Hazara Mountain Battery stationed at Bannu. Two mountain guns will be taken.

A camp of exercise is to be held during November and December at Dhablan, near Patiala. The Imperial Service Troops of the Punjab States of Jhind, Nabha, Nahan, Faridkote, Patiala, and Kapurthalla will attend. Colonel Melliss will attend, and the Commander-in-Chief visits the camp on Dec. 7 and 8.

Albert Kemp, a private in the 2nd battalion of the Middlesex Regt., was recently tried before the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley and a special jury, for the murder of one Rutton, by shooting him with a rifle in a field near the Mhow Cantonments. The case, which lasted the whole day, the evidence being of a contradictory nature, resulted in the jury returning a unanimous verdict of not guilty, upon which Kemp was discharged.

Major-Gen. Walker, Director-General of Ordnance, has come home on three months' leave. Major Scott officiates till Col. Wace returns from England in October.

Capt. J. C. Swann, 8th Bombay Infantry, has been appointed deputy-assistant adjutant-general, vice Major G. F. W. MacMahon, whose tenure of appointment has expired.

An honorarium of 1,000 rs. has been granted to Vet.-Surg. W. Gunn, of the A.V.D., for his labours in connection with instructing the men of some of the battalions of the Upper Burma Military Police in veterinary science.

Lieut.-Col. R. Molesworth, R.A., will hand over command of the Royal Art. at Rawul Pindi to the senior R.A. officer on the 13th inst., as Lieut.-Col. Morgan, who was to take the command, has obtained six months' leave to England.

The post of deputy adjutant-general at Indian Army Headquarters will fall vacant early next year, when Col. Harris' tenure of office will expire. A cavalry officer will presumably be appointed to the post, as Major Wilson, D.A.A.G., representing that branch of the service, has been succeeded by Capt. Duff, 9th Bengal Inf.

Brig.-Gen. Luck, Inspector-General of Cavalry, was to return to India on Oct. 4, when the staff for a cavalry camp of exercise would be decided upon. The site of the camp had not been definitely settled, a good deal depending on the result of the inquiries being made as to the supplies of forage likely to be available in December in the neighbourhood of Aligarh.

It is practically settled that the following officers go to Gilgit for the cold season:—Capt. Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs; Capt. Aylmer, R.E.; Lieut. Duncan, 23rd Pioneers; Lieut. Eustace, 2nd Sikhs; Lieuts. Beresford and Taylor, 3rd Sikhs; Lieut. MacConachy, 4th Sikhs; Lieut. Williams, 43rd Goorkhas. Lieut. Molony is already at Gilgit.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Sept. 15.

Law Suits in Bengal.—Litigiousness is manifestly on the decrease in Lower Bengal. In the report on the administration of civil justice in the Lower Provinces for 1890, it is shown that the total number of original suits before the Civil Courts of all grades in 1890 was 466,514, being a decrease of 558 as compared with 1889.

The Hooghly Bridge.—The lighting of the bridge by electricity is now an accomplished fact. On the bridge and its approaches there are thirteen lamps which burn with a steady, brilliant light. The lamps are well raised, so that they do not affect the eyes of travellers, and the light is well diffused over the roadway. This is a great improvement on the gas lamps, which have been very promptly removed.

A Bengal Philanthropist.—Baboo Shewbux Bogla has made an offer to the Government of Bengal of 30,000 rs., besides two biggahs of land, towards the construction of a Veterinary School and Hospital for Calcutta. The Lieutenant-Governor has appointed a committee, consisting of the donor, Mr. Gwyther, executive engineer, and the Director of Agriculture in Bengal, to report on the scheme.

Winding-up a Company.—Mr. T. Apar, representing the Bengal Trust and Loan Company, applied to Mr. Justice Beverley in the Chambers for an order to proceed with the winding-up, and the appointment of a provisional liquidator. The order was made; and Mr. John McCabe, of Messrs. Heilgers and Co., was appointed provisional liquidator.

An Accident.—Mr. Hamilton, officiating collector of Hooghly, met with a serious accident on Friday when mounting his horse. The animal was very restive and threw him down. He was picked up unconscious, in which condition he has remained since. He sustained several fractures and concussion of the brain.

Bengal Forest Administration.—Forest administration in Bengal appears to have been fairly profitable last year. The net revenue for the twelve months ending March 31 last amounted to some 4 lacs, a slight decrease as compared with 1889, but nearly half a lac better than the average of the preceding five years. Owing to the spread of cultivation in the Sunderbunds, there was a slight falling off in the area under charge of the department.

The India General Steam Navigation Company's flat, Nazim, has sunk off the Sunderbunds, with 9,500 chests of Assam tea. A portion of the cargo has been saved.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Sept. 16.

Lord Wenlock has concluded his arduous tour, and arrived at Ootacamund on Sept. 7, after a month's absence. The district last visited was Coimbatore, where, replying at considerable length to a very long address, his Excellency thus referred to an important matter:—"You say you are glad to hear that the creation of a Well Irrigation Department is under the consideration of Government. Regarding that, I am bound to say that if all other things fail it will be the duty of Government to go into this as a State measure. At present I am anxious to watch carefully the development and working of these well rules, and to remove any obstacles in their way, because I believe it is much easier and cheaper for ryots to dig wells with advances from the State than for the State to dig them. But if I find after a little time that there is any difficulty in working these, and wells are not being constructed as rapidly as I consider necessary, there is no doubt this matter will have to be carefully considered by Government with a view to the institution of a department."

Cholera Epidemic at Madras.—The cholera epidemic continues to ravage Madras City. All the local courts are daily disinfected, and a strong rumour is current that the High Court will close for a fortnight. The Municipal President, with his officers, daily visits various parts of the city, ordering and personally supervising measures for checking the epidemic. Tar is being burnt in various roads, lanes, and streets; and religious ceremonies, with public processions are performed nightly by Roman Catholics, Hindoos and Mahomedans. Influenza also has broken out.

The Maharaja's Palace, Bangalore.—In 1874, says Indian Engineering, a bungalow was purchased by the Government of Mysore, and by means of numerous alterations and additions, which cost upwards of 1,00,000 rs., and occupied three years in execution, was adapted as a residence for His Highness the Maharaja. Soon after the occupation of the building, the want of a Durbar Hall was much felt, and the Reception Wing to the south of the Palace was commenced in 1880-81, and completed in 1882-83, at a cost of 1,20,000 rs.—the rate per square foot of area covered being 10.5 rs. In 1887-88 the Zenana Wing, situated in the north and a new wing on the western side were commenced, and completed in 1889-90 at a cost of 2,03,000 rs. The palace is constructed throughout of coursed rubble in mortar. The exterior mouldings are of finely dressed ashlar and the interior ones of shell lime and powdered quartz commonly known as "Madras plaster." The roofing of all rooms is of pucca terrace, flooring of lower floor principally of encaustic tiles and marble, and that of upper floor of 1½-inch teak planking. Scantlings, doors, windows and, in fact, all wood-work, with the exception of staircases, is of teak. The total cost of the palace, inclusive of a handsome conservatory recently constructed, is 4,39,600 rs.

In the dry districts of Mysore the ryots have commenced to send adrift their cattle with a note attached by a string to their necks informing the public at large that those who find the animals are at liberty to keep them. This is due to the distress prevalent in these districts. Food of all kinds is at famine prices. The agriculturists are unable to support themselves, much less their cattle.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Sept. 18.

Return of Lord Harris to Poona.—Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris, accompanied by Colonel F. Rhodes, D.S.O., Military Secretary, Miss Croft, Captain Cox, A.D.C., Mr. S. W. Edgerley, Private Secretary, Dr. Martin, and Mr. Lee-Warner, Secretary to Government, arrived at the G. I. P. Railway Poona station on Sept. 12, at 8 A.M. They were met at the station by the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore, Major-General Blundell, Lieutenant-General Pottinger, Mr. W. Drew, Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, A.D.C., Risaldar Siadulla Khan, Native A.D.C., Colonel Firebrace, &c.

Cholera in War Vessels.—With reference to the outbreak of cholera on the Marathon and Redbreast, of which details have been telegraphed, the Poona Observer urges that there ought to be an inquiry, and suggests that it may be traced to the arrival in port of the Blanche, which, as will be seen under our "Military and Naval Intelligence," had arrived in Bombay after having lost several men by the disease. The Observer says:—"When the gun-boat arrived in Bombay she was not put in quarantine, which was a fatal mistake of the authorities. We think that it is quite likely that some of her crew went on shore last Friday, and there met some of the men of the Marathon and the Redbreast. We think that the coal theory (which had been started in the Bombay press) is an invention to prevent the public from noticing the arrival, on Friday, of the Blanche."

Proposed Gaol Projects in the Bombay Presidency.—Plans and estimates for a new criminal and civil gaol and work-house at Bombay are now under the consideration of the various departments in that Presidency. Two other projects have been laid before Government, namely, the conversion of the existing gaol buildings at Ahmednagar and Satara into subordinate gaols. Plans and estimates for a new central gaol at Ahmednagar, at a cost of five lacs, have been prepared. A lac and a half has been spent in the hutting of the district police.

From a return just issued by the Bombay Millowners Association it appears that on the 30th of June last there were 134 cotton and spinning and weaving mills working and in course of erection in all India, with 33,51,694 spindles, 24,531 looms, employing an average of 1,11,018 hands daily, and consuming approximately about 41,26,171 cwt. of cotton.

The returns for the Bombay Presidency show that there were 67 mills in the island of Bombay and 24 in the mofussil, using respectively 19,09,123 and 4,51,047 spindles, 14,347 and 4,140 looms, 61,981 and 16,140 hands, and consuming 26,63,967 and 4,56,813 cwt. of staple.

Fifty-nine out of ninety-six millowners in Bombay have decided to close on eight days monthly. Short time commenced in the mills on Tuesday, and will continue till December 31.

The Government of India have still under consideration the memorial of the Bombay Corporation against the increase of the police charges being placed wholly on the Municipality.

A new Anglo-Portuguese weekly paper, entitled Bolletim Indiano, has been published in Bombay with the aim of advocating the interest of the Portuguese community at large.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue :—

RANGOON, Sept. 28.—The excitement in Wuntho is increasing. It is anticipated that the place will be attacked on Wednesday by the Tsawbwa, and patrols are maintained nightly. The Burma police, who have for some time past been without arms, have again been supplied with weapons. The populace have been warned to collect in certain places in case of alarm.—Reuter.

RANGOON, Oct. 2.—It is reported that the chiefs who in April last attacked Lieutenant Mocatta's column while escorting Mr. M'Nab, political officer, are urging the people in the outlying Tlangtang villages to oppose the expedition which is being organised for despatch to the Chin districts in the cold season.—Reuter.

RANGOON, Oct. 4.—Brigadier-General Wolseley is to command the columns which will operate in the Chin country and on the north west frontier during the next cold weather. He will not attach himself to any column, but will visit and control all. General Wolseley has left Mandalay for Shwebo to inspect the mounted infantry, who are to be attached to various columns.

One of the elder Wuntho Tsawbwa's followers recently surrendered at Myilkinu, and gave an interesting account of that chief's wanderings. Some Kachyen chiefs tried to capture the Tsawbwa, but they were themselves surprised by the old man and made prisoners. The Chinese officials in Yunnan refused the Tsawbwa any support. He has, however, succeeded in collecting a considerable band. The Tsawbwa will probably soon be captured, as some of the more important Kachyen chiefs have asked what the reward for his capture will be.

The condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma shows some improvement. Rain has fallen at Meiktila and Yemethin; and many have left the relief works there to plough and sow their land. According to the latest return, nearly 17,000 men have been employed on the relief works. The fact that so many flocked to the works in Sagaing appears to show that the wages were fixed at too high a rate there. The wages have been reduced this week, but are still maintained at a figure adequate to provide sufficient food if waste is avoided. In some districts people receive daily wages; in others they are paid by piecework.

The upward movement in the price of rice in Lower Burma continues. At the end of May Ngatsein rice was worth in Rangoon 240 rs. per 100 baskets of 75 lb. each. The present Rangoon quotation for the same quality of rice is 360 rs.—Times.

RANGOON, Oct. 6.—Some Dacoits who have been captured state that Boh Leh, with eighty followers, is encamped in a strong position on a hill 40 miles to the north of Mansi. A force consisting of forty Karens and forty men of the Madras Infantry has set out to attack him.—Reuter.

THE SMALL COLUMNS which it is intended to send out this cold weather on the northern frontier of Upper Burma should (says the Pioneer) have very interesting experiences. But little is known of the wild tribes beyond Mogaung and in the Upper Valley of the Irrawaddy. They have now to come under civilising influences and to be taught that they cannot raid into the settled districts. The opening of the jade mines, too, is extremely desirable, for that commodity still commands a high price in China and the further East, and the trade connected with it is well worth developing. In Thebaw's time the contract for working the mines always furnished large revenues to the king, and there is every reason to believe that the local government will be able eventually to obtain some lacs of rupees annually from the sale of the curious stone. The railway is being steadily pushed on to Mogaung, and when the line is opened the export trade will be greatly facilitated. It is also reported that there are vast forests of rubber trees in the northern hills, and these also will be worth working. The temper of the local tribesmen is somewhat uncertain, but the appearance among them of well-equipped columns acting in concert should prevent any serious resistance. It is not desired to civilise them with the rifle and bayonet, but to bring their chiefs under control by peaceful means if possible, though at the same time precautions must be taken to guard against the treacherous attacks which are the favourite tactics of barbarous races.

HYDERABAD.

THE QUESTION of the control of the press in the Nizam's dominions has been lately engaging the attention of His Highness's Government, and it has been dealt with recently in an able memorandum by Nawab Mehdi Hassan, which deserves more than local circulation. Of the general character of the newspapers published in Native States the Nawab points out that we have some sufficiently striking examples :—

"Fortunately we are not without recent examples of the misuse of the liberty of the press in India which will serve to emphasise the general principle which I wish to bring to your Excellency's notice—the principle, namely, that this liberty is at all times liable to be abused by unscrupulous men in a way which has nothing to do with honest criticism, but which has everything to do with attacks upon the purse through the reputation and good name of people of character and influence. The first of the two cases is the attack which was made in an abominable news sheet published in Bombay upon the Maharaja of Bhownugger and his most trusted advisers. It was made abundantly clear in the prosecution of the defamers in the High Court that there was absolutely no foundation for the charges which they had brought against the Bhownugger Durbur, that their object was not the redress of any kind of public wrong or the remedying of any public grievance, but the extortion, under pressure of charges as foul as they were baseless, of hush money from the victims of this outrage. The other case that I would bring to your Excellency's notice is that of a small paper published some few years past at Mhow, which was proved in some proceedings last month in the courts at Mhow and Indore to have chosen for its victims the Maharaja Holkar and other men of influence in Central India, whose only offence was that they had not purchased the approval of their traducers by payments of hard cash. Your Excellency may safely infer from these cases that there exists in India a brood of journalists whose function is not criticism or the honest exposition of public opinion, whether for or against the administration, but a systematic preying upon the fears of the people whom they assume to be more ready to pay liberally for silence than to stand the brunt of lying and unscrupulous denunciation. The professional delators of Rome were honest practitioners in comparison with the blackmailing journalists of India."

THE FURTHER hearing of the suit filed by Mr. Tom Palmer, Barrister-at-law, against Nawab Sir Kurshed Jah, for nearly 3½ lacs of rupees, was resumed on Saturday, Sept. 12, at noon, at the Suburban Court of Judicature, in Hyderabad, before the Special Commission appointed for that purpose, which is presided over by Nawab Imad Jung, Chief Justice. The sitting was mostly taken up with the examination of Colonel Dobbs, the witness, says an Indian paper, being called to order several times by the Court for the unsatisfactory manner in which he gave his evidence and answered the questions put to him.

SEVEN NEW observatories are to be started shortly in various parts of the Nizam's territories for the recording of meteorological observations.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE semi-official Russian Press, writes the correspondent of the Daily News from St. Petersburg, reproduces without comment the English and German criticisms upon Captain Younghusband's exclusion from the Pamir. According to the official maps the frontier of the Russian vassal State of Bokhara leaves the Amu Daria at a point a little to the east of 70 deg., E. long. Thence it trends S.S.E. to the river Pandj, follows a course including the northern half of Wakhan Province claimed by Afghanistan, and passes north of Lake Sarykul to Kezatasch. Hence it goes N.N.W., joining the frontier of Turkestan near Lake Renkul. Thus the western half of the Pamir is cartographically included in Russian territory.

A telegram from Bombay (Sept. 30) stated :—In spite of repeated contradictions, it is persistently rumoured here that Captain Younghusband has been killed by the Russians in the Pamir country. Lieutenant Stewart, with a party of Rifles, was expected to reach the Tagdumbash Pamir about the middle of the present month, when the question of Captain Younghusband's safety would be decided.

A later Reuter telegram, however, dated Oct. 5, informs us that a letter had been received at Simla from Captain Younghusband, dated Sept. 15, stating that he was returning to India. This intelligence is regarded as disposing of the report lately current in Bombay that Captain Younghusband had been killed by the Russians in the Pamir country.

The Novoe Vremya (Sept. 30) publishes an article declaring that unless Great Britain desires war, she should avoid interfering in the Pamir question, for she would only meet with a check in that region "if her strange claims were not supported by arms."

A Reuter telegram from Irkutsk (Sept. 29) gives the following information :—The Russian scientific expedition to Northern Mongolia, under the leadership of M. Radloff, the distinguished archaeologist, has completed the objects of its mission. The expedition proceeded along the Orkhon river as far as Kara Korum, the ancient residence of the Mongolian Emperors, and, after pushing on to the Gobi desert, made explorations in the region to the south of the Chingai range, where a number of antique bas-reliefs and Runic inscriptions were found. M. Radloff eventually made his way back to Russian territory by way of Pekin. M. Jadrintzeff, a member of the expedition, has returned to Kiachta with collections of considerable value.

The following letter appeared in the Standard of Oct. 2 :—

SIR,—With reference to the statement of your correspondent at Moscow, which appeared in the Standard of Sept. 28, to the effect that the Russians had been devoting their energies for the past year to developing the Russian town of Aromed, the Bokharan station on the Trans-Caspian Railway, and that a good road has been made between the old town and the new, I may mention that when I visited Bokhara about this time last year no such town as that of Aromed existed, the only buildings visible near the railway station being a few sheds and houses for the accommodation of the rolling-stock and a small detachment of the Railway Battalion which works the line. As to the road connecting the station with Bokhara, it would then have compared unfavourably with the worst village road in India.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
C. E. BIDDULPH, Foreign Department, Government of India.

A Reuter telegram from Simla, dated Oct. 4, stated that according to intelligence received there from Cabul, the Ameer of Afghanistan advanced no claim to the Khanate of Wakkhan, and did not resent the presence of Russians on the Pamirs. On this the St. James's Gazette remarks :—Wakkhan, the country which the Ameer Abdul Rahman, according to a despatch from Simla, is ready to hand over to Russia, is undoubtedly a part of his dominions, and the news will need further confirmation before we believe it. Up till now his Highness has seemed anxious to keep a tight hold on these Upper Oxus States, and travellers have been much struck with the soldierlike efficiency of his frontier guards. The Wakkhan Highlands were visited by the Lockhart Mission, and Sir William Lockhart tells an interesting story about an Afghan he met there. The man had fought against us at Cabul, took an active part in the siege of the Sherpur cantonments, and in one of the engagements, in which both he and Sir William Lockhart were present, he got an English bullet through both cheeks. He afterwards fought against us at Maiwand and at the Battle of Kandahar. But his old enmity was forgotten, and he not only assisted the English mission in every possible way, but evidently felt a warm admiration for its chief.

The Times correspondent at Teheran telegraphed on Oct. 5 :—There have been disturbances at Meshed for the last three days, directed against the tobacco monopoly, and business has been at a standstill, but the town is now quiet and order has been restored.

Messrs. Leontieff and Patrine, two South Russian landowners, start during the present week to cross Asia in the saddle. The starting point is Tiflis, and the objective point Saigon. "From China," writes the Odessa correspondent of the Daily News, "the Russian travellers will return via the Pacific, San Francisco, and New York. M. Leontieff, who is a lieutenant in a guard regiment, called upon me before leaving this city. He was a little apprehensive that the British Indian authorities might suspect him and his companion of being engaged on some political mission, whereas their journey is simply a pleasure trip round the world. M. Leontieff thought that by mention being made of the nature of their journey in the Daily News, the Indian frontier authorities would be advised of their coming. That these gentlemen have no political mission I am in a position positively to assert. They have, in fact, no idea what route they will take from Teheran. They would preferably go across Afghanistan 'if there were any reasonable chance of their coming out alive on the other side!' The travellers are equipped with Kodak cameras, and will keep a journal of their progress. M. Leontieff informed me that he approximately calculated that the whole journey would occupy about nine months. The travellers expected to meet Colonel Wells (of the Indo-European Telegraphs) and Colonel Littledale at Tiflis, and in that case they will proceed together in the saddle as far as Teheran. By Bagdad and Bassorah the journey from the Caucasus to Southern India has previously been made in the saddle—on the last occasion, I believe, by Lieutenant Alexander Penrose Murray, now acting British Consul at Batoum; but no such route has, I think, been taken by a horseman through Afghanistan and Northern India."

The Pioneer by this mail contains the following notes :—

In connection with the recent movements of Russian exploration parties on the Pamirs, it is important to note the attitude taken up by the local Chinese authorities, more especially as there was no time for them to receive instructions from Peking. They gave Captain Gromchevsky and his men the cold shoulder on every possible occasion, though they could not, of course, prevent them from pushing southwards towards the Hindoo Koosh passes. All travellers across the Pamirs know how jealously the Chinese watch their movements. In the case of Englishmen they are generally quite disposed to be friendly and to give every assistance, but as M. Bonvalot and his companions found, they view other "barbarians" with extreme disfavour. The Russians this summer have probably done quite enough to arouse the suspicion of the Peking Government regarding future movements across the Pamirs, and the policy of obstructiveness in which the Chinese are such adepts, will certainly be emphasised in future by the local officials on the spot. In view of possible complications between England and Russia, in the debateable land drained by the Upper Oxus, it is satisfactory to know that China will not be a party to any mischief-making by filibusters of the Gromchevsky type, but will do all in her power to impede their operations. Whatever animosity may be shown against Europeans in China proper at the present moment, it certainly does not extend to Englishmen in Yarkand and the country westwards, which has suddenly become full of interest owing to recent events.

The report that the Governor-General of Russian Turkestan had appeared in Snighnan is incorrect. He was lately in the Alai Valley, more than a hundred miles away.

The commencement of the railway extension beyond Peshawur is a sign that the Government are fully alive to the value of the Cabul River route, a survey of which was made by Captain Macdonald last year. It is true that sanction has only been given for the line as far as Fort Michni, in British territory, but hereafter it may be possible to continue it through the hills north of the Khyber. The trouble given to the survey party by the Mohmands indicated that the Afghan officials, no doubt acting under instructions from Cabul, did not view the project with favour; but the Ameer cannot have as strong an objection to this short railway to Kam Dakka as he has to the extension beyond New Chaman to Kandahar. The line would not be in Afghanistan proper, as it follows the southern bank of the Cabul River, along which the tribesmen are under our influence. As we recently stated, Abdul Rahman is most strongly opposed just at present to any extension of the railway into territory over which he exercises control; but he has no just grounds for opposing the improvement of communications on the Khyber route. When Ishak Khan's rebellion seemed about to be successful he applied for troops to be sent to Jellalabad; and he must see that the Indian Government can best aid him by being able to move an army quickly in that direction. His obstructive policy will probably give way in time, particularly as he must be alive to the activity which the Russians are now showing in Central Asia.

In writing recently about the prospects of the Cabul River Railway, we hinted, says the Pioneer, that the Mohmands, in opposing Captain Macdonald's survey party, were prompted to that course by the local Afghan officials, no doubt acting under instructions from Cabul. This may have seemed to imply that the Ameer himself was at the bottom of the business; but in justice to Abdul Rahman, it should be remembered that he was at the time in Afghan Turkestan, and, on hearing of the attitude of the Mohmands, at once sent orders to prevent them from making further mischief. What really happened, no doubt, was that the officials in Cabul and at Dakka played into the hands of the fanatical Mullah Khalil, in the hope that their proceedings would be acceptable to the Ameer. That "pestilent priest" certainly succeeded in getting a number of the tribesmen together, and in inducing them to fire for a few days into the camp of the survey party. He would scarcely have been successful, even to this extent, had not the Mohmands known that he had the covert support of certain men in authority. The Ameer was afterwards thanked by the Government of India for the promptitude with which he acted in the matter, and he certainly seems to have deserved this recognition of his action. His Highness, by the way, now speaks of Sir John Gorst as his best friend; this is the result of a study of his speech in the Commons in reply to Mr. Maclean's advocacy of the Kandahar Railway.

It is somewhat interesting to know that the Ameer was furnished by his agents in India with a summary of the discussion in the House of Commons regarding the extension of the railway to Kandahar. It is almost needless to say that he accepted the view that such an extension is not desirable at present.

The Ameer has, it is said, decided to spend a part of the winter at Jellalabad, where the climate is much milder than in Cabul. If His Highness carries out his intention, he might like to renew his acquaintance with India, for the march from Jellalabad to Peshawur is an easy one, and need occupy only four days. He must still have pleasant memories of the pomp and pageantry of the Rawul Pindi gathering in the spring of 1885, and as he can now leave his kingdom in perfect safety, there can be no strong reason which would cause him to hesitate in extending his journey to British territory. There would be more sound political results obtained by a few personal interviews between the Viceroy and the Ameer than by weeks of discussions through the agency of a mission to Cabul, however informal its character might be. Abdul Rahman, like most Oriental princes, likes to deal with principals and not with subordinates.

A mistaken idea seems to prevail in certain quarters that the Ameer acted discourteously in putting off the former proposed Mission to Cabul. Nothing, in reality, could be wider of the mark. Had the Mission been sent promptly at the time it was protected, it would have been received with the utmost favour. But when a widespread revolt had broken out in Afghan Turkestan there could no longer be any question of the advisability of postponing the Mission. To construe the postponement into an affront, especially at the present moment, is sheer nonsense. If the matters under discussion between the Government of India and the Ameer can be advanced by a personal conference, a Mission may be sent with a perfect regard for the dignity of the Government and the best hope of arriving at a satisfactory understanding.

Mines Regulation.—The philanthropist and the inspector have, observes the Allahabad paper, cast their eyes on the Indian coalfields and are now meditating a Mines Regulation Act, which, if drawn on the strict model of English legislation, is likely to hamper the coal industry here, and considerably interfere with the out-put. Labour is scarce enough already in the Indian collieries, and vexatious meddling with the habits of the coolies is not likely to attract them. A man who is used to stroll into the workings, stay for a couple of hours, and then stroll out to smoke or, perhaps, go home for the day, who is accustomed to have his wife in the mine along with him, is not likely to understand or appreciate regulations that will make him work by time of "shifts," and prevent his wife accompanying him. He, of course, is mute and powerless to protest if half his livelihood be legislated away. But colliery proprietors can at least make their views heard, both in regard to the proposed regulation and also in regard to the excessive railway rates. So long, however, as they do not care to organise an association or union to give weight to their wishes and wants, they are unlikely to get over much consideration in the way of redressing or averting their grievances.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams relating to the position in China have been received since our last issue :—

SINGAPORE, Sept. 29 (Times).—Shanghai advices up to the 19th inst. contain complaints that the Government is helpless to control the Hunanese troops unless Li brings up the fleet. The foreign complicity story rests on the smuggling of arms by the Imperial Customs officer Mason. Mason, who has been arrested, alleges that he wanted to gain, and then to betray, the confidence of the rioters. His explanation suggests slight insanity. The Shanghai newspapers urge that the British Minister should live partly in Shanghai, where information can be had.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29 (Daily).—Intelligence received here by mail from Shanghai states that riots continue in the interior of China and in the northern provinces. At Shen-Pao a crowd of bad characters surrounded a girls' school and began to throw stones. The servants of the establishment at first offered a stout resistance, but they were ultimately overpowered by the superior numbers of their assailants and took to flight, after which the rioters demolished the building. The Chinese officials reached the scene of the disturbance in time to capture three of the leaders, who were punished with the utmost rigour. Fortunately none of the inmates of the school were injured.

The pirates are again active. On Aug. 30 they burned the village of Triengba on the Black River. A rescuing party arrived too late to prevent the outrage. This action on the part of the pirates is supposed to be due to a desire for revenge on the villagers for delivering some prisoners to the authorities. The piracy committed near Haiphong met with prompt retribution. The civic guard defeated the marauders in two consecutive engagements within thirty-six hours of each other. They killed forty-seven of them, and captured fourteen rifles and two revolvers. The pirates were completely routed, and fled demoralised to their mountain retreats. These are now closely blockaded, and the whole body of them may be considered at the mercy of the authorities.

Chang Yao, Governor of the Shantung Province, has died suddenly at Tsinanfu, the capital. He was fifty-one years of age, and one of the most progressive among the higher officials.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 2.—Everything appears quiet on the surface in the disturbed provinces, but there is an uneasy undercurrent of feeling as regards the Yangtse Provinces, in which it is feared that a rebellion will eventually break out. The examinations have been everywhere concluded and the students have quietly dispersed, a fact which, for the moment, has given temporary relief. The treaty ports are considered to be perfectly safe on account of the presence of the foreign war vessels. Two ships of the Viceroy have arrived here, and the remainder are expected in a few days.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4.—According to advices received here from China, the Overland China Mail of Hong Kong, in its issue of the 3rd ult., says :—

There seems to be every likelihood that the Chinese Government will soon pay compensation for the damage done to the property of the Europeans during the recent riots. The French claims in consequence of the Wuhu disturbances have already been settled, and the others will probably be amicably adjusted soon. The Treaty Powers, however, find it more difficult to persuade China to throw Hunan open to foreigners at a time when so many nations are following the United States in their treatment of China, which is too weak to protest effectively against the ill-usage of her subjects. But the conduct of the Americans, who have shown hopeless incapacity in dealing with the Chinese has not been observed with indifference, and only the other day Li Hung Chang sanctioned a proposal of the Chinese Consul at San Francisco to transfer all the Chinese coolies in America en bloc to the gold mines of the Amur district. Meanwhile the Pekin Government seems to be realising the danger of mob rule, and a tendency is being manifested in favour of military governors for the provinces. It is probable that the present crisis will pass over, as there are not yet sufficient combustibles for a big explosion. But an eventual explosion seems inevitable.

The North China Daily News of Shanghai observes :—

During the last few years all the Ministers of the Powers in Pekin have put up with insults and humiliations. If there were war—and there will be unless China grants our demands fully and honestly, these anti-missionary riots would be merely the exciting cause, the real reasons being the accumulations of years. The chief offender is the province of Hunan, from which emanate all the lying pamphlets and placards that stir up the people.

According to a Reuter telegram from Berlin dated Sept. 29, the German Government has replied to the communication recently made to it by the Chinese Ambassador, who declared that his Government had made arrangements for the suppression of further rioting, and that foreign intervention was unnecessary. In this reply, which is similar in terms to that of Great Britain, the German Government accepts the assurances of China's good intentions, but states that it is compelled to consult the German Ambassador in Pekin as to the ability of the Chinese Government to carry them out. The evidence of facts, adds the reply, would be more convincing than arguments, and, in short, deeds and not words were needed.

A telegram from Berlin to the Standard dated Oct. 1 stated that the Chinese Envoy Hsue Ching Cheng has had another long conference with Baron Marschall, and left yesterday for St. Petersburg, where he is also accredited. A brisk exchange of telegrams is going on between the European Governments and their representatives in China. The steps hitherto taken by China appear not to be regarded as adequate, and it is accordingly intended shortly to reinforce the European squadrons in Chinese waters. The Yang-tse-Kiang is to be vigilantly watched, owing to the large number of places on its banks open to Europeans. The opinion that the last riots were not only aimed against the foreigners, but also foreshadow a dynastic revolution, is more and more gaining ground, and it is, therefore, feared that they are far from being ended.

The Chinese Chargé d'Affaires has informed M. Ribot that the Governor of Wuhu has been dismissed, in accordance with the demand made by the representatives of the Powers at Pekin.

The Daily News correspondent wrote from Paris on Sept. 28 :—Lord Salisbury and M. de Giers, though not agreed on any question, follow an almost identical course in regard to China. Lord Salisbury has from the first seen difficulties in the way of European intervention in behalf of the native and foreign Christians in China. If Europe weaken the Manchu Dynasty by a united attack, she will only strengthen the hands of the lawless classes of Chinese. What can she do to chastise those who massacre native Christians and threaten foreign ones? Nothing whatever. The bombarding of seaports would be simply to punish innocent and quiet mercantile people, and to let the guilty escape. It is plain that Lord Salisbury does not want to alienate the Government of Pekin, and that seeing this, Russia will not by threats make an enemy of China. Still, it is highly desirable that the Powers should unite to put pressure upon the Celestials. M. Jules Ferry remembers that by his rice blockade he brought China to sue for peace. Another such measure, in which all Europe joined, might insure the safety of the Christians should further troubles render it necessary.

The Italia Militare states (Sept. 26) that it is probable that the Italian despatch boat Stafetta will be sent to the China Seas to join the gunboat Volturno.

A semi-official correspondent of the Politische Correspondenz, writing from St. Petersburg, states that there are two principal reasons why Russia will not take part in the action of the European Fleets in Chinese waters. The first is, that the recent Chinese riots were of an anarchical character, directed against the Imperial Government at Pekin; and official circles in St. Petersburg, the correspondent says, do not consider it to be in Russia's interest to assist in proceedings whose indirect object is to strengthen a régime which will help still further to increase British influence in Eastern Asia, where it is already sufficiently powerful. The second reason is, that Russia desires to avoid compromising her commercial relations with China, which cannot fail to gain enormously by the construction of the projected Siberian Railways. This candid avowal that Russia wishes success to a Revolutionary movement directed against the dynasty of a country with which she hopes to extend her commercial relations may, suggests the correspondent of the Standard at Vienna, be commended to the attention of Chinese Statesmen.

According to a Reuter telegram from St. Petersburg, the Moscow Gazette joins the other Russian papers in declaring that Russia has no motive whatever for participating in any demonstration of the European Powers against China, and thereby impairing her present good relations with that Empire. At the same time, the journal allows that account should be taken of the possibility of Chinese aggression against Russia at a future time, and urges that it is desirable to prepare to meet any such action. The Gazette consequently advises the acceleration of the construction of the Trans-Siberian Railway, in order to allow of the transport, in time of need, of large Russian forces to the Chinese frontier.

While diplomatically at one with the Western Powers in their protest against the recent conduct of the Chinese towards Europeans, says a telegram from St. Petersburg of Oct. 4, the Russian Government appears more and more disinclined to take part in a demonstration, naval or otherwise, against the Celestial Empire. This attitude on Russia's part is in a measure due to her fear of becoming entangled in warlike operations which, as far as the other Powers were concerned, might terminate at an early date in an arrangement with China, but might expose Russia to the risk of having to continue on land the campaign entered upon against China, whose military position, both as regards the number of her troops and her fortresses, is superior to that of Russia on the Chinese frontier. It is feared, moreover, that England might take advantage of a Russo-Chinese conflict in order to advance her own interests at the expense of those of Russia in Asia and the East. Another and perhaps the principal cause of Russia's present attitude in the Chinese question is believed to be the influence religious ideas with the Russian nation, which, from strong attachment to the "orthodox faith," considers it neither necessary nor to its interest to take action against China for the benefit of the Catholic and Protestant churches. This latter view has found expression particularly in articles against a Russian intervention in China which have lately appeared in the Slavophile Svet, the organ of M. Pobedonostseff, the Procurer-General of the Holy Synod and of Russian Orthodoxy generally.

"China" writes to the Times, pointing out that the statement that Hankow and Wuchang can easily be reached by our vessels, does not hold good under all conditions, as during the winter the Yang-tse falls so low that only vessels of very light draught can go much above Wuhu, and cannot therefore reach Kiukiang, Wuchang, Hankow, or Ichang. He continues :—

My object, however, in addressing you is not so much to point out this fact, as to call attention to two considerations which materially affect the position of European residents in several of the Chinese Treaty ports.

Firstly, only a few years ago, a large proportion of the vessels on the China Station were designed expressly for service on the various rivers. They were of light draught, and, although occasionally making short sea trips, they were, as a rule, stationed at the different Treaty ports. Of late, however, and owing to a natural desire of the Admiralty (in view of the different conditions which now obtain in the China seas) to insure that any ship flying the English flag should be capable of performing her duties at sea with the fleet, the type of vessel on the station has been considerably altered, in the direction, generally speaking, of increase in size, and consequently of draught of water, the object being to render the ships more efficient for sea-going purposes. It has gradually come about, therefore, that the composition of the squadron is to-day entirely different to what it was a few years ago, and at present there are in China only four ships—namely, the Swift and Linnet, the Firebrand, and a sister vessel to the Tweed (the latter vessel having recently sunk at Hong Kong), which can properly be described as suitable for river work. Of these four the Swift and Linnet have been abroad for about eight years, and must soon be ordered home; the Firebrand is a worn-out vessel; while the sister to the Tweed is quite incapable of making any headway against an ordinary monsoon, and, indeed, can hardly be considered seaworthy.

Without entering into details which would make this letter unnecessarily long, it may be stated that the following Treaty ports are all, to a greater or less extent, affected by their situations on rivers:—

(a) Canton; (b) Foochow; (c) Ningpo; (d) Kiukiang, Hankow, and Ichang on the Upper Yang-tse; (e) Chungking; (f) Tientsin; (g) Newchwang; (h) Wenchow. Of these (f) and (g) are closed by ice during winter, while (e) has never yet been reached by a steamer.

In view of the two considerations—namely, firstly, the paucity of light-draught vessels, and, secondly, the number of ports affected more or less by their positions on rivers—it is clear that, even in case of emergency, it would, under certain circumstances, be impossible, with the ships at present in China, for the admiral to afford protection to British subjects at all the treaty ports. If, therefore, it be considered desirable to retain vessels at the treaty ports, at the same time keeping up the present sea-going efficiency of the fleet, the squadron must be increased. If, on the other hand, it is wished to keep ships at the ports, and it is not thought necessary to have so strong a sea-going fleet, it would be better in some respects to revert to a type of gunboat intended principally for river work. Provided that other nations would co-operate cordially with us in the protection of the various out-ports, much of the difficulty now existing would disappear, but experience has shown that (with, perhaps, the exception of Tientsin) they are not to be relied upon to do so.

Secondly, for the last eight or nine years it has been the custom to withdraw nearly all the vessels from the various ports for some months during summer, with a view to their taking part in the annual cruise. The practice was introduced by an admiral (now retired) about ten years ago, and has, no doubt, had beneficial results as regards the health of the crews, while, at the same time, the officers and men, getting more experience at sea with the fleet than they did of old, are correspondingly more efficient. On the other hand, however, the absence of our flag for lengthened periods unquestionably encourages the turbulent among the Chinese, and weakens the authority of our Consular representatives. Moreover, unless a vessel is actually on the spot or near at the time of an expected riot she is of little use, as many of the important treaty ports are far from the sea and very difficult of access. As a case in point, a riot was feared some two or three years ago at Hankow, and a gunboat was sent there from Shanghai, but, owing partly to the strong current and partly to her want of speed she did not get there for about a week. Whether the advantages of taking the ships to sea do or do not more than compensate for the obvious objections to leaving the ports unprotected I am not prepared to say, but the importance of the subject perhaps justifies me in bringing it to notice.

In conclusion, I would remark that experience shows that the argument so frequently advanced as to the Chinese authorities being responsible for the safety of Europeans and being capable of protecting them is, however admirable when considered theoretically, absolutely valueless when viewed in the light of practice.

The Chinese local authorities are, as a rule, even on the occasions when they wish to do so, powerless to act against the mob, and it did not need the recent experiences in the valley of the Yang-tse to convince Europeans having any experience in China that no reliance can be placed on Chinese promises of protection in times of anti-foreign riots.

The Times correspondent telegraphs from Singapore (Oct. 3):—At a great Malay council at Brunei, attended by the British Consul, the Sultan of Brunei firmly refused to accept a money recompense for Raja Brooke's seizure of Limbang. The Sultan spoke bitterly of the value of English treaties, and said he might be robbed of his country and people but would not sell them.

The papers by the incoming mail bring the following items:—The death on Aug. 22 of H.E. Chang-yao, Governor of Shantung, in middle life, is, says the N. C. Herald, a serious blow to the State. Of the eighteen provinces into which China proper is divided, excluding Formosa and the New Dominion, there are fifteen which have governors-general, or viceroys as we call them, over them, and only three, Honan, Shantung, and Shansi, in which the governor is the highest authority. Of these three independent governorships, Shantung is the most important, and Chang-yao was already almost of viceregal rank, and was mentioned as the most likely candidate for the next vacant viceroyalty. As he was only a Chihli man by adoption, a precedent would no doubt have been found to enable him to become the successor of H.E. Li Hungchang himself, notwithstanding the rule that no one can hold any office of importance in his own province. The only objection to him on the part of the literary class was that he came into the service of the State by purchase, but this proved no bar to his employment by the Throne. His death will seem a serious loss to the State because it appears that the Cabinet has very few names on its list of possible viceroys. The recent appointment of Li Han-chang and Liu Kun-yi, both old men who might be fairly considered to have served their time, shows how few are, in the opinion of the Cabinet, the available candidates for the highest provincial offices; and the man who probably stood first on the list has now been prematurely removed by death. It is quite possible that our late Taotai, Kung Chao-yuan, who has risen rapidly through the judicial commissionership of Chékiang to the treasurership of Szechuan, will be selected to succeed Chang-yao. He has the recommendation in the Viceroy Li's eyes of being an Anhui man.

H.M.S. Tweed, after sinking a third time in deep water on Aug. 18, had been finally raised and towed to the patent slip at Hungham for repairs.—The most noteworthy event at Hong Kong during the week ending Sept. 3 was the marriage of Mr. F. H. May, Assistant Colonial Secretary, to Miss Barker, eldest daughter of the Administrator, Major-General Barker.—Mr. Ferguson, Admiralty Surveyor, was drowned in a filter bed on the night of the 31st Aug.

Major-General Sir Charles Warren, having proceeded to China and Japan from Singapore on Sept. 2, the command of the troops, Straits Settlements, has devolved upon Colonel Burton-Brown, R.A.

RUSSIA AND THE PAMIRS.

LAST Friday the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian wrote to his paper:—"I had a conversation to-day on the subject of the so-called new aggression of Russia in the Pamir with a man who, while standing outside English official life, is an Englishman and is compelled by his business to study such questions closely, besides which he knows Central Asia as well as any man living. He laughs at the scare we are getting up about Gromchevsky and his Cossacks on the Pamir. In the first place what is the origin of the traveller's visit? After Prjevalsky's lamented death the Geographical Society of St. Petersburg very sensibly decided that the best method of commemorating one of the greatest explorers of the century would be to fill up the gaps in his explorations and complete our knowledge of Central Asian geography. A scheme was carefully drawn up by experts belonging to the Society, and ultimately three series of expeditions, working simultaneously along different lines, were organised and despatched in 1889. One was under Colonel Peotsoff, and worked mainly in the south towards Tibet; the second, under the brothers Groum-Grishmailo, took, roughly, the region running along the Chinese border; while Gromchevsky worked along the most westerly line of the three. All three returned to St. Petersburg during last year, read elaborate papers before the Geographical Society, and spent a few months preparing their reports before starting again. There can be no question, therefore, about the object of the expedition which has brought Gromchevsky on to the Little Pamir, and created so much excitement in London. Gromchevsky, like all Russian explorers, has a considerable escort. This may or may not be a mistake, according to the view one takes of it. These escorts have always been incidents of Russian exploration in Asia, and the consequence is that Russian explorers not only commonly reach their goal, but, owing to the security they enjoy, bring back more information than others. Gromchevsky's escort, of which so much is heard, is only the escort he had on his expedition last year, and the same as the other two expeditions working further east have.

"If then, as is quite clear, Gromchevsky is exploring, he would naturally be beyond the Russian frontier, and this is made the main charge against him. But so—it is pointed out—is Captain Youngusband beyond the British frontier. If the Russian officer was in the Pamir, the British officer must have been there too. We know Gromchevsky's object, for it is writ large in the proceedings of the St. Petersburg Geographical Society; but what is Captain Youngusband and his little party doing? He has now been for some months fluttering between Kashgar and Yarkand, and has with him officers who speak Chinese and other languages of the region, and his movements generally are very peculiar unless one has the key, which, however, the public has not got. As for the Russians expelling Captain Youngusband from the Little Pamir, such a story could only be believed in India. It could serve no object even if annexation had taken place, it would be suicidal if it were about to take place, and could serve no purpose in any event except to excite people in England and India, which is just what an officer would not do in such circumstances. The curious point about the whole matter is that, save a summary of a private letter from Captain Youngusband published in a London evening paper (which says not a word of annexation, and reports that the Russians had recrossed and left the Pamir), we have not a solitary scrap of substantial information. A rumour from Calcutta, discussed and increased by alarmists in Vienna, and replied to with a threat in a Russian paper, the substance of which threat is telegraphed to India and retelegraphed home as a fact, and then the English Press is all ablaze with Russian aggression and the rest of the weary phrases hurtle through the air. This, said my friend, is the normal course of a Russian scare. 'But,' he added, 'Lord Salisbury quite knows what is going on, and is disturbing himself very little about it. What is wanted is some arrangement by which the large escorts with which Russian explorers carry on their work, and with which they excite alarm wherever they go, should be reduced, so that the expedition should partake less of the appearance of a military invasion.'"

The Transit of Mails on the East Indian Railway.—The Indian Government has decided that the revised time table for the East Indian Railway shall not come into force till Jan. 1, to allow of it being fully discussed. Under the proposed time table, the mail train would reach Ghaziabad thirty-two minutes later than now, and Howrah fifteen minutes later, that is, at 6 A.M. instead of 5.45. The latter change would cause considerable delay in the first postal delivery in Calcutta. The reason assigned for the proposed change is the frequent loss of connection at Ghaziabad, but the present rate of travelling between Allahabad and Delhi might be accelerated. The Bombay mails under the new scheme will reach Kalka about the same time as at present.

The Sunday Working of Cargoes in Harbour.—Some correspondence has been going on between the Secretary of the Indian Public Works Department and Commander W. Dawson, R.N., secretary to the Missions to Seamen in London, on the subject of Sunday working of cargoes in harbour. Captain Dawson declares that there is no Sunday working in the Australian or New Zealand Colonies, nor since Aug. 1 in Hong Kong, and the practice is considerably restricted in Bombay, leaving the chief port in India to be the only offender in this respect. He goes so far as to write, that "it is a common saying of sailors that there is no Sunday rest east of the Suez Canal, and the more respectable British sailors try to avoid that trade, their places being often filled by inferior men, whether Europeans or Asiatics. Even in the inter-colonial or country steamships, the European officers, engineers, apprentices, and petty officers frequently number from six to twelve persons, whose Sunday worship and rest are destroyed by this labour." Quotations are given from communications received from the Commissioner of Orissa, who says that no British vessel with an European crew has been known to work on Sundays, and the Port Officer at Chittagong makes almost the same remarks. The Port Officer and Shipping Master at Calcutta says that he has received no complaints from seamen. In the face of these authorities, the only ones quoted by Captain Dawson, says the Englishman, it seems difficult to reconcile the "common saying" among British sailors. Sunday is quite as much a day of peace in Calcutta as in other cities in the world.

Indian Parliamentary Papers.—We have received from the India Office the following papers:—

Statistical Abstract relating to British India, from 1880-81 to 1889-90. Price 1s. 3d.

East India (Opium). Return of an article on Opium by Dr. Watt, reporter on Economic Products with the Government of India. From the sixth volume of the "Dictionary of Economic Products of India." Price 8d.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

A RESOLUTION issued by the Indian Forest Department proposes that a forest year extending from July 1 to June 30 shall be adopted in future for the submission of reports, and the proposal is that the Divisional Officers shall present their reports on August 15, and that Conservators' reports shall reach Local Governments by October 1. The Resolution runs:—"The time at which divisional annual reports have now to be prepared is towards the close of the working season, which in most forest divisions extends from the end of the rains in one year to their commencement in the next. The end of an out-door season is generally marked by especially harassing and fatiguing work connected with fire protection. Such time seems peculiarly inappropriate for throwing upon the exhausted officers the additional burden of having to compile the annual report, and it is also inexpedient to bring them in from camp when their presence in the field may be of considerable importance."

The graded list of the Education Department of the Punjab is expected to be abolished. As regards future appointments, except in rare cases, it is not likely appointments to the superior grades will continue to be made by the Secretary of State.

THE BANGABASI PROSECUTION.

THE Indian Government is much to be congratulated on the termination of the Bangabasi case. At first it seemed as if the prosecution had failed; and as if the Government would have had either to accept the failure or to try their luck with another jury. Neither of these alternatives seemed very promising. To acquiesce in the escape of the defendants would have been tantamount to a premium on seditious writing; while it would have been even worse to run the chance of failing to obtain a verdict from a fresh jury, with the certainty of another inflammatory harangue from the counsel for the defence. It is, therefore, fortunate that the defendants, in accordance with the nature of Orientals when they are faced, have given in and have made their submission to authority.

The case was brought, it would appear, not so much because of the extraordinary nature [of the Bangabasi's articles—stuff such as this has been written and published by the yard by the Amrita Patrika and other papers—but in order to try the efficacy of Sect. 124A of the Indian Penal Code. Many authorities versed in the law were of opinion that this section was not so framed as to make writing of this kind criminal. The Government, it was said, were without a remedy against writers who were systematically endeavouring to excite animosity and disaffection. It was considered expedient to set this doubt at rest. The passing of the Age of Consent Act had led to an outburst of sedition in the Native journals, and advantage was taken of the opportunity to test the efficacy of the law. So far as the exposition of the law by the Chief Justice is concerned, the doubt whether Sect. 124A is sufficient to deal with offences of this class seems to have been set at rest. At the same time it is more doubtful than ever whether a conviction, even in a clear case such as this, can be obtained in a trial before the High Court at any of the Presidency towns. There is no telling what a jury will do in these towns. We know pretty well what they will not do. And even with a Bengali defendant and a jury comprised almost entirely of Europeans, it appears that they are not likely to return a unanimous verdict, even in a case as clear as daylight. Unfortunately, the doubtful element in the case is not confined to the jury. We cannot tell what the Chief Justice will do. If we read the Criminal Procedure Code correctly, it is not necessary that a jury should be unanimous. On the contrary, the verdict is the verdict of the majority. It also seems that in certain cases the judge has to accept the verdict. In others, for example, where the jury is divided as six to three, the judge records the verdict of the majority if he agrees with it; and if he disagrees with it he is bound to discharge the jury. It can be no secret that the verdict of the majority in the present case was for a conviction. From the charge of the Chief Justice it is plain that he must have agreed with their view. It is therefore hard to understand why he would not accept the verdict and record it against the defendants. His action in insisting on a unanimous verdict appears to the lay mind illegal and unreasonable.

Considering, however, the apology of the offenders and the alteration for the better in the tone of the Native Press, the Government will be well advised for the present to rest content with the law as it stands and not to ask the Legislative Council to amend the code. This case and the tone of the Native Press since the Press Act was repealed by LORD RIPON, show that generosity and freedom are not understood or appreciated by our friends in Bengal, and that it would have been more judicious if that mild but ill-advised nobleman had refrained from undoing his predecessor's work. Incidentally, the proceedings in this case show how deeply Native Society in Bengal has been stirred by the Age of Consent Act. It is almost incredible that the Bengalis, both Hindoos and Mussulmans, should consider that a serious blow has been struck against their religious liberty by an alteration in the law which merely extends, to children of twelve years and under, that protection against conjugal brutality which children of ten and under have hitherto enjoyed. To persons sane in mind and body the privilege by which these people set so much store appears very undesirable, to say the least. However incredible it may seem, however, it is nevertheless true that a very large majority of the population of Bengal, and perhaps some classes or castes in other provinces, consider that their just and natural rights have been interfered with by the restrictions now placed upon them. Nor are these opinions confined to the uneducated classes. There is no doubt that the anger and indignation expressed by the Bangabasi are genuine, and are not merely put on for the purpose of exciting the minds of the more ignorant. It is, doubtful, however, whether the feelings which the Age of Consent Act has excited have their real origin in religious so much as in social considerations. At the bottom of the outcry about religion is the doubt or rather positive disbelief in the possibility of female virtue which is very general in the East. That this disbelief is general, and that it is the real motive for desiring to hasten the consummation of marriages and for the dread excited by the passing of the Age of Consent Act, few honest Bengalis would care to deny. It is a pity that the Government of India found themselves forced to take legislative action in the matter at all. It is a still greater pity that men of Indian experience and reputation should have joined with English ladies, even although they were actuated by most benevolent motives, in passing resolutions on the subject of the Age of Consent, and in adding resolutions against early marriages and betrothals which advocate measures that would shake the very foundations of Hindoo Society. The fact that these expressions of English opinion went to India, backed apparently by well-known names, added much to the fear with which the action of the Government was viewed, and led the natives to believe that what was being done was only the first part of a settled programme of measures directed against the very heart of their social life. It is to be earnestly hoped that the Government both here and in India will leave matters of this kind for the future to the action of time and education. It is to be hoped also that when the next general election comes on, and the usual number of Bengali Baboos begin to canvass for seats in Parliament, the British elector, even in his hankering after strange meats, will consider whether men who support the Bangabasi and consider the Age of Consent Act a grievance, are fit representatives of English men and women.

THE SCARCITY IN UPPER BURMA.

THE Times telegram of Sept. 27 from Rangoon would perhaps be sufficient to excite alarm as to the possibility of averting a famine in Upper Burma, were it not in a considerable degree counteracted by the VICEROY'S message to the SECRETARY OF STATE, dated Sept. 26. His Excellency says "there is a marked improvement in Upper Burma in consequence of recent rain." It is true that the telegram of the correspondent of the Times is dated one day later than the VICEROY'S message. It must be noted, however, that all the messages to the Times from Rangoon are despatched on Sundays, owing to an arrangement made with the telegraph company, which places the wire on Sunday at the disposal of the Times correspondent. Sept. 27 was a Sunday. The effect of the recent rain referred to by LORD LANSDOWNE was not likely to have been lost in the course of twenty-four hours. The statements in the Times are based on information given by the Financial Commissioner in a memorandum on food stocks in Upper and Lower Burma. There is always considerable doubt attaching to the accuracy of calculations of this kind even in the older and better known Provinces. It is true that for some years past the official forecasts regarding the outturn of the rice crop in Lower Burma, and the amount available for exportation have been very accurate. This is to all intents and purposes the only food crop in Lower Burma, and therefore the figures given by the Financial Commissioner so far as they set forth the stocks of rice in hand may be accepted as approaching the truth. But there perhaps is the end of the accuracy of that officer's calculations. Whenever there has been a scarcity in Upper Burma rice has been sent up from Rangoon in large quantities, and it need not be supposed that the same thing will not happen now. When prices rise, especially when they rise much, economy is enforced on great numbers of people. Other articles of food take the place of that which has become dear, and supplies which might otherwise be insufficient prove ample to prevent famine.

In respect of Upper Burma, it is not possible to say with accuracy what supplies of money or food are in hand. Many of the district officers have learnt their work in Lower Burma. They find it difficult to understand how people can get on without rice, or how a country can exist which is not deluged with rain from May till November. Hence from the first year of the annexation there has been a tendency to anticipate scarcities and to take a desponding view of the situation. The fact is that Upper Burma, or a great portion of it, is a dry country with a scanty and a late rainfall as compared with Lower Burma. It is in climatic conditions much more like the dry parts of the Central Provinces, or parts of Bundelcund than Lower Burma. The people are by no means dependent on rice. There are many other articles of food, such as peas, millets, and beans, in large quantities. Moreover, the rice crop is not entirely dependent on the rains. The Irrawaddy in ordinary years overflows its banks, and large areas of rice are sown in the flooded lands. The people move easily and readily when they are in straits for food, and find plenty of employment in Lower Burma. The population is sparse and the forests extensive. It is very improbable that even if things were as bad as the Financial Commissioner's memorandum seems to indicate there could ever be a famine in the Indian sense. It is, however, certain that the climate of Upper Burma is dry, and the rainfall uncertain as well as scanty. The extensive irrigation works undertaken, and, to some extent carried out, by former native Governments show that the want of water has always been severely felt. From the first day of the annexation the attention of the Local Government has been directed to the necessity of improving and restoring these works. Owing to the difficulty of procuring competent engineers and funds from India, very little has as yet been done. Within the last year, however, MR. JOSCELYN, an engineer on the Public Works Establishment, who has had much experience of irrigation projects in India, has been placed in charge of the business, and if money is forthcoming a few years will see a great change effected in the condition of Upper Burma.

There can be no doubt that in Upper Burma we have acquired a property of very great value. It has already given a great stimulus to our trade. It is not only capable, as the population increases and grows wealthy under a settled government, of consuming much of our produce and of giving us timber, cotton, oilseeds, and perhaps wheat in return, but it is also the highroad for our trade to Western China. Given irrigation works in Upper Burma and the extension of the railway from Mandalay through the Northern Shan States to the Chinese border, and the advantage to British trade will be very great. It is difficult to get the public to attend to questions of this kind connected with Burma. While any amount of fuss is made over the doubtful acquisitions in Southern and Eastern Africa, no one seems to think it worth while to see what can be made of this magnificent kingdom which has, as it were, fallen into our lap.

MESS AND BAND FUNDS.

WHILE the settlement of the mess and band funds question still hangs fire, we may mention a somewhat curious case which arose out of one of the Madras "conversions." Early in 1890 a Madras regiment of Native Infantry was ordered to be mustered out of service and a new corps was formed, bearing the same number, from military police in Burma. The Colonel of the regiment, having received orders to break up the corps, after realisation of all the assets, divided the proceeds among the officers. At the same time he accepted the offer of the Government to take his retirement with an extra pension of 150% per annum. So far everything seemed to the Colonel to be for the best in the best of worlds, but in fact his troubles were only beginning. Not long after he had submitted his papers for retirement, he was somewhat rudely surprised by the receipt of an order from Army Head Quarters, Madras, to make over the late corps funds to the new corps. He replied that compliance with the order was impossible as the funds had been divided. So angry was the Madras Government with the Colonel that it stopped his retirement and ordered that he should be held personally responsible for the transfer of the funds to the new corps. After some time the amount of each officer's share was recovered and the total sum was paid over to the new corps. This ended the second act of this pretty little military comedy.

The Colonel very naturally protested again st these proceedings and in the end appealed to the Government of India from the decision of the Madras authorities. He seems to have gone to Simla to plead his own cause, with the result that a decision was given in his favour. The Government not only directed that his retirement should be sanctioned as arranged, but that the money which had been made over to the new corps should be refunded to the officers of the "converted" regiment. Accordingly the Madras Government called upon the new regiment to refund, but it received the reply that having spent all the money the corps was unable to pay up. At this point the Madras Government appears to have got to the end of its resources. The Colonel has retired and come home, but he has not recovered his money. It seems not to have occurred to the Government that it possesses just the same power of compelling the officers of the new corps to refund as it had of ordering the Colonel to recover the money he had in perfectly good faith distributed. If it cannot enforce payment from the new corps the Madras Government is surely bound to make good to the Colonel and officers of the old regiment the money of which they have been mulcted through its own mistake. What we cannot understand is, why, in a case of this kind, the supreme military authorities do not take measures to get their decision enforced in one way or another by the Madras Government.

To those, however, who are interested in the case of the "converted" regiments which Mr. King mentioned in his question in the House of Commons, the story we have related will be reassuring, for it shows that the supreme Government has already decided that in cases where a "conversion" really means the substitution of a new regiment and a new cadre for the old one, the mess and band funds belong to the latter, and should be divided among its officers. That being so we wonder why the Government of India has delayed so long the announcement of its decision in relation to the regiments mentioned in Mr. King's question.

THE HYDERABAD DIAMOND CASE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE correspondent of the Standard at Hyderabad telegraphed on Oct. 3 :—

A Gazette extraordinary was issued yesterday, in which his Highness the Nizam published an important manifesto. The substance is as follows :—

"On being informed that there was some popular feeling against his giving evidence in the imperial diamond case, proceeding in Calcutta, his Highness takes this opportunity to thank his subjects for their great concern for his dignity, declaring that he has the fullest confidence in his administration and officers, and that every step in the matter has been taken with his approval. It was his wish that the law should take its course. The Commission to examine him had been asked for by his own lawyers, with his approval. His evidence was so essential that even his own courts, reformed and remodelled during his time, would have refused to decide the case without it. Neither English nor Mahomedan law admits evidence obtained in writing, and it would not have been fair on Mr. Jacob, to whom it was his earnest desire to give full opportunity of clearing himself, if such a course were tolerated here. In former times it was due to the weakness of the Government of the day. He was sure his subjects would not wish him to tolerate such procedure now. To accept loss rather than give evidence would encourage others like Mr. Jacob. It would also confirm his subjects in a mistaken idea of the dignity of their ruler, foreign alike to doctrine and tradition. The Koran emphatically declared that witnesses shall not excuse themselves when called on; and as for tradition, Ali and his sons, the grandsons of the Prophet, appeared before a Court. He dare not aspire to privileges higher than those enjoyed by the Prophet's own family. As for contemporary precedent, that of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was enough. In conclusion, his Highness declares his resolve to forego all such privileges, and, reserving to himself only the privileges of a simple Moslem, calls upon his 12,000,000 subjects of all ranks to understand this clearly, and once for all."

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday :—

The Nizam, who was sworn on the Koran, was examined yesterday before the Commission in connection with the Jacob case. He stated that discussions took place at interviews between him and Jacob. He declared that the purchase of the diamond for 46 lacs was conditional upon its being approved. Half that amount was deposited in the bank to enable Jacob to get the diamond to Hyderabad, the money to be returned if the stone was not approved.

A Calcutta telegram of Sept. 8 says :—Mr. Jacob arrived in Calcutta this morning with the diamond, but he has not yet (three o'clock) surrendered. He will probably surrender himself to-morrow, when an application will also be made to the High Court for bail.

A telegram of Sept. 9 adds :—Mr. Jacob arrived at the Great Eastern Hotel on Tuesday morning. Superintendent Johnson and the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Rylandi, arrested him in the afternoon. He will apply for bail, offering any amount. The diamond is at the Bank of Bengal. It is reported that the Nizam has retained every barrister available in Calcutta except Mr. Hill. Mr. Jacob was produced at the Police Court on this morning in charge of Superintendent Johnson. Mr. T. Apar, on Mr. Jacob's behalf, mentioned that on the previous afternoon it was agreed at a conference between the solicitors on either side that if Mr. Jacob would deposit the diamond at the Bank of Bengal he would not be arrested before ten o'clock this morning. The diamond was deposited at the bank, and Mr. Jacob went to stay at the Great Eastern Hotel, but at five o'clock a police intimation was given him that he would not be allowed to remain there. He went with his solicitor to the police compound, where the warrant was endorsed as executed, and Mr. Jacob was detained in the compound. Mr. Apar also complained of the manner in which the search warrant was executed at Simla. Mr. Jacob's house, shop, and belongings were taken possession of and sealed, and his servants and dogs turned out. The diamond had been brought to Calcutta, and the books and papers were on their way. Counsel asked that the Magistrate would send a telegram so Simla to stop the search. He also applied that Mr. Jacob be admitted to bail, urging that all the circumstances showed he had no wish to evade inquiry. In fact he was the first to take action, having referred the whole case to the Foreign Office of the Government of India. Mr. Dunne, for the prosecution, opposed both applications. In regard to Mr. Jacob's arrest he said the solicitors had consulted counsel, who advised them not to take the responsibility of delivering the warrant, and they made it over to the police with a request that no indignity should be put on Mr. Jacob; and he had been treated well. The magistrate said he could not assume on a telegram that the Simla authorities had acted wrongly in executing the search warrant, and he declined to interfere. He also refused to accept the responsibility of granting bail, but consented to Mr. Jacob remaining where he was until an application could be made to the High Court. Later in the day Mr. Apar applied for bail to Justices Beverley and Amir Ali, at the High Court. He stated that Mr. Jacob's contention was that the Nizam agreed to buy the diamond for forty lacs, and 20,71,000 rs. had been sent to England to pay for it. The remainder of the Nizam's deposit Mr. Jacob holds he is entitled to retain as part of the forty lacs purchase money.

Mr. Woodroffe, for the prosecution, opposed the granting of bail, and contended that the Court had not the power to grant it until the case was sent to the High Court. Mr. Justice Beverley held that the Court could order bail at any stage, but said they were not prepared to say the magistrate had erroneously exercised his discretion in refusing bail. Such a procedure would be exceptional, except on very strong grounds. In the present case his lordship did not think sufficient grounds had been made out for them to interfere with the magistrate's decision at this stage. Of course power remained with the magistrate to admit the accused to bail later on.

SEPT. 10.—On Wednesday evening the Presidency Magistrate took evidence identifying Mr. Jacob, and remanded him to gaol. The case came on to-day, Messrs. Woodroffe and Dunne prosecuting and Mr. Monmohun Ghose, Mr. T. Apar and Mr. Peterson appearing for the defence. The evidence given was confined to the telegrams that passed between the parties, and the payments into and withdrawals from the Bank of Bengal. Complaint was again made, by the defence, of the police action at Simla, in closing up Mr. Jacob's house and shop. The Magistrate consented to send a telegram directing the completion of the search, and stating that the warrant was for search, not authority to take possession of the premises and to close them.

SEPT. 11.—The case was proceeded with to-day before the Chief Presidency Magistrate. Mr. Cruikshank, agent of the Bank of Bengal, and several clerks of the bank were called to speak to transactions in reference to the 23 lacs placed by the Nizam to Sir Asman Jah's credit, and transferred to Mr. Jacob's account, including the transfer of 20,71,942 rs. to Messrs. Kilburn & Co.'s credit, and the payment of 50,000 rs. and subsequently 1,77,131 rs. in notes to Mr. Jacob; also to telegrams from the bank's branch at Hyderabad to the head office regarding the advance of 23 lacs on securities held by the bank for payment to Mr. Jacob. The telegrams state that the diamond was to be purchased for 46 lacs if the Nizam approved of it, and 23 lacs would probably be remitted to England. At the rising of the Court Mr. Ghose, for Mr. Jacob, applied for an order that his servant be permitted to attend him in jail. Though Mr. Jacob was allowed to get his meals from the Great Eastern Hotel his own servants were denied access to him. The magistrate granted the application.

BOMBAY, Sept. 12.—Mr. Inverarity has been retained for the defence of Mr. Jacob, and has left for Calcutta.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, September 14.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Sept. 10, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 2 per cent. Below are given the figures of the Bank's statement for the week ending Sept. 8 :—

ISSUE DEPARTMENT.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 8,73,667	Increase
Do. at Branches.....	6,26,297	Increase
Other Deposits	28,53,406	Decrease
Post Bills	59,956	Increase

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 1,55,707	Increase
Loans.....	6,96,375	Decrease
Accounts of Credits.....	10,568	Increase
Mercantile Bills	14,38,511	Increase
Cash at Head Office.....	64,74,994	Decrease
Do. at Branches	42,87,257	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a further increase of nearly 35½ lacs in public demand, made up as follows :—By a decrease of over 28½ lacs in Other Deposits, coupled with an increase of about one-eighth of a lac in Accounts of Credits and 14½ lacs in Mercantile Bills, minus an increase of over ¼ a lac in Post Bills, together with a decrease of nearly 7 lacs in loans. The treasury balance stands augmented by about 8½ lacs and 6½ lacs at the head office and branches respectively. The bank's investments were increased by over 1½ lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of 64½ lacs in the cash at head office, while there is an increase of about 42½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 6,11,03,007 rs., equal to 66¼ per cent. of the current liabilities of the bank against a proportion of 67¼ per cent. of last week.

The sterling market has been without any special features, and although business has throughout been excessively dull, rates have been fairly well maintained. Private bills still continue to be only sparingly offered, but the absence of inquiry for Bank drafts neutralises any tendency towards lower rates.

TEA.—The usual weekly auctions, held on Sept. 10, comprised 17,000 chests, of which about 16,200 were sold. Bombay dealers were again in the market, and caused a rise of about half an anna on suitable lots. Pekoe Souchongs were firm. All other descriptions sold rather irregularly, but generally lower. About 15,000 chests will be offered this week.

JUTE.—Until Sept. 11 the market continued firm and advancing; but on that day it received a somewhat rude check. The principal buyers withdrew from the loose bazaar, and in the afternoon baled jute was offering at lower prices without finding any buyers. This state of things, with various additions, was wired home, which made it impossible to place jute there, and the market is once more at a deadlock. Prices have given way a little, for both loose and baled, but there is no disposition to buy until confidence in values is restored at home. Quotations are nominal.

GUNNIES.—The week opened with a good demand both for export and for the Bazaar. Corn sacks and twills were dealt in to a fair extent at higher prices. At the close Bazaar dealers show a disposition to sell, and the tone of the market is easier.

HESSIANS.—A small business is reported in 8 oz. 40" cloth for October. There is little inquiry for other sorts, and prices are steady.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—During the greater portion of the week under review the market continued quiet, and a further small decline was registered in almost all stocks; but on Sept. 12 a marked improvement was observable in the tone of the market, and prices commenced to harden. The principal business of the week has been in Jute Mill scrip. The low rates to which they had fallen attracted buyers, and prices immediately advanced some 2 rs., at which rates they close firm. With the exception of a single transaction in Western Patkoom, business in gold shares has been confined to Sonapets. Prices have not fluctuated much, ranging from 1-2-6 rs. to 1-3-6 rs. They close quiet, but steady. India General Ordinary have slightly improved. The report just issued is an agreeable surprise to many, and on the strength of the 4 per cent. dividend for the half-year which it is proposed to pay shares have advanced a trifle. Nothing of importance has been done in tea, and the transactions in miscellaneous shares are again considerably below the average.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, September 17.

With the banks closed for three days, and business in most directions more or less suspended for the Parsee New Year holidays, the weekly budget is again a small one, and contains no item of unusual interest. There has been more doing in cotton both for export and local consumption, and prices are somewhat higher; but in wheat and seeds transactions have been on a small or moderate scale, in quiet markets, though with some advance in rates for the former, and for linseed. Exchange, after being weak and drooping, was rather firmer at closing for the holidays on Sept. 14, though with rates a shade lower than they were on Sept. 10. Government Paper is unchanged. Money is as easy as ever. Freight rates have been weak, with little demand for tonnage. The position of imports is unchanged, and business continues to drag both in its ready and arrival branches.

MONEY.—The Presidency Bank's cash balance which, according to the statement of affairs issued on Sept. 14, stood at 356½ lacs at the end of last week, had thus increased to about the same extent as, during the previous week, it had diminished; and the figures given disclosed a material diminution in the trade demand in the period covered by the return, compared with some increase in that direction shown by the preceding statement. A considerable accession to private deposits was again shown; but instead of an important increase in loans there was a sensible decrease in this item, while the increase in bills discounted was comparatively slight, the net result being a falling off of 10½ lacs in trade requirements, a state of things to which the prolonged dullness of business generally, deepened by numerous native holidays, has continued to conduce. When the Bank of Bombay closed for the holidays the minimum rate was still 2 per cent. per annum.

IMPORTS.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been no improvement in the demand for staple grey goods; and though stocks continue to become gradually heavier in presence of the comparatively small off-take, holders, supported by Manchester, are steady in their pretensions, and we call prices generally unaltered at former quotations.

YARNS.—A moderate business has been passing in imported twist in a quiet market, and on the basis of previous rates.

METALS.—Copper has been steady at an advance of 4 a. per cwt., and yellow metal has advanced 2 a. per cwt. in a quiet market; but little has been doing in either metal. Iron is quiet and unchanged in value, with only a small business passing.

COAL.—Sales are reported of a cargo of Ocean Merthyr Cardiff at 13½ rs. per ton; of 1,000 tons of Davion's West Hartley, at 13½ rs.; and of 500 tons of Powell's Duffryn Cardiff for September-October shipment, at 14½ rs. per ton; but the holidays have latterly interrupted business in this market as in others.

EXPORTS.—COTTON.—Following the publication of the Washington Agricultural Bureau report, a better demand for this staple has been felt both from shippers and the local mills, and a moderate business has been done in the aggregate at rather higher rates, especially for Dharwar in a steady, when not firm, market. Spinners have taken about 7,000 bales, consisting, mainly, of Oomra-kinds, Dhollera and Bhowanuggur, Dharwar, and Bengal; while, for export, the purchases sum up about 4,500 bales of compta in Oomra descriptions, Westerns, Dharwar, and Bengals. The market closed firm with prices 1 r. to 3 rs. per candy higher than they were.

WHEAT remained quiet in tone and with little doing, to the close of last week, a decline of half an anna in the price of pessa having taken place on Sept. 11; but on Sept. 14 the market opened with a steady feeling, though with no increase of business, and hard yellow advanced in value one anna per cwt. Thereafter the market was steady for a time, and subsequently firm, with a moderate business passing, and prices became one anna per cwt. higher for Delhi, and afterwards ½ to 1 anna dearer all round.

SEEDS were dull, with very little doing up to Sept. 12, and a decline of one anna per cwt. in linseed and rapeseed was established; transactions in this market have continued to be on a small or very moderate scale, in a quiet or steady market, and linseed has advanced a little.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Sept. 23; Madras, Sept. 24; Bombay, Sept. 25.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Oct. 11:—The Viceroy has accepted an invitation to be present at the St. Andrews dinner in Calcutta, and may, like Lord Dufferin, avail himself of the opportunity to make an important speech. The idea gains ground that this will be the Viceroy's last winter at Calcutta. For four years he has held the most responsible and harassing office in the world, and at Calcutta and Simla he has not enjoyed good health. His early departure would be a misfortune to the Empire. His high courage and lofty nobility of purpose have won the respect of Europeans and Natives. Men feel that he has no meaner object than the welfare of the Empire over which he rules.

The Viceroy was accompanied to Cashmere by Lady Lansdowne and the Ladies Evelyn and Beatrice Fitzmaurice. Sir Henry Mortimer Durand also accompanied the Viceroy on his trip.

The Volunteers throughout India, the Pioneer says, will be glad to learn that his Excellency the Viceroy has given practical proof of the interest he takes in their position and progress, by adding to his already munificent donation of medals to be shot for at the annual meetings of the Presidency Rifle Associations a silver and bronze medal “open to non-commissioned officers and men of the Volunteer cavalry and infantry force.” We may add that to enhance the attractiveness of these meetings, a volley match has been added to the programme for both British and Native teams.

Early in January the Buffs are to be presented with new colours by Lady Lansdowne. The ceremony promises to be most imposing, an Indian paper says, and will conclude with two balls—one to be given by the officers, and the other by the non-commissioned officers. Both social events will come off in the Town Hall, and no pains will be spared to give them a noteworthy place in the festivities of the season.

It is generally believed, says the same authority, that if troops are required to deal with the Chinese crisis, the Buffs will be sent on to Hong Kong, there to await further orders. This will not be the first time that the regiment has been in active service in China and the Malay Peninsula. The heroism of a Buff-man in the China war which was managed by Lord Elgin is embalmed in some stirring lines which are known by almost every schoolboy.

Lord Wenlock was still far from well when the mail left. He appears to have over-exerted himself during his recent tour in the distressed districts, and he has not yet been benefited by the rest that he has had since his return to Ootacamund.

Although the Government officers were to return to Madras at the end of September, the Governor would remain a week or two longer at Ooty.

Sir Auckland Colvin was to perform the opening ceremony of the Ramsay Hospital at Naini Tal this month, when it was expected to be in a sufficiently forward state.

Sir James Dormer proceeds to Burma early in November.

Lieutenant Otto Ehlers, the German traveller, has had to postpone till December his intended journey through the Shan States to Siam owing to transport difficulties. He intends spending the next few months in the Nilgiris and Ceylon.

Babu R. K. Vag, the Bengali youth who has stood first in the Fine Arts Examination of the first year class of the Royal Academy of Rome, is an inhabitant of the district of Dalla in East Bengal, who left home a year ago. He had a natural taste for drawing and painting, and was a student of the Calcutta Art School for some time. He is the first Indian, it is said, who has gone to Italy—the home of the fine arts—for the study of them.

The office of the Reporter on Economic Products will in future be permanently located in Calcutta.

The consideration of the Madras Small Causes Court Bill had been postponed till the Legislative Council meets in Calcutta.

It is possible that a Committee on the Volunteer question will assemble at Simla very shortly.

The Committee who have been sitting on Major Temple's Cantonment Code have completed their labours so far as the revision is concerned.

A Calcutta telegram of Oct. 11 says:—The anniversary meeting of the Eurasian Association has been held at Madras. Mr. J. H. Garstin presided. The meeting was well supported by Europeans. The fresh policy of the association is to include all Anglo-Indians in its operations. Mr. Hanna, agent of the Madras Railway, delivered an eloquent and important address on the employment of Eurasians. He stated that they were most useful as railway employés, and urged them to ignore office work, and become skilled artisans. Mr. Garstin dwelt with force on the fitness of Eurasians for the military profession, and stated that Lord Wenlock held similar views.

It has been estimated that the loss of revenue in Madras during the current financial year, owing to the unfavourable season, will be about 13,50,000 rs.

The cost of the relief measures undertaken by the Madras Government in the affected districts is reported to be nearly 80,000 rs. per mensem. This sum includes expenditure both on relief works and on gratuitous relief.

During the past week, a telegram of Oct. 11 says, the rainfall has been general throughout the Madras Presidency. In some districts heavy rain has fallen. The rainfall has been more marked in the southern districts. In consequence of this rain, agricultural prospects are somewhat brighter.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office:—"From Viceroy, Oct. 9, 1891.—Good rain has fallen throughout the country. Prospects greatly improved in Madras. Prospects continue favourable in Upper Burma. Conditions unfavourable in Rajpootana."

Mr. Elliott, Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India, has recommended the construction of observatories at Bangalore and Mysore.

The collector of Cuddapore is about to commence rain-making experiments by explosions on high rocks in Cuddapore.

Dr. Laurie's report on the Hyderabad Commission with a preface by Sir Asman Jah will be published shortly.

At a meeting held at the Showkat press premises, Hyderabad, on Sept. 23, under the presidency of Dr. Rajagopal, L.R.C.P.S., Edinburgh, Mr. Vasudeva Rao, B.A., A.G.M., Principal, Dharmivant College, read an interesting paper on Heredity and Regeneration of India, contradicting Professor Macmillan's theory that female seclusion is the main cause of retrogression of India, and showing the caste system as the root of all evil. At the chairman's request Mr. S. M. Mitra gave an Urdu résumé of the address.

The East Indian Railway has reduced its traffic rates to one-sixth of a pie per maund per mile for the first 400 miles, and a sliding scale of lower charges for the longer distances. On very long journeys the rates will be as low as one-eleventh of a pie. At present the coal at Cawnpore costs about five times its cost at the pit's mouth, with the result that while a Bombay manufacturer spends 2½ pies on the coal with which one pound of yarn is produced, his Cawnpore rival has had to pay 3½ pies.

The Government of India have referred the question of railway extension from the Tounghoo-Mandalay line to Myingyan to the Chief Commissioner, Burma, with a view to settling the alignment best calculated to further the purposes of famine relief. The Meiktila route is considered the most desirable.

All the materials for laying the railway from Peshawur to the Cabul River, opposite Fort Michni, are to be stored at Peshawur ready for immediate use.

The Government of India have given permission for a detailed survey to be made by the Bengal-Nagpore Railway Company of the country between Sumbalpoore and Cuttack by a route south of the Mahanadi.

The Secretary of State has accepted General Strachey's proposal that the East India Railway Company make a donation of 1 lac of rupees to its provident fund, in addition to the usual contribution, in recognition of the services rendered by the staff in India.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, on arrival at Gilgit, will arrange for putting the six mountain guns with the Cashmere troops in position. At Chalt Fort they will be replaced by seven-pounder guns from India.

It is calculated that two full working seasons will be consumed in carrying the telegraph to Gilgit, as much labour and time will be required to lay an underground cable across the mountain ranges, which are covered for seven months in the year with snow.

The necessity for connecting Gilgit with the Cashmere Telegraph system has been strikingly proved of late. A land cable will probably be laid for a certain distance, so as to secure communication during the winter months.

The question of the future strength of the garrison at Gnatong will be settled on the conclusion of the current negotiations with the Chinese representatives at Darjeeling regarding the points raised under the Sikkim-Thibet treaty.

Regarding the frontier on the Upper Oxus, a Demarcation Commission is a distinct probability in the coming spring, the Times of India says, and in that case we should expect to see Colonel Algernon Durand in supreme charge. In view of recent events, it is to be regretted that the operations of the Afghan Boundary Commission were not extended beyond the Lower Oxus.

During the cold season an exploring party, under Lieutenant Colomb, will cross the Assam Frontier, in the extreme north-east, and advance to the Irrawady. The party will then follow the line of the Irrawady south to Bhamo, thus traversing much of the Kachin Frontier country. It is entirely unknown if it will be accompanied by Dr. Prain of the Calcutta Botanic Gardens, or Mr. Gray, of the Doom Dooma Tea Estate, as an interpreter, and a native surveyor. The escort will consist of sixty sepoy, probably of the 42nd Goorkha Rifles. The Abor Expedition is on a still smaller scale, and is partly intended to pacify certain tribes.

The Manipuri prisoners transported to the Andamans for waging war against the Queen-Empress will in all probability be admitted to the grade of self-supporters at once instead of having to wait ten years like common convicts.

THE Masked Ball given by the Knights of the Black Heart in the Town Hall at Simla (Sept. 22) was a brilliant success. The hall was splendidly decorated, and the dominos worn by the ladies and gentlemen were of the utmost variety of colour and design. Lady Lansdowne and Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice were present in dominos. On arrival the guests were conducted by the Knights in scarlet dominos to the dais, and presented to the Grand Master, the ceremony of reception being gone through with mock solemnity. The pageant was complete even to the heraldic flourish of trumpets. At a given signal the band struck up a polka, and the Knights darting from the dais set the example of an arbitrary selection of unknown partners. The fun was kept up with great spirit till midnight, when the dominos were discarded. There were nearly 500 persons present, and the dance on all hands was voted the event of the season. An accident which might have been most serious occurred to Mrs. Townsend, wife of Captain Townsend, R.A. On leaving the masked ball a guy rope of the tent porch had loosened the copestone over the doorway, and somehow the stone became detached and fell, grazing Mrs. Townsend, who was badly bruised on the side of the head and shoulder. Happily her injuries were not serious, and the latest report regarding her condition is very favourable.

The annual Masonic Ball of Lodge "Himalayan Brotherhood" was given on Sept. 17 at the Town Hall. The attendance was very large, and the gathering was highly successful. All the decorations were, as usual, characteristic of the craft, and particularly effective. Lady Lansdowne was the chief guest of the evening, being received by the Worshipful Master Bro. Macdermot, a procession being formed in the ball-room both on her Excellency's arrival and departure, and all due honours being paid. The Commander-in-Chief was also among the guests present.

The Arts Exhibition was opened at the Council Hall, Poona, on Sept. 23 by his Excellency the Governor in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. Lord and Lady Harris, attended by Captain Jervis, were received by a guard of honour of 100 rank and file of the 10th Bombay Infantry, with band and colour, under Lieutenant Britten, and were met at the entrance by the Hon. Mr. Moore, president of the Western India Fine Arts Association, and Colonel Hutchinson, honorary secretary. The following are the leading prize-winners :—

The Times of India correspondent writes from Poona (Sept. 25) :—The scene which the Poona Gymkhana buildings presented to-night, on the occasion of the Civil Service Ball, was one of great splendour and beauty. Everything was carried out on a magnificent scale, and the arrangements were as perfect and complete as well could be. The committee, of which Mr. W. W. Drew was secretary, had worked very hard, and with the valuable assistance of some ladies they had succeeded in transforming the whole place into fairyland. That the ball was an immense success goes without saying. The hosts and hostesses of the evening were—the Hon. Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Moore, the Hon. Sir Raymond West, K.C.I.E., and the Misses West, the Hon. Sir Charles B. Pritchard, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., the Hon. Mr. J. R. Naylor, C.S.I., Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, Mr. W. Lee-Warner, Mr. G. B. Reid and Mrs. Reid, Dr. A. D. Pollen and Mrs. Pollen, Dr. John Pollen, Mr. W. W. Loch, Mr. E. L. Cappel, Mr. C. P. B. Wiltshire, Mr. A. C. Logan, Mr. W. W. Drew, Mr. R. C. Brown, Mr. C. H. Hill and Miss Hill, and Mr. S. W. Edgerley. The approaches to the building on the west side were lined with variously-coloured little lamps, which also adorned and illuminated the west façade of the building. There were posts placed at intervals bearing a framework upon which small tumbler butties were arranged in the form of stars, &c. On the east side the illuminations, which could not be seen from the roadway, were even prettier. The outline of the beautiful tennis courts was picked out with little lamps of bright colours, a string of Chinese lanterns being stretched across the centre, dividing the illuminated quadrangle into two. The porch had been covered in and arranged as a sitting-out apartment, and a very comfortable and excellent place it made. A large number of beautiful pots of flowers and ferns were employed in arranging the apartment, and pillars were covered with palm-leaves. A couple of large tents, pitched on the eastern side, close to the tennis courts, also served for sitting-out places, and were very comfortably and elegantly fitted up.

The ball-room itself looked extremely handsome. It was brightly illuminated, and along the cornice all round was a row of small butties, which enhanced the effect of the illuminations. Flower-pots were arranged on the six balconies overlooking the hall, while the panels of the wall were very prettily draped, and some pretty baskets of ferns were suspended from the large balcony on the south side. The letters C.S., in monogram style, were exhibited on the walls, in silver upon a background of pale blue. The niches at the bottom of the columns supporting the wall brackets were filled in with little moss banks on which were pretty flowers, yellow flowers being principally chosen for these. There were several mirrors on the walls, hidden beneath some artistic drapery. The stage was artistically got up, and very prettily draped. A canopy of yellow and blue stripes had been erected there, supported on four pillars, and beneath the canopy were placed gilt chairs and sofas. The steps leading up to the stage were covered over with scarlet baize, while on either side of the steps were charming groups of flower-pots, ferns, and palms, which set it off very well. The ball was very numerously attended, the guests displaying much taste and originality in the costumes they appeared in. His Excellency the Governor and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and staff were present. The guests alighted at the west entrance, and were received by their hosts and hostesses at the bottom of the stairs leading up to the stage. Dancing commenced punctually at 9.30 P.M. to the strains of the band of the Worcester Regiment, and was continued till midnight, when the band played the "Roast Beef of Old England," and the company adjourned for supper. The large Badminton shed was transformed into a charming supper-room, and served the purpose admirably. A pretty dado ran all round the room, and on the top of this was a row of flower pots. The room was made bright and attractive with hundreds of flags and streamers which hung from the roof, the crest of the "Finest Service in the World" being exhibited against the red background of the west wall. The table decorations, in which a large quantity of exquisite flowers were used, were the admiration of all. His Excellency the Governor took Mrs. Moore into supper, the other couples being Sir Raymond West and Mrs. Pottinger, Sir Charles Pritchard and Mrs. Budgen, H.E. the Commander-in-Chief and Mrs. Reid, Mr. Moore and Mrs. Hogg, &c.

The final tie for the cup presented by the Bombay Gymkhana was played off between teams of the Buffs (Calcutta) and Bombay Civilians on Saturday evening, Sept. 19, on the Cooperage ground, Bombay, and ended in a draw, the game at the end of time standing "love all." Despite the unpropitious state of the weather, there was a large attendance of spectators who were eager to witness the contest between the two teams. For weight the visitors certainly appeared to have the advantage; but our local team proved, in many instances, to have throughout the evening the advantage of "push," and drove the Buffs back by sheer force. Where such stubborn play was displayed on either side, and where the combinations were so equally matched, it would be difficult to individualise the players; but we might en passant mention just a few of the most conspicuous. For the visitors, Annesley, D'Aeth, Hilderbrant, Adams, Marshall, and Beenev did excellent service, while for the Civilians, Reid, St. Paul, La Touche, Fairless, Hewitt, Ross, Clarke, and Symes were equally as serviceable, and were always in the right spot at the right time. The first half of the game was very fast as well as the last seven minutes, and the game throughout was one of the toughest and best-contested we have ever had the pleasure of witnessing here. The call of time having shown no definite results, it was decided to extend the game by another fourteen minutes, and even at the conclusion of this, as will be seen, matters remained undecided, except that the local team had the honour to leave the ball in the visitors' territory, and thus the possession of the Cup still remains undecided. We cannot, however, pass over the very rough play of the visitors, which in many instances exhibited wanton savageness towards their opponents.

The following is the composition of the teams :—

THE BUFFS.—Corporal Hilderbrant, back; Lieutenants Annesley and D'Aeth and Corporal Marshall, three-quarter backs; Privates Beenev and Moth, half backs; Lieutenant B. R. K. Tarte (Captain), Corporals Crumby, Tennant, and Revell, and Privates Adams (or Barrett), Jubb, Saunders, Veale and Parker, forwards.

BOMBAY CIVILIANS.—Mr. C. St. Paul, back; Messrs. N. J. Stabb, Marshall Reid (Captain), and C. B. La Touche, three-quarter backs; Messrs. G. E. Hewitt and P. H. C. Merryweather, half-backs; Messrs. C. H. Ross, W. C. Symes, R. R. Owen, C. K. Fairless, J. A. Milne, F. D. Fowler, A. C. Boulton, P. Clarke, J. M. Anderson, forwards.

The final tie for the Poona polo tournament was played off on Sept. 19, in the presence of a large and interested crowd of spectators, including H.E. the Governor and H.E. the Commander-in-Chief. The preliminary ties were played off on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of the week, and the Poona Horse, who defeated the visitors and the 3rd Hussars, and the Poona Gymkhana, who defeated the Bombay Gymkhana and the 18th Hussars, were the teams to enter for the final struggle for the Cup. From the smartness both teams had exhibited in putting out their opponents, it was expected on all hands that the play to-day would be exceptionally keen, and it was a matter of impossibility to say which team would prove victorious. Poona Gymkhana had the services of such certain players as Captain Le Gallais and Dr. Burness, whilst, on the other side, there were Dr. Stewart and Captain Yorstoun. Both teams were capitally mounted, and they entered the arena with equal chances. Fortune favoured the cavalry at the outset, and they, winning the toss, had first choice of the ground. However, here the luck of the cavalry deserted them, and for the greater part of the game they were called upon to adopt defensive rather than offensive tactics. Dr. Burness and Captain Le Gallais managed to get the ball between their opponents' flags twice in the first period, while Dr. Stewart in the third period was the only one to score for his team. The game throughout was a splendid exhibition of polo, and although the best team won, their opponents were worthy foemen, and if they should ever meet them again it would be hazardous prophesying the result of the bout. The teams were composed as follows :—

POONA HORSE.—Lieutenant W. M. Newnham, 1; Captain Yorstoun, 2; Lieutenant C. Ducat, 3; Surgeon-Major Stewart back.

POONA GYMKHANA.—Captain W. J. Peyton, A.D.C., 1; Captain Le Gallais, A.D.C., 2; Dr. B. F. Burness, 3; Captain J. W. Brownrigg back.

We who live in Bombay, says the Times of India, are so familiar with its curious customs that they scarcely strike us as strange, and we heard without any sort of surprise that the Bombay Piece-goods Market was closed on Tuesday in honour of a Shrivak Maharaj who had successfully finished a fast of sixty-one days. According to a correspondent the fast was bona fide, nothing to eat or drink being taken except a glass of warm water! This would make an interesting subject for scientific inquiry, but the Jain community would seem to be quite satisfied with matters as they stand. To evince their respect for the fasting Maharaj 5,000 men and women joined him in his fast all through Tuesday and afterwards subscribed 7,000 rs. for relieving cows and other animals from the Bandora slaughter-houses. The reality of the whole thing is, however, best brought home to the European community by the closing of the Piece-goods market.

Bearing out its recent remarks about the desirability of having Army Orders more carefully examined before they are issued, with a view of lessening the great number of corrections that are now necessary, the Lahore paper received the following :—"Let me draw your attention to an amusing anomaly in the latest orders regarding the position on parade of dismounted British officers of Native regiments. In quarters column, it is laid down, he is to be three paces in rear of the centre of the second company, but this is the Native officer's place! As the order relates to 'dismounted British officers,' I presume the Native has to be carried by this British officer brother-in-arms." A fat Native officer on the back of the latest-joined sub would hardly look smart, the same paper thinks.

Cases in which the Hindoo wife or husband is the complainant against the other have been growing so common, says an Indian paper, as to cause anxiety to the Hindoos of the orthodox type. These have been enjoining upon Hindoo wives and husbands to be forgiving towards each other, and pointing to the rulings of the Shastras, that a woman who cannot forgive a thousand misdoings of her husband will never enter heaven, and that a husband who does not act properly towards his spouse will go "to regions lower than hell."

PERSONAL.

LORD DOUGLAS COMPTON, aide-de-camp to Lord Wenlock, left Ootacamund suddenly under medical advice for England. His health permitting, he will return before the close of the year.

Sir C. Elliott will leave Darjeeling about Oct. 26 for Patna, and will remain on tour in Behar till Dec. 5, when he expects to arrive in Calcutta. The first part of the time will be spent in South Behar, at Patna, Gya, Arrah, and on the Sone Canals. After the Sonopore Fair he will visit Chapra, Motihari, Mozufferpore, and Durbhanga. He will probably hold a durbar for the conferment of titles and khillats granted to the gentlemen of the province in January next.

General Steadman has resigned his appointment as Inspector-General of Police in Rangoon from the date of his return from leave in February next.

On Sept. 25 Lady Morland left India for Australia, by the P. & O. S. N. Company's steamer Ravenna, whence she will sail with her daughter for England. Amongst those who were present to see her ladyship off were Mr. Marshall, who accompanied her to the Prince's Dock, Mr. Adams, Lord Colin Campbell, Mr. Thorburn, Mr. Webb, Mr. Roughton, Dr. Willis, Mr. and Mrs. Bozzoni, Mr. Cowasjee Dinshaw Adenwalla, Mr. Dhunjeebhoy Bomanjee, and Mr. Ruttonshaw Dadabhooy.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Birdwood, whose health has been rather indifferent of late, proceeds home, it is said, on a month's privilege leave, availing himself also of the period of the ensuing vacation.

The Chief Justice of Bombay, Sir Charles Sargent, also proceeds home shortly on privilege leave.

The Right Reverend Bishop L. G. Milne, M.A., D.D., has been granted furlough for three months and twenty-seven days.

Colonel Campbell Walker, a correspondent of the Times of India says, conservator of forests, Madras, will not return to India, but will be retired in November under the fifty-five years' rule.

Mr. J. DeC. Atkins, C.S., has been allowed furlough on medical certificate for eighteen months.

Mr. Gilliland, professor, Presidency College, officiates as assistant meteorological reporter, vice Mr. Little, granted leave for eighteen days.

Mr. Upcott has accepted the Chief Engineership, Bengal-Assam Railway, and returns from England to take up the appointment.

Mr. Watt, Executive Engineer and Personal Assistant to the Secretary, Public Works Department, Hyderabad, goes shortly in charge of the new road from Silchar to Manipore.

Mr. Simpson Byrne, having given over charge of the office of Accountant-General, North-West Provinces, to Mr. E. Lawrence, returns to his post of Auditor and Comptroller General, Calcutta.

Mr. G. R. Elsmie is going on leave, and Colonel H. Grey, C.S.I., will officiate as Financial Commissioner of the Punjab. On Mr. Mackworth Young's return from leave Colonel Grey will revert to the Commissionership of Delhi.

Mr. Macpherson, Deputy Secretary in the Legislative Department, returns from leave early in November, when Mr. Leslie Porter, now Officiating Secretary, will revert to the North-West Provinces.

Mr. R. G. MacDonald will return to India shortly and take over the Accountant-Generalship, Public Works Department, as the permanent successor to Colonel Begbie, who then will retire.

Mr. D. W. Campbell, late Agent of the East India Railway, is to receive a bonus of 36,000 rs., or one year's salary, in recognition of his long and excellent services to the Company.

Mr. W. E. Hart, Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes, Bombay, has been allowed furlough for nine months and seven days. Mr. C. W. Chitty, Barrister-at-Law, will act as Chief Judge during Mr. Hart's absence.

Mr. J. R. Bell has been appointed Engineer-in-Chief of the Mari-Attock Extension Railway and Frontier Railway Surveys. Mr. H. B. Addis will officiate while Mr. Bell is acting for Mr. O'Callaghan as Consulting Engineer to the Government of India.

Mr. R. Smeaton, Financial Secretary to the N.-W.-P. Government, goes on a year's furlough from December next. His place—a hard one to fill—will be taken by Mr. T. W. Holderness, Director of Agriculture, who by that time will have returned from leave.

The third secretaryship will also change hands during the coming cold weather, as Mr. W. Benett, the Judicial Secretary, intends taking leave about the same time as Mr. Smeaton. Mr. Benett may probably return in April, if his health permits, to take over the secretaryship of the Agricultural Department from Sir Edward Buck.

Dr. Thurston arrived at Simla on Sept. 18, and has taken over charge of the office of Director of Economic Products from Dr. Watt, who comes home immediately on two years' furlough. Dr. Watt will be placed on special duty in England for a month or two, to complete the last volume of the "Dictionary of Economic Products."

It is probable, the Englishman says, that Dr. Cunningham, who is on leave at present, may be deputed to undertake the inquiry into the coffee-leaf disease in Southern India. It will be remembered that it was announced some time ago that the late Dr. Barclay, who was an expert in vegetable pathology, was to have been entrusted with this important work.

On dit Mr. G. J. S. Hodgkinson, C.S.I., judicial commissioner, shortly goes on leave when Mr. G. D. Burgess, C.S.I., will officiate for him. Colonel C. B. Cooke and Mr. Bridges are, it is believed, in the running to succeed Mr. Burgess in the Northern Commissioner-ship. Both these gentlemen would make capital successors to Mr. Burgess, as they have had extensive experience of Mandalay, and their appointment would give universal satisfaction to our native Burmese community.

OBITUARY NOTICE.

The death is reported at Koondakoon, Manantoddy, Madras Presidency, on Sept. 10, of Colonel James Warwick Wooldridge, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. The deceased officer served in Spain with the British Legion, commanded a brigade of the German Legion during the Crimean War, and served in Africa in command of the German military settlers. During the Indian Mutiny he commanded the German Jäger Corps. Among the orders Colonel Wooldridge won were Chevalier of the Tower and Sword of Portugal, Knight of St. Ferdinand of Spain, the Laurel Order of St. Ferdinand, and Knight Commander of Charles III. of Spain.

THE INCOME-TAX IN BENGAL.

THE following resolution by Sir Charles Elliott, reviewing the Board of Revenue Report on the Income-Tax operations in Bengal for 1890-91, has created considerable sensation in Bengal and throughout India:—

In Calcutta, out of 22,796 persons originally assessed, 2,948 filed petitions, 1,669 of which, or 56.6 per cent., proved successful, against 54.6 per cent. in the previous year. The number of persons finally assessed fell from 22,555 to 22,159. The Collector of Income-tax reports that the number of cases in which objections are supported by closed and adjusted books has increased in a marked degree; but it is not stated to what extent the reductions made in the assessment have been due to the production of these books. The fact that the practice of filing regular accounts is on the increase tends of itself to arouse a suspicion that the mercantile classes are setting themselves to combat the income-tax with civilised weapons, and that many of these accounts are specially prepared for the purpose of being filed in appeals against the assessment. Next year's report should deal specially with the justice or otherwise of this apprehension. If it is well founded, we may expect that in course of time the same mode of self-defence will spread to the mofussil. Such accounts must be carefully scrutinised by the appellate authorities before whom they are produced, and it cannot be assumed that because they are regularly balanced, therefore they necessarily contain a complete and trustworthy record of the owner's transactions. No system of book-keeping can prevent the construction of fictitious accounts and the omission of particular items or classes of items from the main account, and it has long been a tradition of the mercantile classes to observe the strictest secrecy concerning their business affairs. Allowance must be made for these peculiarities in determining the value to be put upon a particular set of the books as a measure of the true financial liability of an assessee to income-tax.

In 1890-91, as in the preceding year, Calcutta contributed nearly 50 per cent. of the amount collected as the income-tax of the year, excluding penalties, fines, arrears of previous years, the tax on salaries recovered by the Accountant-General, and the tax on the interest of Government securities. Another point to be noticed is that while the yield of the income-tax of 1860 shows a progressive decline for the five years for which it was in force, the proceeds of the present tax, excluding a slight fall due to the inevitable difficulties of a first assessment, exhibit both in Calcutta and the mofussil a steady increase, indicating that the tax has now been established on a permanent footing and may be expected, if discreetly administered, to go on growing with the growth of the incomes which it is intended to touch.

In referring to popular feeling on the subject of the income-tax, the Board say "the tax is and always must be unpopular." The inquiries it necessitates "are resented as inquisitorial and oppressive," and are often met by "the fabrication of false accounts" or "a garbled balance sheet." Of the truth of this description the Lieutenant-Governor has no doubt. Nothing but financial necessity can justify the retention of a tax which can only be based on a series of more or less accurate guesses. At the same time the principal hardship is felt by those whose incomes are smallest, and if the assessable minimum could be fixed at 1,000 rs. instead of 500 rs., the greater part of the complaints against the tax would be stilled. This change would exempt 70,807 persons out of the 104,886 who paid income-tax during the year, but would only lower the produce of the tax by 7,87,603 rs. out of 39,55,807 rs., or 19.9 of the whole receipts. It will be a profound relief both to the administration and the people when the day comes when the Government of India can afford to permit itself the luxury of granting this relaxation.

The Calcutta Trades' Association has addressed a letter to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal with reference to the above resolution. The association feels that it would be failing in its duty to the large English community it represents if it did not protest most strongly against the resolution, which has travelled beyond the lines on which the working of a tax, such as the income-tax, should be reviewed, and contains much both as to matter and manner which should have found no place in such a document. The resolution, while professing to review the administration of the department of the State, worked professedly in terms of the strictest privacy, proceeds by the enumeration of details of a confidential nature to the commission of what may be justly considered a breach of confidence, which has startled the public and has given cause for considerable irritation and annoyance. The committee submit that if, while confessing this tax to be based on a series of more or less accurate guesses, the Government can, simultaneously with such declaration, deliberately commit itself to an act which is felt, and justly felt, to be a violation of the secrecy which should be observed in matters of a purely personal nature, it cannot be surprised if the feeling of repugnance with which the tax is held becomes thereby greatly intensified. But while protesting against so unusual a proceeding as the publication of matters which the writer of the resolution has chosen to describe as "interesting data," the committee would respectfully ask his Honour whether there is any warrant for the serious reflections which are contained in paragraph 5 on the honesty of the mercantile classes. Those classes are charged with combating the tax by the preparation of fictitious accounts, while the secrecy observed by them in their business affairs (and not less strictly, it is presumed, by Governments themselves) is characterised as a "peculiarity" which is to be regarded with suspicion in dealing with their books. The committee are strongly of opinion that this indiscriminate condemnation of the mercantile classes is warranted neither by the statistics quoted in the resolution nor by actual facts, and therefore regret is felt that such an unwarranted and sweeping accusation should have been made on so large and important a section of the tax-paying community.

The Times of India says:—It was impossible to read the resolution on the income-tax in Bengal that appeared in the Calcutta Gazette of the 9th instant without feeling certain that it would be bitterly resented by the commercial community on the other side of India. The Calcutta Trades' Association have been the first public body to take up the glove so heedlessly thrown down by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. They have addressed a remonstrance to the Chief Secretary of their local Government, an ample summary of which appears in another column. They protest in the first instance against the whole form of a resolution which, while claiming to review the administration of a department of the State, worked professedly in terms of the strictest privacy, proceeds by the enumeration of details of a confidential nature to the commission of "what may be justly considered a breach of confidence, which has startled the public and has given cause for considerable irritation and annoyance." The secrecy, which should be observed in matters of a purely personal nature, has, they maintain, been violated in this curious Government Resolution, and Government cannot therefore be surprised if "the feeling of repugnance with which the tax is held becomes thereby greatly intensified." A reference to the Resolution itself will show that this language is fairly justified. On the plea of giving some interesting data for estimating the comparative prospects of different occupations, the Resolution supplies a few facts about the incomes of the leading men in Calcutta, which are certain to be read with the greatest avidity by their colleagues, great and small, and also by their rivals in each particular walk in life. The mere names, of course, are wanting, but these will be readily identified by all who are behind the scenes.

We learn, in the first place, that among the general merchants of Calcutta no less than thirty-one pay on incomes exceeding a lac, and thirty-two on incomes between half a lac and a lac, while only two officials and five money-lenders attain the distinction of figuring in the former class, and six officials and ten money-lenders appear in the latter. Not much harm is done here where many names are dealt with, but it is different when the eminent names are more limited. Two brokers are, for instance, assessed on incomes exceeding a lac, eight on half a lac to a lac, five on incomes between 40,000 rs. and 50,000 rs., and seven on 30,000 rs. to 40,000 rs., the average of the class being 3,600 rs. The "honest broker" must be a fortunate man in Calcutta. Again, under the head of trade, as distinguished from commerce and manufacture, only three incomes were assessed at a lac and over—one a dealer in metals, and two dealers in dress, the latter paying tax on 3,79,000 rs. between them. Here, as with the two brokers, the identification must be absolutely complete. Eleven newspaper proprietors appear in the returns, of whom we are told one paid income tax on 40,000 rs. to 50,000 rs., two on 5,000 rs. to 10,000 rs., one on 2,500 rs. to 5,000 rs., and two on 2,000 rs. to 2,500 rs., the remaining five being assessed on incomes between 500 rs. and 750 rs. Turning to professions better recognised than journalism, we learn with some interest that doubts are cast upon the popular impression that at least half a dozen barristers in Calcutta make more than a lac a year by their practice. "If the income-tax returns can be relied on"—here the official if may be noted—there is only one barrister whose income exceeded a lac of rupees last year. In 1889-90 there were two, assessed on an average of 1,36,000 rs. each. There seems, however, to be no reason to apprehend any serious decline in the profits of the Indian Bar, for no less than seven barristers paid tax on incomes averaging 85,000 rs., four returned from 40,000 rs. to 50,000 rs., and the same number earned between 30,000 rs. and 40,000 rs. The average income of the groups of assessee described as "barristers and others" comes to about 2,500 rs. a year. Success in the higher branches of the medical profession also brings with it a substantial reward. One doctor was assessed on an income of 73,000 rs., another on 40,000 rs. to 50,000 rs., and two more on incomes between 30,000 rs. and 40,000 rs. Engineering also seems to be doing well, seeing that the tax was collected on one income of 2,33,000 rs., and on another between 40,000 rs. and 50,000 rs., while the average profits of the profession, as given in these returns, come to 7,500 rs. a year, or three times as much as the average barrister, and nearly six times as much as the average doctor can expect to earn. We have quoted figures enough to show that the revelations in this Government Resolution are singularly indiscreet. To appreciate them properly, we have only to suppose that Lord Harris's Government had been equally frank about the good people of Bombay. In America the income-tax returns are, or used to be, posted on the church doors in order that everybody might be able to check his neighbour's income, with the result that those whose credit was the most shaky paid the most, while the total returns were largely augmented. Is it possible that some feeling of this kind was in the mind of the Lieutenant-Governor when he sanctioned Mr. Risley's novel form of Government Resolution?

But in addition to their protest against the invasion of privacy, the Calcutta Trades' Association object to the insinuation that the mercantile classes habitually cook their books so as to cheat the income-tax collector. The fact, we read, that the practice of filing regular accounts is on the increase "tends of itself to arouse a suspicion that the mercantile classes are setting themselves to combat the income-tax with civilised weapons, and that many of these accounts are specially prepared for the purpose of being filed in appeals against the assessment." The Board, we read further, acknowledge that "the tax is, and always must be, unpopular. The inquiries it necessitates 'are resented as inquisitorial and oppressive,' and are often met by 'the fabrication of false accounts or a garbled balance-sheet.' Of the truth of this description the Lieutenant-Governor has no doubt." In answer to these somewhat sweeping charges the Association are strongly of opinion that this indiscriminate condemnation of the mercantile classes is "warranted neither by the statistics quoted in this Resolution nor by actual facts, and therefore regret is felt that such an unwarranted and sweeping accusation should have been made on so large and important a section of the taxpaying community." The income-tax for some reason or other—perhaps from the very want of tact so conspicuous in this particular Resolution—is more unpopular in Calcutta than in Bombay. And the Calcutta merchants should forgive much to a Lieutenant-Governor who concludes an official document by boldly asserting that nothing but financial necessity can justify the retention of a tax which can only be based on a series "of more or less accurate guesses"; and that it will be a "profound relief both to the Administration and the people" when the day comes for the Government of India to afford to permit themselves the luxury of abolishing the income-tax altogether.

THE "BANGABASI" CASE.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times of India telegraphed as follows on September 24:—

With regard to the Bangabasi case a petition was presented on behalf of the accused to the Government. It set forth that—In continuation of my letter, dated August 28 last, I am directed to forward a copy of a petition to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, from Jogendra Chunder Bose, Kristo Chunder Banerjee, Brojraj Banerjee, and Aurodody Roy, respectively, proprietor, editor, manager, and printer, of the Bengali newspaper, Bangabasi, in which they express their deep and heartfelt sorrow for having allowed the articles which were the subject of the recent prosecution to appear in the columns of the Bangabasi, and throw themselves unreservedly on the mercy of the Lieutenant-Governor. In a separate communication they undertake to publish this petition in the Bangabasi newspaper when required by the Government. I am also to forward copy of a letter from the president of a newly-formed Native Press Association, in which the members, who are the proprietors and editors of nearly all important native newspapers published in Bengal, express their regret at the use of the language of the articles, but support the prayer of the petitioners, which is also supported by the British Indian Association in a letter, copy of which is also submitted, in which they express their strong condemnation of the language and tone of the incriminated articles. In considering the above petition and letters, the Lieutenant-Governor has thought that great weight should be attached to the results of the recent trial. In the first place, the interpretation placed by the Chief Justice in his charge upon Section 124A of the Indian Penal Code is substantially that contended for on behalf of the Crown. In the second place, there can be no reasonable doubt that the majority of the jury in the proportion of 7 to 2 were in favour of a conviction, and that it was solely owing to what might be described as an accident that this verdict was not accepted by the Court under Section 305 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the accused convicted. In future every editor who admits a seditious article inciting his readers to feelings of disaffection against the Government will know that he is committing a breach of the law as laid down by the highest authority in Bengal, and will hardly hope to escape punishment through the chance that the jury may disagree and that the judge may again decline to be governed by the verdict of the majority. The main object of the Government in instituting the prosecution, viz., to ascertain and make known that the exact state of the law has been thus attained, and the accused persons have now expressed their contrition unreservedly, and have pledged themselves never again to give any just cause for the belief that they are intent on exciting disaffection. In these circumstances the Lieutenant-Governor considers that no adequate object would be gained by renewing the prosecution next November, but rather that the Government should gladly take the opportunity of showing that it is not influenced by vindictive feelings, and he, therefore, proposes to instruct the law officers of Government not to proceed further in the matter.

The Government of India, in replying to the letter, say that the Governor-General in Council has perused these papers with much satisfaction, and fully approves of the course which the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to take in directing the prosecution of the accused in the Bangabasi case to be withdrawn. The paper which was selected for prosecution by the Lieutenant-Governor, acting upon the opinion of his legal advisers by whom the articles upon which the prosecution was based were chosen, was one of those which since the passing into law of the Age of Consent Act, in March last, had shown themselves conspicuously virulent in their attacks upon the Government. No prosecution, under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code had, however, been instituted since that section was added to the Code in 1870, and doubts had been expressed in various quarters as to the manner in which it might be construed by the Courts. The Government of India did not share these doubts, and were not prepared to admit that the law as it stands is insufficient. The law has now been clearly explained by the highest judicial authority in Bengal, and the interpretation put upon it coincides with that which the Government of India themselves attached to it. It has been shown beyond a doubt that deliberate attempts to excite feelings of enmity and ill-will against the Government, and to hold it up to the hatred and contempt of the people, by misrepresentation of the true state of affairs, by partial statements of facts, so as to cause disaffection, are offences within the purview of the section, and that writings of this nature in the public press render those who publish them liable to punishment under the existing law. This having been fully demonstrated, and the persons responsible for the appearance of the incriminated articles in the Bangabasi having themselves acknowledged those articles to be "intemperate, disrespectful, and unjustifiable," having expressed their contrition, and having promised never to repeat their offence, the Government of India are not desirous of pressing the matter further against these defendants. I am to say, in conclusion, that neither now nor in the future has honest and independent criticism, however mistaken or even hostile to Government measures, or the action of public officers, anything to fear from the law, so long as it is put forward in good faith, and not attempt to stir up hatred of the Government, or attack its inherent characteristics. So far as it is well informed, such criticism is welcomed by the Government of India as a valuable auxiliary in the good administration of the country.

THE IMPERIAL DIAMOND CASE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday:—

The Hyderabad Commission was reopened on the 7th inst., and the Nizam's examination was continued. He deposed to ordering Abid to telegraph to Jacob, and remind him before leaving Calcutta that the purchase of the Imperial diamond was conditional on approval, and declared that a reply from Jacob stating that this was the case, and that the deposit money would be returned if the diamond were rejected, was shown him before the arrival of Jacob. The Nizam declared that directly Jacob left him, after the rejection of the stone, he ordered Abid to inform Jacob that the deposit money must be immediately returned. Abid, returning, stated that Jacob said he would return the money deposit on reaching Calcutta; the diamond must first be returned to its owner. The Nizam denied that he authorised Abid to buy the diamond for 40 lacs or for any price. He further denied that he had ever placed five lacs in the Bank of Bengal as security not to buy the diamond through any other party.

On the 8th inst. the Commission sat again, when the Nizam deposed that he knew Abid took a commission on purchases from Jacob and other merchants, and that other people in his employment took commissions. The Nizam added that the custom was common among the nobles and others, and was not confined to his palace.

The Nizam's cross-examination began yesterday, when he stated that he had paid Jacob over 8 lacs for jewellery this year, and had bought jewellery of the value of 2 or 4 lacs last year. In each of the previous two years he had paid 2 lacs for jewellery. The cross-examination was adjourned.

The following telegrams in the papers received by to-day's Mail show the progress of this case at Calcutta:—

SEPT. 14.—The diamond case was resumed to-day; Mr. Inverarity, from Bombay, appeared with the other counsel for the defence. Mr. Ghose renewed the application for bail, on the ground that the High Court judges had decided it was in the discretion of the magistrate to grant bail.

The magistrate again refused the application, and, in response to a request by Mr. Ghose, passed the following written order:—"I refuse bail, as I consider there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of the offence with which he is charged; and I am of opinion that, under Section 497, I have no discretion to admit to bail when I consider there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused person guilty of the offence with which he is charged."

Abid, the Nizam's Chamberlain, was examined. He said Mr. Jacob had told him at Bombay that there was a splendid diamond for sale, and if he could help to influence the Nizam to buy it he would get a large sum of money, and perhaps not wish to remain in the Nizam's service any longer. When Mr. Jacob took the model to Hyderabad and showed it to the Nizam, it was arranged that his Highness should buy it for 46 lacs, if he approved the stone when he saw it. Mr. Jacob said he would be a big man and would give up trade as a jeweller, and would go every year to Hyderabad to salaam the Nizam. Mr. Jacob agreed to the Nizam's remark that the transaction must be "pussund" or "no pussund," and said he should require a deposit of 23 lacs to enable him to get the diamond. If the Nizam approved of it, he would pay the other 23 lacs, and if not, Mr. Jacob would have to bear the expenses of getting it out.

The Nizam stipulated that the 23 lacs were to remain in the bank till he had seen the diamond, and Mr. Jacob agreed to this. Witness heard the money had been drawn from the bank, and telegraphed to Mr. Jacob, who telegraphed in reply that if not "pussund" the money would be returned, and the diamond would go to Patiala. When he took the diamond to Hyderabad Mr. Jacob said to him:—"God grant the Nizam may take it." Mr. Jacob had a model with him, as well as the stone, and asked witness to change this model for that in the Nizam's possession, as there was some difference between the latter and the stone. Witness said he could not, as the key was with the Nizam. When Mr. Jacob saw the Nizam and showed him the diamond, the Nizam examined it very minutely, and said:—"No, I will not take it." Mr. Jacob entreated his Highness, saying there was not another such a diamond in the whole world, and it was worth having. The Nizam said he had made up his mind not to buy, when Mr. Jacob said if he would not take it, Patiala would buy it for 40 lacs. The Nizam said: "Why, you wanted to sell it to me for 46 lacs, but would sell to Patiala for 40." Mr. Jacob said the 6 lacs were to have been his profit. The Nizam then said that Mr. Jacob had better take the diamond away. Mr. Jacob left, very sad. Witness, by the Nizam's instructions, asked Mr. Jacob when the 23 lacs would be returned. He replied that when he gave back the diamond to the bank he would return the money. He said he had lost 2,000*l.*, and wanted the Nizam to pay something towards it. Witness told him it was no use asking then, but he would represent the matter to the Nizam afterwards. Nothing was said about the Nizam purchasing the diamond for 40 lacs. Mr. Jacob telegraphed, after leaving, two or three times, asking witness to arrange matters sharp, otherwise there would be great difficulty. Witness replied that the deposit money must be returned immediately, according to agreement, before the claim for expenses could be entertained.

SEPT. 15.—A fresh application was made to the High Court before Justices Beverley and Ameer Ali to-day for bail in the diamond case, and bail was granted in Mr. Jacob's personal recognisance of 2 lacs and two or more sureties to furnish guarantee of 1 lac. The hearing in the Police Court was continued to-day. Abid denied that he had any conversation with Mr. Jacob about reducing the price of the diamond to 40 lacs. He did not say that if Mr. Jacob would take 40 lacs he would forfeit 3 lacs of his commission and accept 2 lacs. Mr. Jacob did not tell him that if he would forego all commission the Nizam could have the diamond for 36 lacs. He gave evidence as to the telegrams that passed between him and Mr. Jacob. The latter telegraphed to the Nizam that Abid had deceived him twice, and asked His Highness to communicate through others. The private secretary then telegraphed, demanding the return of the money immediately. Mr. Jacob replied that, through Abid's blunder, the money was wired to London before his first telegram arrived, and he would have much difficulty now in sending the money. He offered to give the diamond. He added: "Your telegram seems determined, and therefore I have no alternative but to represent the matter to the Government of India, and call for public opinion through the papers." A commission was issued by the magistrate, on the application of the prosecution, Mr. Inverarity for the defence not objecting, to examine the Nizam at Hyderabad. Mr. Jacob has been enlarged on his own recognisances in two lacs, and two sureties, Mr. Burder and Mr. Geddes, for 50,000 rs. each.

SEPT. 17.—Annie Abid, wife of Albert Abid, was examined privately at the Great Eastern Hotel yesterday. She said she was a Welshwoman, and formerly travelling attendant to Lady Meade. Her husband was formerly in the service of Captain Euan Smith, not as dressing-boy, but as assistant. He looked after the household. He now looks after the Nizam's palaces, and superintends the toshakhana. His pay is 550 rs., and he gets 10 per cent. commission on sales to the Nizam. She thought the Nizam knew of this. On the afternoon when the diamond was shown to the Nizam, Mr. Jacob was at her house. He declared he was a ruined man, striking his hands on his forehead. He blamed the unlucky word he had said to the Nizam when last at Hyderabad, to the effect that if the diamond sale was completed he would never have to do another day's work. Mr. Jacob also told her that the Maharaja of Patiala would now get the diamond for 40 lacs. She said in that case Mr. Jacob would not be so much the worse, but he replied she did not understand. The profit would not be his. He reckoned that getting the diamond out would cost him 1,80,000 rs. In cross-examination she spoke to 14,000 rs. having been paid by Mr. Jacob in January as commission on goods sold in October last, and to Mr. Jacob having made presents to her and her children. Mr. Jacob had complained angrily about other dealers being admitted to the Nizam, and she had expressed repentance. Mr. Jacob told her it was unlucky for her husband as well as himself that the bargain was not completed, as Abid would get a very handsome commission. At the police-court to-day a native official of the Bank of Bengal was examined as to the record of seventeen notes of 10,000 rs. each paid out on July 27. In cross-examination he said he had this morning seen fifteen of these notes in Mr. Jacob's possession, and had compared the numbers. Mr. Lewis, Deputy Secretary, called him into his room where Mr. Jacob was with Mr. Geddes, and told him to compare the notes with the numbers of the notes paid on that day. He handed the notes back to Mr. Jacob. He did not know what had become of the other two notes. Messrs. Hamilton and Co.'s cashier and a native clerk were called, and spoke to payments by Mr. Jacob aggregating about one lac in July, for goods purchased at the Toshakhana sale. The payments included five notes of 10,000 rs. each and thirty 1,000 rs. notes. The numbers of the notes were recorded in the firm's note register. Mr. Woodroffe pointed out that several of the notes paid to Messrs. Hamilton and Co. were drawn from the Bank as part of the Nizam's deposit. It was brought out in the cross-examination of one bank-witness that Mr. Jacob had produced at the bank this morning fifteen of the seventeen 10,000 rs. notes paid him on Messrs. Kilburn and Cocheque on July 27, and Mr. Woodroffe applied for an order on Mr. Jacob to deposit these notes in the custody of the Court, as part of the subject-matter of the complaint. Mr. Inverarity objected that the Court had no power to do more than issue a summons. The Magistrate refused the application, remarking that it would be crippling the accused in his defence, and was unnecessary for the purpose of investigation. Mr. Cheetham, of Messrs. Kilburn and Co., was examined. He stated that Mr. Tremearne first saw him in connection with the diamond, and he afterwards learned that Mr. Tremearne was acting for Mr. Jacob. His firm agreed to get the diamond out, and asked for a deposit of 50,000 rs. Mr. Jacob deposited that amount on April 30. The rate of exchange was settled at 1*s.* 4*d.* Mr. Jacob or Mr. Tremearne told him the Nizam's treasury was appropriating 10 lacs a month to buy the diamond. His firm was told the price would have to be refunded if the Nizam rejected the stone. The diamond left England on June 5, and arrived about the 26th. He learned on June 22, from Mr. Tremearne, that a deposit of 23 lacs in the Bank of Bengal had been arranged with the Nizam. Mr. Jacob called on July 10, and said he was ready to make a deposit to get possession of the diamond. Mr. Jacob proposed a deposit of 22½ lacs, and he agreed.

SEPT. 18.—In the diamond case Mr. Cheetham's evidence was continued. He spoke to visiting the Bank of Bengal with Mr. Jacob on July 10, and having 22½ lacs of rupees made over to the credit of his firm, while Mr. Jacob received the diamond and gave a receipt for it. On July 21 he received a telegram from Mr. Jacob at Hyderabad, "Diamond rejected. There has been foul play here. Leaving to-morrow." From Calcutta, on receiving this message, witness telegraphed to Messrs. Pittar Leveson and Co., of London, "Imperial rejected." He received a reply which he could not find, but he remembered the contents were to the effect "Return uninsured." On July 22 he received a telegram from Mr. Jacob, "Secure draft if favourable, if not await my return. Nizam cut me six lacs." On this he wired to London, "Cancel yesterday's telegram. Jacob intimates sale gone through. Arrives here on Monday." On the same day he wired to Mr. Jacob, "Exchange lower than when you left, but lower to-day. Reply instructions." Mr. Jacob then telegraphed, "Wait till my arrival." He saw Mr. Jacob on July 27, who said he saw the Nizam, and showed him the diamond, and he refused it, whereupon Mr. Jacob went to the telegraph office and wired to witness "Diamond rejected." Afterwards he called on Mrs. Abid, and in consequence of what passed he went to the palace again, where he saw the Nizam, and the Nizam concluded the purchase for 40 lacs. From what Mr. Jacob said, witness was convinced he had seen the Nizam a second time. Mr. Jacob took from his firm a coloured drawing of another stone to show the Nizam, and he said that, on showing it to the Nizam, his Highness said in effect, "I am surfeited with your first dish, and already you have prepared me another." Later on Mr. Jacob told him he had received a demand from Hyderabad for the return of the money. He said it was from the Nizam's valet, and he would take no instructions except from the Nizam himself. A broker came in and said the exchange was settled, and Mr. Jacob then instructed witness to send the 150,000*l.* to London. The exchange came to 20,71,942*7*-1 rs. He returned Mr. Jacob the balance by cheque, deducting 64*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* for insurance and 5-10 rs. for a telegram. His cheque was for 1,77,131-1-2 rs. He learned from Mr. Jacob, before he left for Hyderabad, that the diamond had been sold to the Nizam for 46 lacs conditionally. Mr. Jacob told him on his return that he had brought the diamond back from Hyderabad to secure the balance of the money. The magistrate decided to issue a commission to examine the Nizam on Oct. 3, or any day after that which would suit the Nizam. The commission would be directed to Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, the Resident at Hyderabad.

SEPT. 20.—In the diamond case yesterday, Mr. Dunne, for the prosecution, renewed the application for an order that the notes received by Mr. Jacob from the Bank of Bengal as part of the Nizam's deposit, and still in his possession, should be deposited in Court. He argued that the notes were stolen property. Mr. Burder, one of Mr. Jacob's solicitors, had that morning cashed five of the notes for 10,000 rs. each, and it was desirable that Mr. Jacob should be restrained from cashing or otherwise dealing with the rest. Mr. Inverarity contended that the magistrate had no power to make such an order, but the magistrate passed an order for Mr. Jacob to produce the notes in Court, or show sufficient grounds why he should not do so. A discussion took place as to how the diamond was to be sent to Hyderabad. Mr. Inverarity, for the defence, declined to bear the expense or responsibility, and the question has been left in abeyance. It was decided that the telegrams and other exhibits should be sent to Hyderabad in charge of the Court interpreter. Later on, Mr. Jacob appeared in reply to the order to produce the notes, and stated that five 10,000 rs. notes were in the Bank of Bengal, and Mr. Geddes would produce them on Monday, on condition that they be kept in the Court, and not touched by any one connected with the Nizam. Mr. Burder stated that he had the other five notes, and considered them his property, they having been given him before Mr. Woodroffe made his application, so as to meet costs and expenses. When Mr. Burder cashed the five notes yesterday morning a native policeman on duty at the Currency Office was told by the baboo to take him to the Commissioner of Police. The constable followed Mr. Burder to his hotel, and refused to leave. Ultimately Mr. Burder got in his gharry and was driven to the police-office with the constable on the box, and demanded an explanation. The commissioner said the man had acted without orders, and the matter should be inquired into. It was stated yesterday that a telegram had been received from the Nizam's private secretary that the commission to examine the Nizam might be sent to the Resident. The order stands accordingly. The case is to be continued here as soon as possible after the completion of the commission. Another commission has been issued to examine the manager of the Alliance Bank at Simla at once.

SEPT. 21.—Mr. Geddes, one of Mr. Jacob's solicitors, attended the police-court to-day, and deposited five notes for 10,000 rs. each. The magistrate asked what was being done about sending the diamond to Hyderabad. Mr. Geddes said his side had nothing to do with it, and would take no responsibility. Mr. Dunne, for the prosecution, said he had seen the Commissioner of Police, who suggested that the diamond should be sent in a treasure-chest, escorted by a police guard, and accompanied by a clerk from the Bank of Bengal with the key. The permission of the Government of Bengal would have to be obtained for the police guard.

MANIPORE.

MAJOR-GENERAL COLLETT left Manipore on Sept. 24, accompanied by Major Gwatkin, assistant adjutant-general, and proceeded via Kohima to Shillong. The day previous to the general's departure the youthful Raja of Manipore was brought to him.

A Manipore correspondent writes on Sept. 13 :—Captain Reynolds, brigade transport officer, having been promoted in the battalion of his regiment, the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, on home service, will shortly leave the force, being relieved by Lieutenant Mackworth, of the 2nd Queen's, who is already on his way up. I regret to have to write that Major Ridgeway, V.C., 44th Goorkha Rifles, has had a severe attack of fever, coupled with a slight sunstroke. He is now, however, getting on well. A good deal of fever still hangs about the valley, but another fortnight ought to find us almost free of that dread insidious enemy.

Another correspondent writing from Manipore on the 13th instant, gives the following items of intelligence :—“The site for cantonments has been selected by a committee north of the walled enclosure, and now awaits the usual approval of the powers that be. Twenty thousand rupees has been allotted, I understand, for the erection of a new residency, but at present no site has been selected. The citadel will, of course, always remain garrisoned. The transport train, which has all along been starved, is to be augmented by 1,000 pack bullocks, which are to be purchased in India, and to reach Nigriting some time in October. This augmentation is sorely needed, and the arrival of these animals will save the chief commissariat officer many an anxious moment. The original idea was to purchase 500 Panthay mules, but the prices asked were considered prohibitive, and bullocks were therefore substituted. A regiment of Madras Pioneers will arrive on the line shortly, probably towards the end of this month, for work in the Nichugard-Kohima Road, which sadly needs repair. A company of Sappers and Miners would not come amiss for this kind of work.

With reference to the Notification in the Gazette of India, No. 1,700 E, dated Aug. 21, 1891, regarding the regrant of the Manipore State, it is notified in the last Gazette of India that the Governor-General in Council has selected Chura Chand, son of Chowbi Yaima, and great-grandson of Raja Nar Singh, of Manipore, to be Raja of Manipore. The Sanad given to Chura Chand is published for general information. It is as follows :—“The Governor-General in Council has been pleased to select you Chura Chand, son of Chowbi Yaima, to be chief of the Manipore State; and you are hereby granted the title of Raja of Manipore, and a salute of eleven guns. The chieftship of the Manipore State and the title and salute will be hereditary in your family; and will descend in the direct line by primogeniture, provided that in each case the succession is approved by the Government of India. An annual tribute, the amount of which will be determined hereafter, will be paid by you and your successors to the British Government. Further, you are informed that the permanence of the grant conveyed by this Sanad will depend upon the ready fulfilment by you and your successors of all orders given by the British Government with regard to the administration of your territories, the control of the hill tribes dependent upon Manipore, the composition of the armed forces of the State, and any other matters in which the British Government may be pleased to intervene. Be assured that so long as your house is loyal to the Crown and faithful to the conditions of this Sanad, you and your successors will enjoy the favour and protection of the British Government.”

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

It is expected that the graded list of the Educational Department of the Punjab will be abolished, so far as concerns future appointments. It is unlikely, a Lahore correspondent says, that, except in rare cases, appointments to the superior grades will continue to be made by the Secretary of State. The Educational Department will look to India to supply most of its wants.

A notification in the Indian Home Department states that the Government of India considers it advisable to cancel the order of 1886, relating to ex officio titles in the Public Works Department. This is done owing to the difficulty in connection with the extension of the practice to other departments. Those officers and subordinates already in receipt of the same will, however, retain them.

According to the present rules each fourth appointment in the Opium Department is reserved for natives, but in future, instead of being by nomination, appointments are to be made by examination. The subject and time of examination are the same as are prescribed for candidates for the executive branch of the Provincial Service. The next examination is in February. Eight of the nominations of candidates who may enter for examination remain with the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

We (Indian Engineering) are informed with reference to remarks which have appeared anent slow promotion in the N.-W. Provinces that this state of affairs is not confined to that administration, but is equally the case elsewhere. We observe, on consulting the Bengal List, that there are men of twelve to fifteen years' standing, well-known for their capabilities, who have not yet reached the permanent rank of executive engineer. This must be very discouraging to the Service, and by neglecting to attend to these matters Government is certainly not serving its own interests.

The following Resolution has been issued by the Government of India :—In modification of the rules for the regulation of appointments in the Secretariat Clerical Service of the Government of India and attached offices published with the Notification of the 3rd July, 1888, and in continuation of the Resolution of the 13th November, 1888, the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that those rules shall not apply to classes VII (Rs. 50—75), VIII (Rs. 35—50) and IX (Rs. 25—35) of appointments in the Statistical Branch, and to classes IX (Rs. 25—35) and X (Rs. 20—25) in the General Branch of the Department of Finance and Commerce. That Department will also have authority to recruit without reference to the rules in the case of appointments in class VIII (Rs. 35—50) in its General Branch at any time when it considers it necessary to do so, but ordinarily recruitment to that class will be from passed candidates. No clerk other than a passed candidate who enters the classes now exempted from the operation of the rules after the date of this Resolution shall be eligible for promotion to the classes above class VII in the Statistical and class VIII in the General Branch, except in accordance with rule 12 of the Rules of the 3rd July, 1888.

[We trust our readers can understand the Resolution.]

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Sir George Greaves at the Central Gymnasium.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay visited the Central Gymnasium at Wanowrie on Sept. 23, where an excellent programme of exercises of various kinds was gone through. Sir George Greaves, who was accompanied by Capt. Le Gallais, A.D.C., was received on arrival at the Gymnasium by Lieut.-Col. W. James, the Inspector of Gymnasias, Bombay and Madras, the following officers being also present :—Brig.-Gen. Gatacre, Brig.-Gen. Hogg, Major-Gen. Blundell, Lieut.-Col. Stopford, R.A., Capt. Page, Capt. Upperton, A.D.C., and Major Duperier, R.E. The whole of the trained men undergoing a three months' course were in attendance, and numbered about 130 in all. The special classes, which include non-commissioned officers from every corps and station in the Presidency, went through some advanced exercises on the parallel bars; the horizontal bar, and the lofty trapeze, which were satisfactorily performed, and they “grouped” themselves very prettily together on the trapeze. The musical dumb-bell exercise was next gone through, after which Sergeant-Major O'Gorman, the Chief Instructor, gave a capital exhibition of lead-cutting. With ease he cut clean through with a sword a block of lead something over two inches thick—a thing which very few men in the whole Presidency can do. Several of the officers present then tried it. Generals Gatacre and Hogg made some excellent strokes, but could not cut through the 1½-inch bar. Finally, his Excellency himself took the sword, and with a dexterous stroke cut the bar clean through, amidst ringing cheers by the on-lookers. The entire programme was very efficiently and satisfactorily carried out, and reflected great credit on Colonel James and his Chief Instructor.

Impending Resignations.—In the early part of next year there promises to be a game of general post among some of the higher military appointments, says a Simla correspondent of the Times of India. On April 1 both the first-class districts of Lucknow and Lahore will become vacant through the retirement of Generals Perkins and Sir Hugh Gough, while on Jan. 13 and April 22 Brig.-Gens. Low and Keen will retire from Rohilkhand and Peshawur. We should not be surprised if General Nairne, who hands over charge of the Inspector-Generalship of Artillery to General Tillard in April, were to succeed to the Lahore District, and probably Col. Collett may be sent to Peshawur. Col. P. Harris intends to resign the service in February next instead of two months later, when his time is actually up. He will have had no less than forty-one years' service in India, of which thirty-seven will have been spent in the Plains. General Tillard is now in England, engaged in visiting the various arsenals and camps. He returns to India about the end of December.

Staff College Dinner at Poona.—The annual dinner of the Staff College of the Bombay and Madras Armies took place on Sept. 22 at the Club of Western India. This is the first occasion on which the function has taken place in Poona. The members of the Staff College who were present were :—Major-Gen. Blundell, Brig.-Gen. Gatacre, D.S.O., Brig.-Gen. Hogg, Col. Lugard, Col. Curties, Major Jeffreys, R.A., assistant adjutant general, Belgaum, Capt. Kitchner, Capt. T. P. Geoghegan and Major Penton. The guests were :—H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Lieut.-Gen. B. H. Pottinger, R.A., Col. F. W. Rhodes, D.S.O., Major C. J. Blomfield and Capt. Le Gallais, aide-de-camp.

The “Honour and Glory” Match.—The first twenty scores in the “Honour and Glory” match are as follows :—Changla Gully School of Musketry, 939 points; 9th Bombay Inf., 904 points; Prince of Wales' Borderers, 900 points; 3rd Punjab Volunteer Rifles, 898 points; 2nd Punjab Volunteer Rifles, 895 points; 2nd Queen's, 888 points; Wilts Regt., 884 points; Seaforth Highlanders, 878 points; 37th Dogras, 876 points; 1st Rifle Brig., 871 points; Calcutta Station, 865 points; 25th Punjab Inf., 863 points; 2nd Royal Warwick, 7th Dragoon Guards, Derbyshire Regt., and 1st team, B. B. & C. I. Railway Volunteers, 862 points; East Lancashire, 861 points; 2nd Bedford, 859 points; Worcester Regt., 855 points; Calcutta Volunteers, 850 points; Naini Tal Station, 849 points; 11th Bengal Inf., 848 points. In all 150 teams completed.

Officers for Gilgit.—Among the officers likely to be sent to Gilgit this autumn are Capt. Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs, now brigade-major of the Hazara Field Force; Lieut. Aylmer, R.E., Bengal Sappers and Miners; Lieuts. Duncan, 23rd Pioneers, Eustace, 2nd Sikhs, Beresford and Taylor, 3rd Sikhs, and Williams, 43rd Goorkha Rifles. Three officers will accompany the 200 Goorkhas sent to strengthen the agent's guard.

The Volunteer Conference.—The Volunteer Conference, which is to meet at Simla next week, a telegram of Sept. 25 says, is an informal committee only, but arrangements may probably be made for a representative committee, with members from Madras and Bombay, to meet in Calcutta in the cold weather. Col. Rivett-Carnac, C.I.E.,

Mr. J. P. Hewett, Deputy Secretary, Home Department, Mr. Maude, Punjab Secretariat, and Major Leigh, commanding the Simla Volunteers, are likely to be the members present at the Conference.

A School of Musketry for the Imperial Service Troops.—A School of Musketry is about to be established at Meerut for the special use of the Imperial Service Troops, Captain Cox, from Secunderabad, is now on his way up to take charge. Col. Melliss, Chief Inspecting Officer, Imperial Service Troops, will leave Simla at the end of the month for Jammu and Nahan.

The Native Army and the Martini-Henry Rifles.—The statement made in a telegram from our Allahabad correspondent, apparently on the authority of the Pioneer, regarding the re-arming of the native army with Martini-Henry rifles would seem to be a little premature, says the Times of India. So far from the Bombay Infantry having all received new rifles, there are still several regiments which still remain unprovided, and are now performing their annual course with Sniders, a large proportion of which have been in use for so long a time as seriously to impair their efficiency as shooting weapons. There are, we believe, and have been for some time, sufficient Martinis in the country in store to complete the issue to all Bombay regiments. If this is the case, it is strange that the distribution should have gone on so slowly, unless there was a doubt whether there would be sufficient ammunition available to comply with the requisitions of the newly-armed regiments. If our correspondent's telegram means that the issue is now to be proceeded with at once, it will be good hearing for those regiments which have so far been out in the cold in the former distributions. The present state of affairs is anything but satisfactory, as in some cases two regiments in a link are armed with the Martini and one with the Snider; in others, two have the Snider and one the Martini. That such an arrangement would lead to complications on active service goes without the saying. Irrespective of transfers to the service battalions being suddenly armed with a new weapon, the supply of ammunition in the field would become even a more difficult business than at present. It is bad enough to have regiments of the British service using one kind of ammunition and native regiments another; but the confusion that would arise were some native regiments to need Snider and others Martini from the reserve to replenish their supply would be hopeless. For a time, until the introduction of the magazine rifle for British corps, both will be armed alike, and, despite the excellence which the new rifle will doubtless attain when at last it reaches its final "Mark," its advent will be almost a matter for regret, as again introducing the double ammunition supply with its concomitant disadvantages in the field.

The camp of exercise for the Punjab States Imperial Service troops will be held in November and December at Dhablan, near Patiala.

The question of raising a fresh 4th Punjab Cavalry Regt. has now advanced to the stage of detailed inquiry as to the expense likely to be incurred for barrack accommodation, horses, and equipment.

A matter which will probably engage the attention of the Government of India is the increase of the number of mountain batteries, as the present establishment is scarcely equal to all the demands made upon it.

The Government of India, it is believed, have ruled that the Madras cavalry regiments are in future to be horsed with Arabs and Persians, instead of Australians, as heretofore.

At the examination for admission to the Staff College in May 1892, questions will be set in Military History in Parts 1 to 5—Operations of War, on Theatres of War on the Danube and Rhine, and the Campaign in Virginia, 1862.

It is notified that the Secretary of State has decided that the sons of officers of Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers who have elected for continuous service in India shall be placed, as regards Queen's India Cadetships and Honorary Queen's India Cadetships, on the same footing as the sons of officers of the Indian Army.

Two more Madras infantry regiments are to be converted into local corps for Burma, 1,800 men being transferred from the Military Police to the Regular Army. The new local regiments will be constituted on similar lines to those followed in the case of the four battalions already formed.

The Meerut Central Rifle Association Meeting extends from Dec. 15 to 22. The date of firing the team matches extends for both British and native armies from Sept. 1 to Nov. 7. The system adopted by the Council in 1889 has been further extended by the introduction of a separate prize list for the cavalry and infantry of the Native Army.

A company of the 2nd batt. Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment from Umballa is shortly to proceed to Gna'ong, Sikkim, to relieve the company of the 2nd King's Liverpool Regt., the latter regiment being under orders for Aden. A temporary rest-camp is to be opened at Sahebgunj for the accommodation of the Queen's detachment when passing through.

It is understood that the system of purchasing remounts for the Army at fairs by a committee is now decisively condemned, and that the former practice, under which cavalry officers selected and purchased horses for their own regiments, will be restored during the coming season. This, says an Indian paper, is a good measure. There is no doubt that the withdrawal of competition involved by the condemned system has gone far to make owners shy of bringing their horses for sale at fairs where the price had become considerably lowered.

Her Majesty's Indian Marine steamer Clive (Captain B. P. Creagh) was to sail from Bombay on Sept. 26 for Bushire, via Kurrachee, with the following details for Kurrachee:—Surgeon Younger, I.M.S., 3 warrant officers, 14 men, 22 followers, and 17 mules, and Surgeon Hojel, I.M.S., for Bushire.

Her Majesty's Indian Marine steamer Dalhousie (Captain C. M. R. Hooper) would sail on Sept. 25 for Aden with the following officers and details:—Captain Tyrwhitt, R.A., Lieut. Bell, R.A., Captain Tripp, the King's (Liverpool Regiment), 1 warrant officer, 1 woman,

2 children and 11 men, 2 native officers, 28 natives, rank and file, 4 hospital assistants, 36 followers, 6 women, 7 children, and 2 mules. Major James Nicholson Sodon Kirkwood has been appointed Lieutenant-Colonel.

Col. C. P. D. Payne, Indian Staff Corps, has been granted permission to retire from the Service.

Lieut. G. C. McD. Birdwood, Indian Staff Corps, has been granted leave for six months on medical certificate.

Major F. T. N. Spratt, R.E., Military Secretary to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay, has been granted leave for one year.

Deputy Commissary and Honorary Capt. H. A. Bennett, Commissariat Department, and Lieut-Col. B. G. Humfrey, Indian Staff Corps, have been allowed to retire from the Service.

Col. Merriman, Chief Engineer in Bombay, in command of the Military Works Department, will probably proceed home on furlough very shortly.

The Deputy Directorship for Fortifications in the Military Works Department will shortly fall vacant, as Major Hildebrand is likely to be promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel on the home establishment.

The medal presented annually by the Viceroy for competition by the Simla Rifle Club has been won by Capt. Hayden with 117 out of a possible 140. Lieut. A. Elsmie won the second medal with 113, and Capt. Hume the third with 109.

Capt. L. C. Arbuthnot, 2nd batt. Suffolk Regt., succeeds to the appointment of adjutant of the Bangalore Volunteer Rifle Corps, vice Capt. Ensor. Capt. Arbuthnot, who is now commanding the detachment of the Suffolk Regiment at Calicut, formerly belonged to the Prince of Wales's Volunteers (South Lancashire Regiment).

The undermentioned officers have been allowed by the Secretary of State for India to retire from the Service:—Deputy Commy. and Honorary Capt. H. A. Bennett, Commissariat Department, from Oct. 1; and Lieut. Col. B. G. Humfrey, Indian Staff Corps, from Nov. 6.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Sept. 23.

The Assam Coolie Question.—The Government of India has sent home the final proposals on the Assam Coolie Question, and until a reply from the Secretary of State is received nothing will be done. It is not proposed to abolish either Act XIII. of 1859 or Act I. of 1882, but amendments will be added affecting both Bengal as the recruiting and Assam as the receiving province. Act I. of 1882, which was recently extended to Ganjam, is not unlikely to be applied to the Central Provinces. The Allahabad correspondent of the Times of India says on Sept. 18:—The terms of the despatch on the Assam Coolies Emigration Question will finally be settled at Thursday's meeting of the Legislative Council, and the Secretary of State is to be addressed forthwith. The Government of India do not propose to abolish the existing Labour Acts, but to amend and improve Act I. of 1882. The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce have asked that Act I. be extended to the Central Provinces, from which labour is now being drawn, consequent on the opening of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway.

Suttee in Bengal.—News reaches us, says a mofussil journal, of a case of suttee from Bengal. The girl is said, of course, to have been very anxious to immolate herself on her husband's funeral pyre, but to have been prevented, and at the last moment to have rushed down to it and thrown herself on to it before she could be prevented, and when rescued, to have been so badly burnt that she died shortly afterwards. The truth probably is that she was induced to do it, drugged and excited, and that good care was taken not to take her off until it was too late. A police inquiry will, we presume, be held into the matter.

Attempt at Outrage.—In August a dastardly attempt at outrage was committed on the East Indian Railway near Luckie Serai, the victim being Miss Morrison, a young lady of about fifteen years, who was travelling alone to Bhagulpore, and was attacked by two young men, who entered her compartment with their faces muffled. Owing to this their identification was not very certain, but the railway authorities, having discovered enough to bring strong suspicion on two workshop apprentices, named Hyland and Jamieson, these men were brought up before the district magistrate. Jamieson, the less guilty of the two, thereupon made a full confession, and Hyland was accordingly tried before the sessions judge of Bhagulpore on Sept. 23, when he pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment. The prisoner was removed from the dock in a state of great nervous prostration. His unexpected plea of "guilty" caused a great shock to his father and friends, who had secured legal assistance on his behalf at great expense. Much sympathy is felt for the father and family of the accused in local circles.

Snake Worship.—On Sept. 16 a somewhat interesting festival was celebrated by the Hindoos of Bengal. This was nothing else than the worshipping, or rather, as a native correspondent writes, the appeasing of the snake-demon. The festival is known among the Hindoos as Munsha Puja, and the manner of celebrating it is that in every Hindoo family the day is practically observed as a fast—that is, no orthodox Hindoo will eat any freshly-cooked food, but his meals consist of what has been cooked the day before. Stale rice is the general meal, and everyone is supposed to bathe in the waters of Gunga in the early morning. There was, in consequence, a very large gathering at the different ghâts, where the representative member of each family made his usual offering of rice, flowers, and fruit, and distributed charity, according to his means. The Biscammah Puja, which is the peculiar festival of blacksmiths, goldsmiths, and carpenters, was also celebrated on the 23rd. It is equivalent to the Sri Punchomi Puja of the Hindoo clerk, and none of the members of these trades worked. As a result the different foundries and dockyards were closed.

A Costly Cow.—The cow which caused a riot between the Mahomedans and Hindoos at Gya last July has been the subject of further contention. The animal was taken possession of at the time of the disturbance by the police. Subsequently the Mahomedan owners claimed it, but the Hindoos protested, and finally the Mahomedans consented to the cow being sold. The Hindoos bought it for 900 rs., and are now exhibiting and worshipping it. The value of the cow before the riot was about 6 rs.

The Statistics of Tea Cultivation in Bengal for the year 1890 show that there were 416 plantations against 399 in 1889, and that the area under the plant was 85,203 acres against 79,006 acres in the preceding year. In addition 46,459 acres have been taken up for planting, but have not yet been planted out. The total yield of the year was 24,923,269 lbs. as against 25,089,423 in 1889; of this, 24,834,849 lbs. were black tea, and 88,420 lbs. green tea. The plantations are found in the following districts:—Darjeeling 177, Jalpaiguri 173, Lohardagga 29, Chittagong 24, Dacca 6, Hazaribagh 6, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts 1.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Sept. 24.

The Appointment of a Suffragan Bishop.—Drs. Sargeant and Caldwell, Suffragan Bishops of the C.M.S. and S.P.G. Missions, respectively, in the Tinnevely district, being dead, it is under the consideration of the home boards of these Societies and the Secretary of State in conjunction with the authorities in India, whether for the future there should be either one Suffragan Bishop for the whole of the Madras Presidency to assist the Bishop of Madras, or one Suffragan Bishop for Tinnevely district, or whether Tinnevely should not be made a separate diocese.

The Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association.—Mr. F. Rowlandson has been installed as President of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association of Southern India, with considerable formality, resembling a masonic ceremony. It is generally expected, a Madras telegram says, that with such a President as it now has acquired, the association will be lifted to a desirable position it has never yet attained. The local leading papers attach so much importance to the event that the first place in the editorial columns is given to the articles commenting thereon.

Mortality in Madras.—From Sept. 12 to Sept. 18, 3 Europeans, 20 East Indians, 50 Native Christians, 664 Hindoos, and 123 Mahomedans died within Municipal limits in Madras, making a total of 860 persons. The average of the corresponding week for the ten previous years was 308. The deaths are thus classified:—182 from cholera, 3 from measles, 205 from fevers, 119 from dysentery, 94 from diarrhoea, and 257 from other diseases. The death-rate in the week under notice was 112·1 per 1,000 per annum. The mean of the ten previous years was 40·2 per 1,000 per annum. The cholera, however, is said to be decreasing.

New quarters are, says Indian Engineering, to be constructed for the men of the Governor's Band, Madras, at a cost of 58,100 rs. The site selected is at the south-east corner of Government House Park, a short distance from the public offices at Chepauk. The work is to be put in hand at once. The outlay is, we think, quite unnecessary, for surely quarters for the bandmen might be found in the Fort or elsewhere.

The report of the Local Government on the Madras indigo crop for the year 1891 is as follows:—"The sowings for the current year are estimated at 108,000 acres, against 158,000 acres in the previous year, and 246,000 acres, the normal area under the crop. The decrease is due to the unfavourable season. The crop is poor and is urgently in want of rain."

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Sept. 26.

The Bombay University.—The Hon. Mr. Justice Birdwood, Vice-Chancellor, presided at a meeting of the Senate of the Bombay University held on Sept. 18. Among the business on the agenda paper was a motion to consider the regulations regarding the matriculation examination, which arose in consequence of complaints having been received through Government from the principals of several colleges and from educational inspectors and headmasters of high schools as to the insufficiency of the present regulations. Principal R. G. Oxenham proposed the adoption of certain recommendations made by the Syndicate to bring about an alteration in the existing state of affairs. The motion having been seconded by Professor V. S. Apte, Dr. P. Peterson moved that the meeting should be adjourned till Friday, Dec. 4. He took this course, he explained, because he considered that the Senate were not at present in a position to deal with the matter. They were now practically at the end of the term, and therefore no harm would result from the postponement he had proposed; on the other hand, it would give the members an opportunity to consider the various points bearing on the question. He further maintained that the procedure adopted by the Syndicate in reference to the matter was perfectly unprecedented. After considerable discussion, in which the Hon. Mr. Justice Jardine, the Hon. Mr. Justice Telang, Mr. P. M. Mehta, and other gentlemen took part, the proposed adjournment was agreed to and the Senate adjourned accordingly.

The Tansa Waterworks Loan.—The Times of India of Sept. 26 says:—"The Municipal Commissioner, who went home on short leave last week, was able, on the eve of his departure, to make an announcement that will be welcome to the Corporation and to the citizens at large. He told the Standing Committee on Wednesday that he had received that morning a communication from the Government of India acquiescing in the prayer of the Corporation for the extension of the term of repayment of the Tansa Waterworks Loan. The long controversy has ended—as a good many controversies between the Municipality and Government, between now and Domesday, may have to end—in a compromise. The first two instalments, of 17 lacs and 30 lacs respectively, will be repaid in sixty years, though at one time it was intended that they should be repaid on the shorter term originally sanctioned; the term for the third and fourth, amounting to 50 lacs, is forty years; the fifth, of 25 lacs, is to be repaid in fifty years, and the sixth in sixty years. Thus about half the loan will extend over the longer term, and a third of the remainder will be a fifty years loan, leaving only 50 lacs with the condition of repayment in forty years attached to them. In other words, only a third of the debt will be subject to the stringent condition originally attached to it. The victory is not a victory all along the line, it is true, but the Corporation have won rather more than their five points out of ten. It is due to Mr. Acworth to record that the compromise by which the Municipality will gain more than a lac of rupees per annum, is on the basis of an arrangement that was suggested by Mr. Acworth, though in the first instance it was not approved of by the Committee whom the Corporation appointed to report upon the subject.

Mr. Latham's Bombay Drainage Scheme.—The Bombay Government have declined, on the score of expense, the Bombay Gazette says, to sanction Mr. Baldwin Latham's scheme for the supplementing and completing of the Bombay drainage. The refusal, it should be explained, is confined to that part of the proposals which provided for a great main sewer from the north of the island along the eastern side of the city to Colaba, the point where the outfall for the whole system should in his opinion be placed. This proposal was admittedly of almost prohibitive cost, and Mr. Latham will be in no wise surprised to learn that it has on that account been set aside. But the other suggestions which were included in the plans will very probably be carried out. They provide for the speedy discharge of the storm water during the monsoon into the sea by the shortest channels, so as to limit the danger of the flooding of the sewers, which should be left to discharge their legitimate function of carrying sewage to the outfall, whether placed at Colaba, where he would prefer to see it, or at Worli which, next to Colaba, is the most convenient locality available, and so obviate the fouling of the fine foreshore at the foot of Worli Hill and along the sea face to Mahaluxmee.

Gallant Rescue by an Officer.—A Poona telegram of Sept. 22 says:—"Last night, a drowning fatality occurred by which one European soldier lost his life and another was only saved by the gallant conduct of an officer. Privates Thomas and Hibbett, of the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, got into a small canoe intended for one person on the tank opposite St. Mary's Church. The canoe upset in about 20 feet of water; the men struggled a few moments and sank. Just then Captain Hovell and Major Rainsford, of the Worcestershire Regiment, came by, and Captain Hovell, grasping the situation, threw off his clothes and jumped in. He got hold of Hibbett with difficulty, and with the assistance of Major Rainsford struggled with him to shore, and, after some exertion, restored his respiration. The body of his comrade was not found till nine this morning.

Deportation of a Russian from Bombay.—About a month ago, says an Indian journal, a man who appeared to be a Russian arrived in Bombay by a steamer, and was found walking about the streets of Bombay in what seemed to be a suspicious manner. The police followed his movements and ultimately found out that the stranger was a Russian, named Ladislas De Pietrisky Kefoski. Colonel Wilson, Commissioner of Police, wrote to the Government of Bombay regarding the presence of this Russian in Bombay, and he was kept under police surveillance. He is about fifty years of age, and speaks only Russian and French. The Government, on getting intimation sent them by Colonel Wilson, deemed it expedient to deport the stranger from Bombay. A warrant of deportation was accordingly issued from the Political Department, Bombay Government, and in pursuance of this warrant of deportation a passage was engaged for the Russian by the ss. Sulamati, the agents for which vessel are Messrs. Beyts, Craig and Co., at the expense of the Bombay Government, so that he might be deported from British territory. The stranger first said to the police that he came to India in search of some employment, but subsequently he stated that he came to India only as a traveller. The vessel was to sail last night, and every precaution was taken that the Russian would not leave the vessel before it sailed.

Nose-cutting.—We (Times of India) rejoice to see that Mr. Justice Jardine and Mr. Justice Parsons are determined to do what they can to bring the heinous nature of the crime of nose-cutting home to the people who practise it commonly as an ordinary punishment for marital offences. Their attention was called to this especial case, and a very bad case it is, by a letter from the Government of Bombay. The accused, it appears, had one night tied his wife by her arms and legs to a bedstead, and then with a penknife cut off the whole of the soft parts of her nose and a portion of her upper lip. The excuse he gave for his act was that she had confessed that during his absence in Calcutta, some time previous, she had had an intrigue with another man, and that since his return she had twice run off to the house of her sister, and that she said she would run away again. No evidence of her infidelity was brought before Mr. Hamilton, the second Presidency magistrate, by whom the case was originally tried, and she merely admitted that she had run away from her husband. The offence of cutting off a wife's nose is very properly punishable with imprisonment up to ten years, and the case should have been at once sent to the sessions. Mr. Hamilton made one capital blunder in thinking that he was capable of dealing with it himself, and a blunder that is worse still in the way he chose to express himself:—"The accused," he laid it down, "is not a criminal, but an honest working man, who feels himself grossly wronged by his wife's misconduct, and has unfortunately punished her in a cruel way," and then he proceeded to sentence the accused to two years' rigorous imprisonment. The sentence and the remarks with which it was preceded at once attracted the attention of the Government of Bombay, who moved the appellate side of the High Court to review Mr. Hamilton's decision. Mr. Justice Parsons found that the sentence was wholly inadequate for "such a fiendish act," which was found by the magistrate to have been deliberately committed by the accused, apparently for the sole reason that the complainant would not live with him as his wife :—"As the sentence is the utmost that the magistrate could pass, it follows that the offence was one that could not be adequately punished by the Presidency magistrate. He had, therefore, no jurisdiction to try the accused, but was bound in law to have committed him for trial to the High Court." Mr. Justice Jardine spoke to much the same effect. Mr. Hamilton's conviction and sentence were, therefore, quashed, and he was directed to commit the prisoner for trial by the High Court.

The Government of India have still under consideration the memorial of the Bombay Corporation against the increase of the police charges being placed wholly on the Municipality.

Dr. Wier, Health Officer, Bombay, in his quarterly report, predicts a small-pox epidemic during next cold weather, and stated at a meeting of the Standing Committee that, in the abnormal atmospheric conditions during the present monsoon, there is bound to be much distressing sickness between now and next year.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs yesterday :—

General Sir F. Roberts and staff will arrive here on Feb. 12, and will leave on the 20th. The Commander-in-Chief's movements in Burma are not yet settled, but he will probably visit Mandalay.

There is no material change to chronicle in the condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma during the past week. The prospect, however, is generally more hopeful. The system of relief work is now well organised. The numbers employed on these works have been increased in certain districts and diminished in others. Owing to the fact that a great many detached works are being carried on, considerable difficulty exists in ascertaining the exact number of those employed on the relief works, but it is certain that the recent returns understated the total. The price of rice continues to go up. Yesterday it was sold in Rangoon at 385 rs. per 100 baskets. In the country districts prices rule higher still. These rates necessarily cause considerable distress to the poorer classes in the Lower as well as in the Upper Province.

A party of twelve Chin chiefs, escorted by Lieutenant M'Nabb, the Assistant Commissioner in the Chin country, who accepted the invitation of the Chief Commissioner to visit Rangoon, are now here. They represent the following tribes, among others :—The Hakas, Kohimas, Thettas, and Kanlangs. With the two last-named tribes we had fights early in the present year. The Thettas repulsed the attacks made on their head village in 1890 and in the present year, and only yielded when two columns, both with guns, were sent to make a third attack. No chief of the important Tashon tribe would come.

These Chin chiefs, who are very primitive and ignorant, express great wonder at all they have seen. Sir A. Mackenzie has wisely taken every opportunity of quietly showing them how hopeless would be any resistance to the columns which in a few days will visit their mountains. Yesterday a parade was held of all the European and native troops in the garrison, and the Chin chiefs were present at the saluting-point. They seemed much impressed when the Norfolk Regiment marched past in splendid style, but what seemed specially to amaze them was the presence of several ladies on horseback. On the previous day the Chin chiefs were taken to the river batteries, and the heavy guns were fired for their benefit. At this novel experience they showed great alarm. When the Chins visited the military police lines they found some men engaged in a tug of war, and the chiefs proposed that a team of their followers should pull against the police. They, however, proved unable to resist the stalwart Sikhs.

A minute by the chief commissioner has been published urging all European residents in Rangoon to join a Volunteer Rifle or Artillery Corps. There are about 1,700 European and Eurasian adult males in Rangoon, while the total number of Volunteers is only 480, of whom about fifty-three are artillerymen. Sir A. Mackenzie specially urges the importance of strengthening the Artillery Corps, and raising a force to defend the port. Major Temple, son of Sir Richard Temple, and President of the Rangoon Municipality, an officer of energy and ability, who has already successfully commanded the Upper Burma Volunteers, has been appointed commandant of the Artillery Volunteers.

The recently constructed batteries, and especially the submarine mining defences of Rangoon, are sufficiently strong, if adequately manned, to resist any attack on the town. The Chief Commissioner appeals to the members of the mercantile community who are themselves unable to serve to co-operate by subscribing. The appeal will certainly be liberally responded to, for Rangoon merchants are proverbial for the liberality with which they subscribe to useful public objects, and are certain to recognise the necessity of providing for the efficient defence of the third commercial port in British India, in whose safety they are so deeply interested.

Mr. Warry, of the Chinese consular service, and political officer at Bhamo, is about to go on furlough. The local government have applied for another Chinese attaché from Peking.

A Reuter telegram from Rangoon, dated Oct. 10, says :—

On the night of the 5th inst. the police engaged some dacoits near Mansi, capturing the arms of the party. On the following morning the dacoits returned to the spot and attacked the police, wounding one of their number. The latter thereupon gave chase to the gang, and finally captured a chief named Boh-Byn, who promises to guide them to Leoble's (or Boh Leh's) camp.

Lienpunga and Khalkan, two of the Lushai Chiefs imprisoned at Hazaribagh, committed suicide by strangling themselves in a most determined manner with a rope. Elaborate precautions had been taken to guard the prisoners, and the officials are at a loss to say how they procured the rope, though an inquiry was instituted immediately after the occurrence. The surviving Chief, Thangula, is said to be inconsolable. These Chiefs were concerned in the murder of Lieut. Stewart.

A Fort White telegram of Sept. 19 says :—The Kanhows and the Siyins are very friendly, and are doing all in their power for us, but the Nwengals have made no advances whatever. Mr. Carey is on his way up again, and on his arrival Captain Rose will hand over political charge to him. With him returns Myook Maung Tun Win, who has been away on leave, and who is the only man, who, so far, has qualified in the Chin language. Nearly all the remainder of the 1st Company of the Madras Sappers have gone down to Mandalay, only twenty-five being left here. It is rumoured that they will go to Assam in the cold weather. The rainfall has now almost reached 100 inches, and lately the sun has begun to appear once more. The health of those who have remained in the stockade has uniformly been very good.

The cold weather operations in Burma, the Times of India says, will this season be carried out by nine columns, four in the Bhamo District and five in the Chin Hills. In the former division, the Hugong valley and the amber and jade mines will be explored; the Irrawaddy country will be explored on both banks of the river from the confluence of the two branches of the Irrawaddy, the Malikha and the Nmarkha, upwards; the eastern frontier north of the Taiping will be examined, operations of the column starting from Bhamo and marching northwards along the hills, and finally a fourth column will operate in the country south of the Taiping and work down the hills to Namkan. For the operations in the Chin Hills, a Kanhow column will be formed to explore the Kanhow country, with Tiddin for a rendezvous; a Nwengal column will explore the Nwengal and Yahow country; a Baungshe column will rendezvous at Minywa and march first to Shurkwa and thence to Haka; a Tlangtang column will be formed at Haka and operate against the villages of Tao Hryanran, Munlipi, and Tungyaing, a column from Fort Tregear co-operating; and a column will also form at Haka to operate against the Tashons, Nwengals and Yahows, on the return of the Tlangtang column. To provide troops for these nine columns, one section of a mountain battery will move from Mandalay to Fort White, two sections of a mountain battery will go from India to Haka, and one to Fort White. Half a wing of the King's Royal Rifles goes to Haka, half a wing to Fort White; the 1st Burma Battalion goes to Fort White, the 2nd Burma Battalion goes to Haka; the 22nd Madras Infantry moves from Bhamo to the Southern Shan States, the 3rd Burma Battalion to Bhamo, and a wing of the 1st Madras Pioneers will go from India to Haka and Fort White. The season thus promises to be a busy one, with promise of excellent work. Little fighting is anticipated, the Tashons and Yahows being the only tribes likely to give any trouble, and these are not strong enough for anything more than a night attack. From first to last, the operations are expected to last until March.

HYDERABAD.

THE NIZAM'S GOVERNMENT have ordered a survey to be made of a proposed railway line, to start from one of the stations situated in the Nizam's territory on the Dhond and Manmad Railway, and join the Nizam's Railway at Warrangal. The line will pass through Aurungabad, Jalnah, Beed, and Indore, thus opening out these rich wheat and cotton-producing districts. The services of Mr. Newcombe have been lent by the Government of India for this survey, and the work has been fairly started.

THE FINAL TIE of the Hyderabad Polo Tournament was played on Sept. 23 between the 7th Hussars and the Paigah teams, the former winning the cup, value five hundred rupees, presented by H.H. the Nizam, by five goals to three. The play was fast and good throughout, and a great number of spectators were present, among them being Sir Dennis and the Misses Fitzpatrick, Sir Asman Jah and General East. The game excited the keenest interest. The winning team was :—Captains Haig, Nicholson, and Leibert, and the Hon. Mr. Beresford. Captain Leibert took Mr. Poore's place, as he met with an accident when playing on the 22nd.

The New Press Rules.—The vernacular papers, observes the Pioneer, seem to have generally fallen into error in believing that the recent orders of the Government of India, by which the press in cantonments, Residency bazaars, and other islands of British administered native territory is regulated and licensed, apply to all papers published in Native States. This error received some countenance by the mistaken action of an officer in the Central Provinces, who prohibited the publication, in the State of Nandgaon, of the Prajahitaihi; and native journalists will doubtless continue to cite this as an indication of the true scope of the Government regulation, notwithstanding that the orders passed in the case were reversed immediately on their being discovered. As to other papers which have been quoted as having suffered, the Sirmur Gazette, published in Nahan, stopped of its own accord sooner than ask permission—which was not required. The excuse in this instance may have been put forward in ignorance, or it may be a convenient way of accounting for a dissolution which could in no case be prevented. We noticed the end of the Deccan Times some weeks ago; no one who knows the circumstances of its decease can honestly ascribe it to the action of the Resident at Hyderabad or any other British authority.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

IT HAS BEEN DECIDED that one of the two Judicial Commissioners for Oude may be selected from among the duly qualified members of the local Bar, the qualification to include a competent knowledge of the vernacular.

THE CRICKET MATCH, Simla versus Outstations, ended in a draw greatly in favour of the visitors. The latter made 243 in the first innings (Rattigan 51, Shea 31). Simla, with 105 to the bad, began their second innings after heavy rain. They lost eight wickets for 124 (Walker 50, Macmahon 25, Hewett 13, Gamble 12, not out).

FOR A CONSIDERABLE TIME past inquiries have been proceeding regarding the indebtedness of land owners in the Central Provinces and the Punjab, and also as to whether the Deccan Ryots Act should be extended to other districts of the Bombay Presidency. Reports from the Local Governments are now before the Government of India, and it is not improbable, says the Pioneer, that a Commission will be formed to examine those reports, and consider whether the Deccan Ryots Act should be extended, and whether the application of some similar measure in other Provinces is desirable, particularly the Central Provinces and the Punjab. There is no subject connected with Indian administration which is more worthy of earnest and painstaking investigation.

AN ATTEMPT is being made in the Punjab to check the sale of illicit spirit by equalising the number of shops in each district. Much of the success which has attended the efforts to put down illicit distillation in Gurdaspur and Ludhiana is ascribed to the increased facilities which have been offered for the sale of licit spirit in suspected localities. The local Commissioner of Excise has summed up the difficulty in a few words. It is hardly equitable, he says, to sentence a man to a long term of imprisonment because he will not walk twenty miles to buy a bottle of country spirits at a price which is, perhaps, three hundred per cent. above its intrinsic value. With the object of reducing the temptation to a minimum the grant of new licences is now made with a stricter regard than heretofore to equal distribution of the liquor-shops in each district.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times telegraphed last night:—Telegraphic news from the town of Osh, in the Russian province of Ferghana, states that the expedition under Prince Galitsin has safely passed through Kashgar, Yarkand, and Karghalik without experiencing any great difficulty. The Ameer of Bokhara, who has obtained permission to visit the Czar at St. Petersburg, is expected to arrive at the terminus of the Central Asian Railway on the eastern shore of the Caspian in a few days. His Highness will thence proceed to Tiflis and through the Caucasus to the Neva capital, where apartments have already been prepared for him and his retinue of twenty-five persons in the Winter Palace.

The Russian Press, which is now somewhat elated on the subject of Russian progress and prestige in Asia, takes occasion to emphasise the fact that the good relations between Russia and Corea have lately been very materially strengthened, inasmuch as the Asiatic Department of the Russian Foreign Office has now entered into direct intercourse with the Korean Government by means of a diplomatic mission sent to that country overland, and constantly communicated with in the same manner. For the present communications with Corea are kept up by means of mounted couriers, whose route is purposely chosen through the most populous places of the Korean Peninsula. These mounted messengers, like all Russian geographers, explorers, and the like, have their journeys so ordered that every precaution is taken duly to impress the natives with the superiority and might of the Power that sends them forth. They are always escorted by a strong convoy of Cossacks, whose devil-may-care deportment, it is hoped, must exercise the desired effect of striking awe into the Korean multitude.

Mr. Charles Eliot, Secretary of the British Embassy, says a Reuter telegram, has returned to St. Petersburg from a journey in Central Asia, undertaken, it is said, for the purpose of studying the Russian system of administration in those districts.

With reference to the Pamir question, the following telegrams, presumably extracted from the Pioneer, are published in the papers to hand by this mail:—

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 18.—Captain Younghusband has left Bozai Gambaz for the Tagdumbash Pamir, north of the Kilik Pass. He is now among the friendly Kirghiz, in a country with which he is familiar, as he explored it in his last journey westwards from Mustagh Pass.

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 21.—Captain Younghusband will probably leave Tagdumbash Pamir very shortly for the Karakoram range. Lieutenant Davison is returning to Kashgar from Alichur Pamir by the northern route.

SIMLA, SEPT. 21.—It transpires that the report regarding Captain Younghusband has a certain basis of truth. He went on to the Little Pamir and sent Lieutenant Davison, of the Leinster Regiment, to the Alichur Pamir to learn the truth about the Russian exploring parties. The Russians claim to exercise supremacy on the Little and Alichur Pamirs, and have excluded Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison from that part of the country. By the "Russians" is meant the exploring parties, not the Russian Government. Lieutenant Davison, who had been travelling privately, joined Captain Younghusband at Kashgar.

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 24.—The Pamir matter will now assume the complexion of an incident calling for interchange of diplomatic communications between the English and Russian Governments, the important issue having been raised of Russia's right to extend her frontier from the Alai range to the Hindoo Koosh. The only possible meaning of the exclusion of Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison from the Pamirs is that Russia has annexed a debatable region which hitherto had been quite open to travellers of all nationalities. The disregard paid to the presence of the Chinese General is a further indication that Gromchevsky, or whoever may be in charge of the so-called exploring parties, has deliberately asserted Russian claims with a view to opening up the whole question of territorial boundaries on the Upper Oxus. This may involve a discussion of the Ameer of Cabul's right over Shignan, which he has administered for seven or eight years. The position may at any moment become a critical one, though it is doubtful whether any considerable body of Russian troops is at Alai.

From guarded information which we have published during the past few days, writes the Pioneer, our readers will probably have arrived at the conclusion that Captain Gromchevsky's exploring parties on the Pamirs have assumed that aggressive attitude which is characteristic of the Russians in Central Asia. As a matter of fact, Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison have been excluded by the Russians from the Lesser and Alichur Pamirs respectively, and being alone, without escorts, they have had to retire from the debatable ground north of the Hindoo Koosh. So far back as August 18, Captain Younghusband had to withdraw from Bozai Gambaz to the Tagdumbash Pamir. Lieutenant Davison accompanied the Russians on their return journey to the Alai range, and thence went back to Kashgar by the northern route. This action of the Russians is the more audacious as there was a Chinese General on the Alichur Pamir, who practically tried to stop their progress. He showed every possible civility to Lieutenant Davison, but was powerless to prevent his being ordered back. There can be no doubt now that the Russians have deliberately forced the question of their right to control the Pamirs between the Chinese boundary of Kashgar and the Afghan frontier at the Sarikal (Woods Lake), as laid down in the Granville Agreement of 1873. The matter is of course one of high international importance. It is a somewhat remarkable coincidence, not altogether accidental, perhaps, that at a time when the agents provocateurs of the Russians are putting themselves in evidence in Egypt and on the Pamirs, the Russian Press should be disclaiming all designs upon India and urging the advisability of an agreement between Russia and England. Admitting that there are statesmen and politicians on both sides who sincerely desire such an arrangement, which has unquestionably many arguments in its favour, the difficulties in the way have hitherto been found insuperable; but even supposing they were not, it is clear that they will rapidly become so, if Russian agents act as Captain Gromchevsky has done. Once suffer affairs of this sort, and negotiation becomes out of the question; we are, as Guizot once said, at the mercy "des incidents et des subalternes."

A trans-frontier correspondent tells a long story about a letter which is supposed to have been intercepted from an Afghan refugee, Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, at Kurrachee, to the refugee and adventurer, Nur Mahomed, in Tirah, in which the former is supposed to recommend the latter to wage war on the Ameer, and promises to send supplies of money and his son, Nur Ali, to assist. According to the Civil and Military Gazette correspondent, the Ameer's postal agent received a reward of 300 rs. for intercepting this letter, whereas it was really a forgery and given to the postal agent by a constable in the Peshawur police.

A marriage, which may not be without effect upon Afghan politics, is said to be about to take place between the ex-Ameer Yakoub Khan, at Dehra Dun, and the daughter of Nur Mahomed, the notorious refugee and adventurer who made a temporarily successful descent upon Khost a few years ago. The relationship will, no doubt, increase his prestige among the tribes, with whom he has been residing in Tirah on rather uncomfortable terms, being practically kept there as security for money lent to him for his schemes against the Ameer.

An Afghan ruler once described his country as a land of men and stones. If government after Ameer Abdul Rahman's fashion continues long, only the stones will remain, for the census which has just been taken shows a large decrease of population. The Governors of Candahar and Tashkurghan have both sent in reports of the result of the census in their territories. The first is said to show a decrease of 10,000 souls in the population of the Candahar district, compared with the results of the census taken in Ameer Sher Ali's time. The decrease is attributed to the fact that many people have left their native places for India and Beloochistan, owing to their fear of the Ameer. The report of Tashkurghan also shows only 6,000 houses as compared with 16,000 houses shown in Ameer Sher Ali's time. The decrease here is due to the men of this place, who are Uzbeks, having taken up their abode on the other side of the Oxus River owing to the distress caused among them by the exactions of the Ameer's officials.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

SINGAPORE, Oct. 8 (Times).—Advices from Amoy, dated Sept. 27, report an outbreak of rioting as having occurred at a place forty miles distant from that port. The Chinese populace, excited by fiscal abuses, boycotted the Government salt, and killed several mandarins and many smaller officials in the disturbances which ensued. The revolt was quelled, after some fighting, by the help of a force sent from Amoy, which numbered 1,000 soldiers. The trouble was purely local and due to fiscal discontent.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 9.—It is officially stated that the promoters of the Ichang cutback are now proceeding to Chung-king.

The Times publishes a long telegram from San Francisco, giving details of the Ichang riots, of which, by the way, accounts are also given in the papers received by this mail. A despatch from Hankow, dated Sept. 6, states that the steamer Paohua arrived there on that day with the Ichang refugees. They numbered twenty in all, and had lost everything except the clothes which they wore at the beginning of the outbreak. Several also bore marks of serious violence. The riot occurred in broad noonday, without either warning or provocation. It was carried out by a handful of men, who were evidently acting under orders, in the very presence of a number of Chinese officials to whom every one of the rioters was known. The work of destruction was performed with the utmost speed. A crowd collected, and a rush was made for the house belonging to the American Episcopal Mission. The gate having been smashed, a man, who was leading the mob, cried out, "Slay the foreigners," and the rioters came on with a rush towards the building. One aimed a murderous blow with a knife at Mr. Sowerby. The latter, however, disarmed his assailant and, avoiding another thrust, ran for his life to the Consulate, whence he was transferred to the Paohua. The American mission house was then set on fire, and the Yamen and soldiers fell back, neither the civil nor military mandarins making any effort to protect property. The Roman Catholic convent was next fired. The sisters, seven in number, barely escaped to the river, some, indeed, being thrown headlong down the steep bank by the soldiers. After destroying the convent, the crowd, armed with knives and axes, rushed to the Consulate, but did not attack the house in which Dr. Pirie and the Rev. Mr. Deane live together. Several other buildings, however, were burned, while Mr. Rockburn's house was ruined, and the new British Consulate in course of construction was torn down. Although no one was killed, several attempts were made to murder the foreign residents and those who sympathised with them, and threats were frequent. At the old Consulate the foreigners kept the rioters back at the bayonet point. The leaders of the mob carried gunpowder and kerosine with which to fire the buildings. Many of the rioters were soldiers who had taken off their uniforms and disguised themselves as civilians. During the whole time of the disturbances the mandarins present made no attempt whatever to prevent people from carrying away plunder, and that no lives were lost was almost entirely a matter of luck.

The North China Daily News says that there are points about the Ichang riot of serious importance, inasmuch as it was in no sense the work of the mob. There was indeed a pretext in the shape of a child which was said to have been kidnapped on the day of the riot, but this was evidently merely a subterfuge in order to give some shadow of excuse for the outbreak. The evidences, says the journal, that the riot was directed and carried out by soldiers are only too numerous. There were, moreover, people in authority who restrained the outbreak in certain directions and fostered it in others. The Chinese Brigadier-General at Ichang is a great friend to foreigners, but he was helpless in presence of an order which had evidently reached his Hunan soldiers to destroy all the foreign property they could on that day. The paper adds that where no gunboat can go the position of foreigners, unless gathered together in numbers, is very insecure. When soldiers get orders from their secret leaders, as at Ichang, they care nothing for their officers. The central Government is powerless, for it has Hunan officials everywhere, and the troops everywhere are Hunan men, except Li Hung Chang's discipline force. To order him to suppress the Hunan contingent with those men would be to begin a civil war. The journal sums up as follows:—

"The situation is very critical, and the only solution is for a foreign force to overawe the Hunan soldiers with the tacit connivance of the Chinese Government. There can be no security for foreign life or property in China unless the rebellious Hunanese are suppressed by force."

In Hankow itself things were stirring again on the day previous to the latest despatch, when it was known that a gathering was held of the anti-foreign element in the town, including a large number of magistrates and officials. They resolved that all foreigners must be driven immediately from the central provinces. The Christian missions at Wuchang have received menacing placards ordering them to leave at once on pain of extermination.

The N. C. Herald of Sept. 4 says:—Prompt measures were taken here (Shanghai) as soon as the news of the riot arrived. Orders were sent on Wednesday evening by wire to the Swift not to leave Hankow. Yesterday morning she was ordered to make the best of her way to Ichang, and should she not be able to get up, the Aspic, which has been ordered up from Kiukiang to Hankow, will go on to Ichang. Meanwhile, the Archer, which was on her way to Hankow to relieve the Swift, is to take the Aspic's place at Kiukiang, until the Inconstant, which leaves this at noon to-day, arrives there from Shanghai. Thus every port will still have its man-of-war, for the Aspic will remain in Hankow in the place of the Swift, until it is determined which of them shall go to Ichang. P.S.—H.M.S. Archer arrived at Hankow last night, and it was thus too late to stop her at Kiukiang, and H.M.S. Swift was to leave Hankow for Ichang at daylight this morning.

The China Mail of Sept. 9 says:—There is a hitch in the settlement of the compensation for the destruction at Wuhu, and the fresh outbreak at Ichang will strengthen the position taken up by the Foreign Powers, who seem determined to insist on the opening of Hunan and the suppression of the anti-foreign literature. The helplessness of the Chinese Government is becoming more and more manifest. The discontent of the Hunan soldiers who have been disbanded for financial reason is the chief cause of the uneasiness.

Advices from a traveller who has lately passed through Paoning and Wanhsien in Szechuan, says the N. C. Herald (Sept. 4), state that his party had an anxious time at the latter city. A plot had apparently been made by members of the Kolao Hui to attack the city and raise a rebellion. Prompt and diligent measures were taken by the authorities, and a large number of alleged secret society men were decapitated, and order was preserved by the aid of a large contingent of soldiers, who fortunately arrived in time to frustrate the intended rising.

The Japan Gazette says:—Mr. Tata, a Bombay cotton merchant who formerly visited this country (Japan), has just returned to Osaka from Hong Kong, and is now proposing, in partnership with the cotton-spinning men in Japan, to charter a line of steamers to ply between Osaka and India for the purpose of conveying the cotton to Japan at a cheaper rate of freight than is now paid. In the event of the scheme being carried into execution, three steamers will be placed on the line, and there is every hope, says the Yiji, that the trade between Japan and India will be increased. It is thought that some impulse may be given to the export of matches.

The following figures, says the N. C. Daily News, of the total value of the foreign trade during the last six years, should dissipate any fears that Corea will not repay the attention that foreign Powers, Japan most of all, have shown her:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
1886	2,474,185	504,225	2,978,410
1887	2,815,441	84,936	3,620,437
1888	3,046,443	867,58	3,913,501
1889	3,377,815	1,233,841	4,611,656
1890	4,727,839	3,550,478	8,278,317

The net revenue for 1890 was 514,600 dols., against 230,000 dols. in 1889.

The trade of Corea is very valuable to England, though there is no English firm in the country and no English steamer runs there for Manchester cotton goods made up more than half in value of the total imports. There was a fair business in woollens too, and a large one in metals, which is thus explained: "A steady demand for copper, spelter and lead was maintained through the year caused by the minting at the capital of 5-cash pieces. This comparatively new coin is the legal currency in Seoul and its neighbourhood which includes the port of Jenchuan, whereas the old 1-cash pieces are the only ones accepted at Fusan and Yuensan.

The Hong Kong Daily Press learns from private advices that Mr. Chaloner Alabaster has no intention of retiring from the consular service.

Hindu Koh: Wanderings and Wild Sport on and Beyond the Himalayas, by Major-General Donald MacIntyre, V.C. (W. Blackwood and Sons.)—It will be good news to sportsmen in India and to all at home who love to read about sport, that the publishers have issued in most attractive form, a new edition of this book, at the reduced price of 7s. 6d. When it came out we were among the first to notice it appreciatively, and the judgment of our contemporaries and the public has shown that our estimate of the book was not too high. It is certainly one of the best records of sport ever written, and in its present guise no sportsman's library should be without it.

The Sportsman's Vade Mecum for the Himalayas. By K. C. A. I. (Horace Cox, Field Office).—This is a useful addendum to "Hindu Koh," for it tells the sportsman who has the ambition to follow General MacIntyre, all about the necessary outfit, selection of guns and ammunition, dress, camp equipment, stores, &c., in fact everything a man wants to know, and all told in compact shape. The "Sporting Yarns" at the end are good reading. It only costs 2s. in its present binding. For use it should be bound in limp leather. The work is thoroughly well done, by a man who knows what he is writing about, and the advice, which is excellent, is pointed by a number of clear illustrations.

Indian Surveys.—The Times of India says:—Although the Department is underrmanned, and moreover has suffered a good deal from casualties, the Indian survey has produced excellent results during the past official year, and in a resolution just issued, the Government record their appreciation in an unusually gracious manner. Out of a total number of twenty-four parties and four detachments working during the year, four parties continued to be engaged on scientific surveys connected with the principal triangulations, on astronomical observations for fixing latitudes and longitudes, and lastly on tidal and spirit-levelling operations. Of the remainder, four parties were employed on topographical, four on forest, three on traverse, and seven parties and one detachment on cadastral surveys; while two parties and three detachments carried out geographical surveys and reconnaissances. The scheme of triangulating the coasts of India and Burma with a view to furnish artificial beacons and landmarks was also proceeded with; the topographical surveys were continued in Bombay, Beloochistan, and the Himalayas, and a new party took up the survey of the tin-bearing tracts in the Mergui district of Burma, from which great things are expected. The aggregate area surveyed was 4,781 miles, rather less than last year but more than satisfactory, seeing the difficulties the various parties had to encounter. In Burma, for instance, owing to climatic obstacles, the work was delayed by constant desertions as well as by sickness, while the Burman himself was found able to do rather less than one-seventh of the work done by any other native. Among other good works the extraordinary network of small canals in Burma was successfully surveyed, and this despite inundation, labour difficulties, and other obstacles. The total area geographically surveyed in countries on the north-east and north-west borders of India now amounts to 97,792 square miles.

"NERVOUSNESS" IN BOMBAY.

WE are by no means disposed to regard with contempt the movements of Russia in Central Asia, and we have recently discussed them in a tone which proves that, in our view, they demand serious consideration. But we cannot help wondering why the Standard should have given prominence in place and type to a hysterical letter from Bombay signed "Y.," and made it a peg for an alarmist article. By all means let the Central Asian question be discussed, and its gravity be impressed on the minds of the English public; but let it be done with sobriety and not in hysterics. "Y" is evidently an excitable gentleman, who takes telegraphic news for granted. Has he not read his Times and his Standard long enough to know that, as a medium for sensational unveracity, nothing but an Irish "patriot" exceeds the modern telegraph wire? We in England have all the information about the Russian visit to the Pamirs which "Y" has in Bombay, but we wait for the full particulars which will be forthcoming when CAPTAIN YOUNG-HUSBAND makes his official report on what actually occurred at his meeting with the small expedition, which a telegram from Turkestan to St. Petersburg dated Oct. 9 informs us "has safely traversed Kashgar, Yarkand, and Kargalik." It is not quite apparent, by the way, what this means. The order of the names would seem to indicate that the telegram refers to the journey of the expedition southwards, but, in telegraphing, the order of the names may have been reversed, and the movement referred to be that of retirement northwards.

When we read that Russia, because she has sent a few scores of horsemen over the Pamir, "stands now at the very outposts of India," and has had "the stupendous audacity to order two British officers off ground belonging to a neutral Power"; and have this "compared in high-handed lawlessness to the forcible irruption of a squadron of Cossacks into Germany etc.," we are struck by the disproportion between the facts and the writer's excitement, and hardly know whether most to blame the levity of the correspondent or of the publicist who alarms the general reader with such frothy matter. "Y" judiciously abstains from "entering into geographical details," but affirms that "in a time of profound peace Russia has annexed 22,000 square miles of Chinese territory and 10,000 miles of Afghan territory!" There is not the slightest evidence that she has done anything of the kind. Had she annexed the "Roof of the World," it would still remain to be asked, "What will she do with it?" As an objective for an attack upon India the Pamir plateau is not in military opinion to be seriously regarded, provided we reserve control of Kanjut, however undesirable it may be that the Russians should hold a position whence they can intrigue with the semi-independent States south of the Hindoo Koosh. It is not because Russia has sent an expedition to the Pamir that we are to be roused to the belief that "the time has come, long though it has been procrastinated, when the supremacy of England in Asia must be once and for all so firmly established that the tide which has flowed steadily eastward throughout the last fifty years may not only be checked, but sent sweeping back to the Caspian" (?). Surely no one but "Y" is prepared to advise that we should go to war to drive the Russians back to the Caspian because GROMBCHESKY and PRINCE GALITSIN have ridden on to the Pamirs.

THE HAMBURGER NACHRICHTEN ON RUSSIA AND ENGLAND IN CENTRAL ASIA.

THE disclosures of his inner thoughts and feelings which PRINCE BISMARCK has since his fall volunteered to the world have more than a merely psychological interest—they have in not a few respects a political importance, as showing what might have been the policy of Germany had he continued to control it. They discover one thing—that his line of action was not always dictated by pure and unprejudiced motives. The old German Chancellor had come to imagine himself to be an essential factor of European politics. Hence, it may sometimes have been unconsciously, he allowed his policy to be moulded to some extent less by loyal and patriotic motives than by the primary principle that BISMARCK was a sine quâ non. His policy towards England was not friendly, though, as has since been demonstrated, the cordial sympathy which ought to exist between two nations allied in race and having many interests in common might by judicious diplomacy have been easily utilised to the advantage of Germany. He cultivated Russian friendship—it would now seem, on looking back over the past twenty years in the light of the revelations of himself the PRINCE has made since his fall—not altogether from a loyal regard for German interests, but because it helped him to maintain that personal ascendancy in Europe which he very likely believed to be bound up with Germany's welfare, just as MR. GLADSTONE seems to cherish the notion that the interests of the United Kingdom and the British Empire are ever in peril while he is out of office. There is indeed, in the combination of immense intelligence and high ideals with personal motive, much in common between the two statesmen. Now that Europe has learned that Germany can do without BISMARCK, it is also learning that by his fall it has gained some advantages and been freed from an incubus. Because Great Britain would not subject herself to the same influence which guided the policy of the Triple Alliance, the PRINCE seems to have thought it good tactics to make things as disagreeable for her as possible, and there can be little doubt that those colonial arrangements by which the EMPEROR WILLIAM has secured our good-will, and we his, would not have been made had the Chancellor retained his position. We have a significant indication of the spirit which would have animated PRINCE BISMARCK's treatment of this country in a remark of the Hamburger Nachrichten, that "an advance of Russia in Central Asia is a distinct gain for civilisation in those regions and gives Germany no reason to feel uneasiness, especially as its effect upon England will compel her to be less exacting in her demands upon German colonial policy."

The observation is a shallow one at best, especially when one considers what the character is of the "civilisation" which Russia substitutes for any régime it may supplant. It would be interesting were the organ of the ex-Chancellor to indicate precisely wherein the demands of British statesmanship on German colonial policy are or have been "exacting." Germany, thanks chiefly to the friendly concurrence of Great Britain, has succeeded in planting very large feet on a vast expanse of African territory which had already come legitimately under British influence. Instead—as Russia would have done in similar circumstances—of grudging to the Germans that which they have gained, it is we believe the desire no less of the British Government than of the British people to see Germany establishing herself firmly in those possessions, of which, if PRINCE BISMARCK had had his way, she would never have assumed control. Now it would seem, had PRINCE BISMARCK been at the helm, his policy would have been to egg on Russia to create diversions for England in the East, while he used the opportunity for overreaching us elsewhere. The policy would have been as shortsighted as it was dangerous. Events have shown that the Russian bear was not an animal that could be stroked the right way by a hand so rude as that of PRINCE BISMARCK. Compared with the perils that menace Germany from Russia's egoistic ambition, the most active rivalry and energetic opposition of England to German colonial policy would be of the smallest consequence; but, the truth is, it is injurious neither in fact nor in intention. Whatever advantages Germany might have gained from playing off Russia against England, they would at the most have been slight and temporary, and would in the long run have redounded less to the injury of Great Britain than to the ultimate weakening of Germany's position in Europe, to which the goodwill of this country is not so unimportant a matter as the anti-English school of German politicians pretend. If Russia could help to weaken the British position in Europe by diversions in Asia, it would not be Germany but France that would gain the principal benefit. The remark of the CHANCELLOR'S organ is perhaps hardly worth criticism, as it is obviously more ill-natured than profound; but it suggests to English readers a reason for congratulation that PRINCE BISMARCK'S opinions have ceased to be of any practical weight in German and European politics.

A REUTER telegram from Constantinople published this afternoon states that our ambassador at the Porte has delivered the reply of Great Britain to the recent Turkish Note on the Dardanelles question, and that it is understood to differ in tenour from the replies made by the other Powers. The other Powers, it will be remembered, simply acknowledged receipt of the Porte's communication, with the diplomatic addendum that they had taken note of it. LORD SALISBURY, it appears, has thought it worth while to "enter into a full explanation of the point of view taken by Great Britain." We may assume that the point of view thus taken is the one indicated by LORD SALISBURY in a letter which was lately published in which he declared that Russia had no other privileges in the Dardanelles than were shared by other Powers. The text of this British Note will be awaited with extreme interest. Our Foreign Minister has not thought it advisable to range himself in line with the Central Powers in simply recording the result of the Russo-Turkish understanding. MR. GLADSTONE'S unprincipled and ill-advised reference to the evacuation of Egypt in his Newcastle speech would in itself have been a sufficient reason why a Conservative Foreign Minister, with a due sense of responsibility, should find it necessary to provide against the contingency of the accession to power of a man who could so recklessly commit his Party to a policy pregnant with important consequences. If Egypt is to be evacuated, it becomes vital to maintain the passage of the Dardanelles against Russia. MR. GLADSTONE will find that out if he ever recovers the Premiership.

We sincerely regret to note that among the passengers injured in the accident to the Scotch express at Crewe on Saturday was Mrs. Pollard, stated to be the wife of "the commandant of the 20th Regiment of Infantry now in Burma." We assume that the 20th Regiment of Madras Infantry is meant, of which Major Benjamin Horatio Pollard (Bengal Staff Corps), is acting commandant. Mrs. Pollard's left leg was badly broken, and she received other injuries. She is lying at the North-Western Hotel in a critical condition, suffering from shock.

The Cunard steamer Etruria, which arrived at Liverpool on Oct. 10, landed Lord Connemara, the late Governor of Madras, who proceeded to London.

A Reuter's telegram from Brindisi reports that the Indian mail train from Calais ran into a goods train which was standing in the station at Carovigno, at four o'clock yesterday afternoon (Oct. 11). There were fifty-five passengers, but only one complained of injury. Considerable damage was, however, done to the rolling-stock. We (Globe) learn from a private source that telegrams have been received in London stating that Mr. and Mrs. Stanley and Mrs. Tennant, who were in the train, were unhurt. General Gaudolfi, Governor of Mas-sowah, was also a passenger.

Her Majesty's Indian troopship Serapis sailed from Portsmouth on Oct. 10 for Bombay, with military reliefs, principally infantry, from here. She took 49 officers, 14 ladies, 12 children, 433 rank and file, 19 women, and 20 children, the military being under the command of Colonel F. H. Maturin, 1st East Surrey Regiment. At Queenstown the Serapis calls in and completes her military complement by taking in 18 more officers of different corps, 1 lady, 4 children, 706 rank and file, 9 soldiers' wives, and 16 children. A full list of officers who embarked in the Serapis was given in our last issue.

An Admiralty order has been received at Sheerness Dockyard directing the new fast gunboats Plassy and Assaye to be prepared for commission with all possible despatch. As soon as they are ready for passing into the first class reserve they will be despatched to India, the vessels having been built to the order of the Indian Government.

THE AGE OF CONSENT ACT.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

SIR,—In the course of your recent article on the Bangabasi case you very properly ascribe the outburst of discontent to the Age of Consent Act, and recommend that matters of that kind be left for the future "to the action of time and education." It is much to be regretted that such wise council did not prevail when that impolitic measure was proposed; more especially as India can never regain tranquillity until that Act is repealed or materially modified. But when you say that it is incredible that Indians can believe that their religion has been attacked by the new law, and apologise for the change by remarks disparaging to the Indian marriage system, you are, I think, wrong. One would almost think that your admissions that the indignation of the Bangabasi was genuine, and that objection to the measure is not confined to the uneducated class, would cause some doubt to arise as to the value of the Act. In sober truth much, very much indeed, can be urged in favour of the Oriental notion of marriage; and very little thought is required to perceive that, in the present condition of the East, the system there prevailing is far more conducive to a moral and well-ordered condition of society than the late marriages of Europe. I can assure you that the deepest opposition to the Act does not come from the thoughtless, the ignorant, and the wicked; but, on the contrary, from the more prudent, far-seeing, and virtue-loving part of the people. These are the men who deplore the hasty and ignorant interference with their customs, by people who have no conception of the far-reaching disorganisation which their mistaken "philanthropy" is causing. Let me also correct another misapprehension. Bengalis have made themselves conspicuous in this opposition, not because they dislike the Act more than other Indians; but because they are better educated, and are more ready in bringing their grievances before the public. I have many private letters from all parts of India which agree in telling me how deep and widespread is the discontent occasioned by the unwise Age of Consent Act.

You will observe that I say nothing about the "brutality" prevention; for the Act has no effect upon it. Cases of injury must, as before, be tried under the previously existing law. What is really wanted is the prevention of consummation before puberty; but this the India Government would not enact. This, however, would really effect the purposes desired by English philanthropists, and would also meet with the cordial assent of all Indians, and would remove entirely the religious objection. It is extraordinary that a Government should prefer to force forward an ineffective measure against the prejudices of a people, rather than gain the object they desire by moving along the line of least resistance.—Very sincerely yours,

Oct. 9, 1891.

FREDERIC PINCOTT.

STAFF CORPS PROMOTION.

"CENTURION" writes to the Pioneer:—

SIR,—There are (by the Army List for quarter ending June 30 last) 1,836 officers of the Indian Staff Corps of all three Presidencies below the rank of substantive lieutenant-colonel, and including probationers, yet, notwithstanding all that has been said and written on the subject, the present movement being made for accelerated promotion for the Staff Corps has, as yet, only met with support, I hear, from less than one-third of the above number. What can be the reason? Laziness and indifference, pure and simple, I believe; for no one who has read the statement of our case recently circulated can deny the good grounds the officers of the Staff Corps have for accelerated rates of promotion; and if that is admitted why does not every officer do what he can to support the movement by petitioning or subscribing, or both? It does not take long to write out a petition of the form required; nor is 10 rs. a very large sum to subscribe for an object which, if successful, may bring in a very handsome return to the subscriber, and may in all probability prove a better investment than the 10 rs. chucked away on a Derby or St. Leger lottery ticket. I make no doubt those who are now holding back from the movement will, if it be successful, be only too glad to reap the benefits; but these benefits will never come unless we show a more united front and a more unanimous desire for them. Every day almost sees some of our rights, hitherto looked on as inviolable, invaded; some new appointment going to the British Service; a larger proportion of the staff appointments in India are opening to the British Service, which have hitherto been reserved for the Indian Service. Not many years back the Quartermaster-General's Department was only open to the Indian Service; but now, if I read the latest orders correctly, not even is the language test required from officers of the British Service to enable them to enter this department. The British service have staff appointments at home which are open to them only, why then should they have an equal—much less a larger—share of the appointments and commands out here? The following table will give some idea of the way appointments are at present distributed, not including medical and other special departments.

Not included in the above are the appointments relating solely to artillery, &c., in India, such as I. G. of A. in India, nor appointments to the Ordnance and Commissariat and Transport Departments, the former being necessarily officered by officers of the Royal Artillery, and the latter by the Indian Service, as a similar corps is officered at home by the British Service.

THE POSITION AT GILGIT.

THE Pioneer says:—The threatened trouble with the Hunza and Nagar tribesmen in June last, followed by the appearance of Russian exploring parties on the northern slopes of the Hindoo Koosh a month later, has naturally caused attention to be turned to the Gilgit Agency and the work which must be entrusted to it in the future. The Lockhart Mission to Chitral in 1885-86 had for its object, not merely the cementing of friendly relations with the Mehtar of that State, but the thorough exploration of the passes leading into the Upper Oxus Valley. This task was very successfully accomplished, and accurate knowledge was obtained of the vast mountainous tract between Kaftristan on the south-west and the Pamirs on the north-east. It was not considered advisable to make known to the outside world the results of the exploration of the Kilik, Darkot, Baroghil, and other passes—one does not as a rule give valuable information to a rival either in love or war; but the subsequent journey of Bonvalot from Central Asia to Cashmere furnished French geographers and Russian strategists with valuable data regarding one route at least into Chitral.

What the Government of India learned as to the political position in the petty states lying south of the Hindoo Koosh was that the Hunza and Nagar chiefs were secretly hostile, and had a great idea of their own power, owing to their successes against Cashmere troops. The Mehtar of Chitral and his sons, who held Mastuj and Yasin, were on the contrary enthusiastic in their expressions of amity. The frequent threats of the Ameer of Cabul to invade Kaftristan and Chitral by the Kunar valley route from Jellalabad, had no doubt alarmed the Chitralis, who are not a warlike race when compared with the Afghans. When Colonel Lockhart left Chitral for Gilgit on his return journey to India, he had succeeded in establishing a perfectly good understanding with the Mehtar and his sons, who thenceforward regarded themselves as under the protection of the British Government. Hunza and Nagar were left to themselves, though the chiefs were made to understand that in the future, if they gave trouble on the Gilgit frontier, they might have to count upon meeting more than the rabble troops of the Cashmere Durbar. This was in the summer of 1886, the year in which a great effort had to be made to pacify Upper Burma. Colonel Lockhart was among the officers chosen to command a brigade in that country, and for the time being the Gilgit-Chitral question dropped out of sight. Proposals had, we believe, been submitted for re-establishing the British Agency at Gilgit; but they were shelved owing to the urgency of the Burma business. At the beginning of 1888 the Hunza and Nagar chiefs, tempted no doubt by the inaction of the Government of India, made a successful attack upon Chaprot and Chalt, captured these forts, and advanced to within fifteen miles of Gilgit itself. Desultory fighting followed, and it was not until the Cashmere authorities had concentrated between 5,000 and 6,000 troops upon the frontier that the tribesmen drew off at the end of August. This outbreak once more brought to the front the question of safeguarding the Cashmere frontier. It was resolved to place British officers again at Gilgit, and to garrison that outpost with Imperial Service troops armed with breechloaders. Lieutenant-Colonel Durand was appointed British Agent in July 1889, and he was given a small staff of assistants to aid him in his political work and assist the Cashmere officers in keeping the garrison in an efficient state. It was believed at that time that no further steps would have to be taken, and this impression was confirmed when Captain Young-husband was not molested in passing through Hunza from the Pamirs.

But with ignorant rulers such as those who exercise authority in Hunza and Nagar, it is impossible to foretell what may happen. In order to understand the position, a large scale map of the north-west border of Cashmere must be consulted. Gilgit, it will be noticed, stands on the right bank of the river of the same name, which drains the country to the north and west, eventually falling into the Indus north of Bunji. One of its tributaries is the Hunza river, the junction of the two streams being four or five miles below Gilgit. The road to Hunza and Nagar runs alongside the river in a due northerly direction for about thirty miles, where the Chalt fort is reached. From this point the direction is almost due east for another thirty miles, when Nagar is gained: this village lies on the south side of the valley, Hunza facing it on the northern slopes. The Chaprot fort, it may be mentioned, lies a few miles up a valley running north-west from Chalt. The importance of Hunza and Nagar lies in the fact that they are on the direct road from the Pamirs to Gilgit by way of the Kilik and Khorabot Passes. Chalt Fort commands the road where it turns to the south, and it marks the limit of Cashmere influence. The route all the way from Gilgit to Nagar is a most difficult one, the path running for miles along almost precipitous hill-sides, and being built out on wooden supports in certain sections. A few hundred determined men could resist an army at more than one point. After the experience of previous raids, it was, of course, most important that the road to Chalt should be improved, in order that help might be afforded the garrison there in case of a sudden attack by the tribesmen. Some improvements were accordingly carried out, and this step at once excited the distrust of the Hunza chief, a particularly truculent ruffian who has given constant trouble to the Cashmere authorities. He blustered and threatened for some time, and matters at last grew so serious last June that the British Agent moved out with 200 infantry and two guns, and by forced marches reached Chalt before the place could be attacked. This prompt action prevented any repetition of the march upon Gilgit, which had caused such alarm on the border in the spring of 1888. The tribesmen remained sullenly defiant for some weeks, but finally declared that they had had no real intention of breaking the peace. The proper answer to their demonstration would have been to march a force into the valley, thrash them wherever they could be found, disarm them once for all, and establish permanent posts at Hunza and Nagar. But it must be remembered that Lieutenant-Colonel Durand had only one other British officer with him at the time; that his escort was merely thirty sepoy; and that the Cashmere Imperial Service troops, though over 1,500 strong, had only been lately organised. It would have been extremely rash to have adventured upon an expedition under such conditions, as the slightest check would in all probability have been the signal for a rising of the Shinaki tribes in the Indus Valley south of Bunji. These could have cut the communications with Astor, and the whole borderland might have joined in the revolt. The safest course was to leave the Hunza chief alone for the moment, and this was done. A few young British officers were at the same time sent up, so that in case of fighting the Cashmere troops might be properly led. Scarcely had this little storm blown over, than the presence of Gromchevsky's "exploring" parties on the Pamirs and in the Hindoo Koosh Passes was reported. This at once emphasised the necessity of putting the Gilgit Agency on a more stable footing, with a view to making British influence absolutely supreme throughout the country to the south of the great mountain barrier forming the watershed between the Upper Oxus and the Indus.

We have during the past few days indicated the steps which the Government of India have taken in this matter of protecting Chitral and Yasin from intruders from the north, and of making Gilgit itself secure from the attacks of the neighbouring tribesmen. In the fulness of time the lines of policy which Sir William Lockhart suggested are being followed. The Mehtar of Chitral's repeated wish that a British officer should be stationed in his State is being acceded to; the passes leading from the Upper Oxus will be watched; and the Chitral and Yasin people will feel a confident sense of security now that they see they are not to be left to take care of themselves. Russian explorers are apt to become filibusters on occasion, but they will now have no chance of bullying anyone south of the Hindoo Koosh, if ever they venture so far. There was never much danger of this; but with agents provocateurs like Gromchevsky wandering about with detachments of troops, one can never say what may happen. As to Gilgit itself, the increase of the Agent's escort by 200 Goorkhas and two mountain guns, and the deputation of eight or nine smart British officers to that post, in addition to three already there, will make the frontier quite secure against Hunza and Nagar. The road up to Chalt will be taken in hand at once, and be made as sound and good as engineering skill can make it. If the tribesmen take offence at this, they will but have to show their hostility, and an end will be put to their absurd pretensions to dictate terms to the Cashmere Durbar. Their insolent threats have been suffered too long already; their old raids have never really been punished; and, if they are foolish enough to invite chastisement now, it would be a pity to balk them. With 200 Goorkhas, two guns, some 2,000 Imperial Service troops, with a mountain battery, not to mention local levies, the British Agent will be quite equal to breaking down all opposition, more especially as the supply of officers to lead the men will be ample. In short no anxiety need now be felt regarding the Gilgit frontier, cut off though it is for six months in the year by the snowfall on the passes north of Srinagar. It is, however, extremely desirable that the outpost should be linked with the latter place by telegraph, and this is likely to be done next spring. Cashmere has been described as the north-west bastion of India, and there is good reason therefore for keeping up touch with the little force at Gilgit, which may be compared to an outlying picquet. It is better that the modest measures now adopted should be quietly carried out than that an elaborate defensive scheme should suddenly be devised under the panic of a threatened war in Central Asia and Afghanistan.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, September 22.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Sept. 17, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 2 per cent.

Below are the figures given of the Bank's statement for the week ending Sept. 15:—

ISSUE DEPARTMENT.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 7,14,862	Decrease
Do. at Branches.....	9,51,903	Decrease
Other Deposits	45,559	Increase
Post Bills	83,929	Increase

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 1,32,803	Increase
Loans.....	4,34,622	Increase
Accounts of Credits.....	1,81,356	Increase
Mercantile Bills	17,24,192	Increase
Cash at Head Office.....	33,00,208	Decrease
Do. at Branches	6,73,676	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows a further increase of nearly 22-1/10 lacs in public demand, made up as follows:—By an increase of over 4-1/3 lacs in "Loans" and 1-4/5 lacs in "Accounts of Credits," coupled with an increase of about 17 1/2 lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus an increase of about 1/2 lac in "Other Deposits," together with an increase of nearly 4/5 lac in "Post Bills." The Treasury balance stands decreased by about 7-3/20 lacs at the head office and 9 1/2 lacs in branches. The Bank's investments were increased by over 1-3/10 lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of about 33 lacs in the cash at head office, and about 6 1/2 lacs at the branches, making the exact total 5,71,29,123 rs., equal to 63-2 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 66-4 per cent. of last week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—During the period under review, which embraces one day extra owing to the change in the date for the departure of the outgoing mail, silver has slowly, but gradually, weakened at home, without, however, very appreciably affecting this market. Speaking generally, business has been decidedly dull, the amount of mercantile paper offering having been unusually small for the season of the year, while the demand for Bank drafts has also not been considerable. Bank wire has been throughout obtainable at 1-5-1/16 to 1-5-3/32, while Credits have not been saleable below 1-5-7/16.

TEA.—Last week 15,000 chests were sold, of a total quantity of 16,500 offered. Prices were weaker. Teas with any special quality maintained value, and also small leaf Pekoes which were taken for Bombay.

JUTE.—A large business has been done at prices ranging from 31 rs. up to 33 rs. for first native marks; 33-8 rs. is said to have been paid. The local and up-country bazaar are all dearer; at Narainganj especially prices are running away.

GUNNIES.—The weakness which was apparent in the bazaar has disappeared, and sellers' ideas are again firm. Mills are more inclined to operate, but in the face of a strong market for the raw material will not entertain lower rates. No transactions of any consequence are reported.

HESSIANS rule steady, and some further business is reported in 40" cloth for early and forward delivery.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—The week under review has been one of the most unsatisfactory on record. The slight improvement noticed in the market has not been maintained, and prices have drifted back again to their former level. Business has been almost at a standstill; there are no buyers for anything in large lines, and the few transactions put through are in retail.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 per cent.

BOMBAY, September 25.

The review on the present occasion embraces an extra day owing to the post-monsoon arrangement by which the mail steamer now leaves a day later, on Saturdays. Since the resumption of business after the holidays there has been no sign of increased activity in any direction. Cotton has been taken to only a small extent by the local mills, and shippers have made very few purchases. Wheat and seeds have been in small or moderate request for export, in quiet or steady markets, with but little movement in rates. Exchange has been weak and drooping on the whole, and quotations are 1-32d. lower for Bank paper and 1-16 for credits than they stood at on the eve of last mail day. Government Paper is $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. lower for Fours. Freights are weak, with little inquiry for tonnage in any position. There has been no improvement in the demand for imports, but prices of staple Manchester goods have been generally well maintained.

MONEY.—A week, of which holidays took up more than half, left little room for movement in money; but the Presidency Bank's statement of affairs, made up to Sept. 19, showed that the current had been still running to plethora, the cash balance having increased to 364½ lacs, making it greater by 8½ lacs than it had been at the close of the previous week, the increase shown the week before having been to about the same extent. In the period under review there had again been a considerable addition to Private Deposits, and Loans had increased materially; but instead of the sensible increase in Bills Discounted, disclosed by the previous return, a slight decrease had taken place, so that the falling-off in the trade demand was some two lacs greater than that shown in the previous statement at 12½ lacs; but was partly counterbalanced by a decrease in Government Deposits at the Head Office. No change was made in the Bank's rates on the 24th, and 2 per cent. is still the minimum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been but a poor inquiry for staple grey goods on account of the state of the up-country markets, but rates here have been well supported in view of the steadiness in Manchester. Stocks on the spot are increasing, but dealers refuse to make any concession in rates, and a better demand is expected to set in after ten days. Bleached, dyed, turkey red and printed goods, as well as local goods, have remained without change in position or price. The estimated clearances of imported goods is about 1,500 packages only; those of local goods about 1,000 bales.

YARNS.—Only a small business has been done in imported twist in a quiet market, and prices of all descriptions are unchanged. Sales of Bombay spinnings at Hong Kong for the week ending Sept. 21 were 8,000 bales, and at Shanghai 9,800 bales, at the previous week's exchange of 22½ rs., and with rates for 10s. one dollar up. In Bombay matters are improving daily, and a large business has been passing at hardening rates, the week's sales being put down at about 16,000 bales. The balance of stock is very small, and the market leaves off active and advancing.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper and yellow metal on the basis of previous rates in each case, the former market having been quiet in tone, and the latter steady. Iron is unchanged in value for all descriptions, and the market is quiet, the week's transactions having been upon a small scale.

COAL is firm. Sales have been made of Powell's Duffryn and Davison's West Hartley, for October-November and November-December shipment, at 14½ rs. and 14 rs. per ton respectively, and sellers are now asking half a rupee per ton more than those rates. The bunker stock is still heavy.

Exports.—COTTON.—The market for this staple was firm, with a moderate business passing on last mail day, and prices generally were 1 r. to 2 rs. per candy higher; but the week closed with nothing whatever doing for export, and only a moderate business passing for the mills, the feeling, however, keeping steady at previous rates. Purchases by local consumers have been upon a small scale, while shippers have taken only a few hundred bales daily, but the tone of the market has been steady throughout. The mills have taken altogether about 7,000 bales from stock, made up mainly of Oomra descriptions, Dhollera growths, Compta Ginned, and Tinnevely; while exporters have bought some 2,000 bales, consisting of Oomra varieties, Dhollera, Westerns, and Bengals. The market closes steady, with prices on about a level with those which ruled a week ago.

WHEAT has been steady in tone, but with only a small, or at most a moderate, business doing for export, and on the basis of previous rates.

SEEDS.—A decline of half an anna in the price of linseed has occurred, and the week closes with a quiet feeling in the market, but no further change in price.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, 5th Nov. 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London. DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their spurious there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances of the infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & Co., Members of the Pharm. Socy of Great Britain, His Excellency the 1st Prof's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE IN

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts out all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYPERTENSIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The LITTLE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS Imitations. Be careful to observe T. de M. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 6s. 1s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, vt. Russell-st., W.C.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Sept. 30; Madras, Oct. 1; Bombay, Oct. 3.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday:—The Viceroy left Simla on Wednesday morning and reached Murree on Friday. He will start for Cashmere to-morrow. The rumour which has been spread abroad that his visit might end in the purchase of the State is absurd; Cashmere is now virtually governed by a commission, and will remain so until the much-needed reforms which have been begun have been accomplished. The Viceroy is no doubt anxious to see the famous valley, and to judge how the State is progressing under the new administration.

The Viceroy will hold a levée at Government House, Calcutta, on Saturday, Dec. 5, and their Excellencies will hold a Drawing-Room on Thursday, Dec. 10.

Lady Lansdowne, was to hold the final hot weather committee meeting of the Dufferin Fund at Simla on Oct. 9.

The Commander-in-Chief was to leave Simla on tour on Oct. 15. His Excellency would be joined by Major-General Galbraith, adjutant-general, and Colonel W. G. Nicholson at Quetta, and by Sir James Browne at Rawal Pindi. He was to be accompanied on tour by Major Travers, Captain Hume, Lieutenant Furse, and Surgeon Edwards.

It has been definitely settled that General Prendergast will not obtain a further extension of office as Resident of Mysore.

Lieutenant Stewart of the 5th Goorkhas with a party of sixteen rifles was expected to reach the Tagdumbash Pamir by the middle of October, the Pioneer says, and Captain Younghusband's safety would then be absolutely ensured.

A telegram from Simla, dated Sept. 28, says:—Lieutenant Colomb's party, which proceeds in the middle of November from Dibrugarh, will not take an escort, as was at first suggested. The party will make its way to the Upper Irrawaddy through a country inhabited by friendly tribes, and then proceed down the river. It is an exploration venture pure and simple.

Two distinguished Russian travellers arrived in Calcutta by the P. and O. Sutlej on Sept. 29. Count Kreutz, of the Russian Imperial Guard, and Baron de Nolde. They were first to proceed to Darjeeling, and then to Simla to pay their respects to his Excellency the Viceroy. After this a couple of months will be spent in shooting in Assam.

Mr. D. W. Campbell, the late Agent of the East India Railway, is to receive a bonus of 36,000 rs., or one year's salary, in recognition of his long and excellent services to the company. The company in question, says the Pioneer, has had a splendid half-year, and we are very glad to hear that the Secretary of State has accepted General Strachey's proposal, to make a donation of one lac of rupees to its Provident Fund, in addition to the usual contribution, in recognition of the services rendered by the staff in India towards so satisfactory a result.

The Secretary of State has approved of the scheme for the Botanical Survey of India and of the title of Director of the Survey conferred on Dr. King, of the Calcutta Botanical Gardens. Dr. Watt is bringing home for the Economic Museum at Cooper's Hill College a collection of Indian woods.

The ex-Maharaja of Manipore is granted an allowance of 250 rs. monthly, provided he agrees to reside at Brindabun or some other place out of Calcutta. There is no question of deporting him, as he is not a State prisoner or detenu.

The Raja of Bobbili contemplates visiting England next year.

The Pioneer thinks that, after the acquittal of the deputy manager of the Oriental Life Assurance Company, on a charge of misappropriating three lacs of rupees, it will be clear to all mercantile firms that their protection lies inside their own doors—for none can be expected from the law courts.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Sept. 24 the Bill amending the law of evidence with respect to bankers' books was passed. Mr. Rattigan presented the report of the Select Committee on the Punjab Municipal Bill, and Sir Philip Hutchins that of the Committee on the Lower Burma Municipal Act. Sir A. Miller introduced a Bill amending the Upper Burma Law Act, 1886, and this was passed at the same sitting.

On a pressing application of the Indian Tea Association, Calcutta, a Bill to extend the Inland Emigration Act to the Central Provinces was to be introduced at the Council meeting on Oct. 1.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs yesterday:—The Supreme Government has resolved to appoint a Commission to inquire into the working of the Deccan Relief Act, in order to discover whether it could be extended to the other provinces. The appointment of the Commission has been delayed pending the selection of a president. Sir Raymond West, who is a learned jurist and economist, would be best suited to fill the post if he were not a strong opponent of the Act. In the Bombay Presidency there is great division of opinion as to the merits of the Act. Many native gentlemen declare that it has destroyed the credit of the ryot, and that it tends to do what it was meant to defeat—place the land in the hands of a few holders.

The publisher of the Marathi, a monthly magazine, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment and to pay a fine for libelling Modak Mann Tyeas, the principal of the Elphinstone High School, the most important public school in India. The magistrate, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times states, characterised the libel as gross and cruel. Modak Mann Tyeas is a successful principal and a scholar, and is respected for his moderation and ability, but he has incurred the hatred of the Mahratta Brahmins by being an advocate of social reform.

Some of the Bengalee papers, the same correspondent says, warmly praise the action of the Government in accepting the apology of the Bangabasi; others write in a sarcastic and malignant strain, and seem bent on trying how far they can go without incurring the penalty of the law. The prosecution, on the whole, had a salutary effect, but sedition and slander can only be suppressed by the local governments steadily enforcing the law and by native gentlemen having the courage to prosecute.

New orders relating to mismatched currency notes have been issued. Instead of crediting the value of both halves of the mismatched notes to the Government after they have remained unclaimed for three years, the half of one-half is to be credited to Government and that of the other half to the depositor.

The Government of India have recommended to the home authorities the grant of the frontier medal for the Hazara expedition.

A new mountain battery is to be raised in Cashmere for Imperial service. Four 7-pounder guns have been given by the Supreme Government and the services of an English officer have been lent to the State.

The Government of India, says the Pioneer, have referred the question of railway extension from the Tounghoo-Mandalay line to Myingyan to the Chief Commissioner of Burma, with a view to settling the alignment best calculated to further the purposes of famine relief. The Meiktila route may be considered most desirable.

We are glad to hear from Gaya, the same paper remarks, that the recent dissensions between the Mahomedans and Hindoos in that town have been set at rest, thanks to the enlightenment of the leading men of each class, who have held out the olive branch to each other, and are doing their best to induce the rest of their co-religionists to follow their example and with every prospect of success.

Efforts are being made to raise 200 border police from among the Black Mountain tribes to hold the posts and maintain order along the Hazara Frontier.

Regarding the frontier on the Upper Oxus, a Demarcation Commission is a distinct probability, a Bombay paper says, in the coming spring.

The Russians, the Pioneer says, are now reported to be collecting stores and erecting quarters for troops at Shikh Junid on the Kushk river, some fifty miles south of Panjdeh and eighty north of Herat. They have also increased the strength of the garrison of Yulatan, south of Merv.

The bursting of the north-east monsoon is reported from Madras. There has been heavy rain on the Neilgherries, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday. Lord Wenlock, who left Ootacamund on the 12th inst., was stopped by landslips and broken bridges. He was obliged to proceed on foot, crossing the rivers in basket boats. On reaching Salem he found the condition of affairs much improved, owing to heavy rain, except in one part, where rain was deficient. Relief works had been opened, affording abundant labour. The condition of the neighbouring district of Coimbatore was good and agricultural operations had begun.

The exports of wheat from India are rapidly decreasing. The figures for the last few months are—April, 1,730,000 cwt.; May, 3,904,000; June, 5,141,000; July, 3,501,000; and August, 2,643,000.

GUP.

A MARRIAGE is arranged between Major MacClintock, Royal Artillery, and Miss Rita Price, daughter of the Hon. Mr. Price, Member of Council, Madras.

The Pioneer correspondent at Simla writes on Sept. 27:—

The first performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" took place last night in the ball-room at the Town Hall, where a temporary stage had been fitted up. Lady Lansdowne was present, and the room was crowded. Our amateurs, having been ambitious enough to attempt Shakespeare, worked very hard at the rehearsals of the play as cut down by Major Newnham Davis, who controlled its production. They achieved a fair success in those parts wherein the classical characters figure, though the bad acoustic properties of the room spoiled much of the pleasure of the audience. The comedy of the drama, as portrayed by Bottom and the village clowns, was extremely effective; the sad story of Pyramus and Thisbe being rendered in a manner that provoked unbounded laughter. The fairy scenes were charmingly pretty. Between thirty and forty immortals were on the stage at the same time, Titania's and Oberon's attendants being dressed to represent flowers or insects, twilight, starlight, moonbeams, &c. The grouping of all these fairies gave a beautiful combination of colour, while the dance which closes the play was full of kaleidoscopic effects. Only one set of scenery was used, representing a forest glade, with a temple on one hand, and the throne of Theseus and his queen on the other. It was quite in keeping with the general surroundings of the play. The exquisite music of Mendelssohn was excellently played by the string band of the King's Own Scottish Borderers. The illustrated programme, on which great artistic skill had been employed, should not be forgotten. The performances are in aid of Lady Roberts's Fund, and it seems likely that those in the open air at Peterhoff will be very good, as the weather at last shows signs of clearing.

Some idea of their performance may be afforded to those who know Simla amateurs by a glance at the cast, in which the following names occur:—Mrs. Little as Hermia, Mrs. Williams as Helena, Miss Halliday as Titania, Captain Williams as Bottom, Captain Holland as Lysander, Mr. Hunter-Weston as Demetrius, and Lieutenant Furse as Oberon. A sufficient guarantee of the quality of the music is afforded by the names of Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Obbart, and Miss Ribbentrop.

On Sept. 29 (writes the Times of India correspondent at Poona), Government House, Ganesh Khind, was the scene of a brilliant and picturesque function, it being the occasion of a Flower-Poudré Ball given by their Excellencies Lord and Lady Harris. About three hundred and fifty guests attended, the gentlemen greatly outnumbering the ladies, as will be seen from the lists given below. Considering the time of the year, the show of flowers on the occasion was extremely good, the whole combining to form a beautiful picture. There were chrysanthemums of every shade and colour, violets, lilies of the valley, water lilies, forget-me-nots, roses of every variety, geraniums, ivy geraniums, poppies, daisies, buttercups, cornflowers, hyacinths, &c., &c. Every lady carried a bouquet, some of which were certainly very beautiful. The guests were received, as they arrived, by Captain Cox, A.D.C. The ball-room was a perfect harbour of loveliness. Strings and wreaths of flowers of every kind, principally roses, connected the magnificent chandeliers which illuminated the ball-room, plants of various kinds were arranged around the room, while some of the doors were closed in with trellis-work, upon which there was a pretty arrangement of flowers and foliage, and several wire baskets of pretty ferns were hung below the gallery where the band was stationed. From the ball-room a covered-in way led to the charming conservatory on the south side, which was used as a sitting-out apartment. A large number of Chinese lanterns were hung up all about the place, and added greatly to the picturesqueness of the scene. A large proportion of the ladies dresses were very pretty indeed. Dancing commenced shortly before ten o'clock, the music being supplied by his Excellency's band under the able bâton of Herr Zimmer.

A correspondent writes from Simla (Sept. 30):—The final match of the Football Tournament was played to-day, when the King's Own Scottish Borderers defeated the East Lancashire team by two goals to one. The Borderers secured their two goals in the first fifteen minutes, and had the best of the game throughout the first half. The East Lancashire then rallied, and during a great part of the second half of the game had the advantage, the Borderers again in the final ten minutes reversing the position. The game was a most exciting one, and the winning team showed itself remarkably strong in their attack. The Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne, Sir Frederick Roberts, and Sir Mortimer and Lady Durand were present, and the game was watched with the keenest interest by a large gathering. On the presentation of prizes the winners were loudly cheered. The Challenge Trophy was made over to the Borderers, and each of the team received the usual bronze medal in addition, as in former years. Mr. Bliss, of Messrs. Plomers, presented the silver cup to the captain of the winning team.

The following extraordinary story reaches the Civil and Military Gazette:—At Ranganamati a Goorkha youth fell out with his newly-married wife, a Kuki girl. On this she went away to her father's house, and refused to return to her husband's place. The latter complained to the Dewan of the Chakona circle, who gave him a decree for 50 rs. as compensation for the loss sustained by his wife having abandoned him. The poor wife is now to be sold in public auction in execution of this decree. It is said that the Assistant Commissioner of Ranganamati also confirmed the proceeding of the Dewan as quite in accordance with the law and custom prevailing in that part of the country. If the story reaches Exeter Hall, we shall hear of it again.

"John Brown," in an article on "Ladies' Whist," in the Pioneer, tells this good story:—Talking of revokes, I remember, as a boy, being greatly impressed by an incident which was told us by a friend of my father's. My father was himself a very fine whist-player. He was a bit old-fashioned perhaps, and he had certainly never read the eighteenth edition of Cavendish, but in his own style he was very hard to beat. Consequently, when he admitted his inferiority to his friend, Tenace, we knew the latter must be a player of superlative excellence. One evening, when Mr. Tenace and my father were cracking a bottle of port, and I was privileged to be present, my father laughingly chaffed his friend on some refusal of his to join in a ladies' game. "Well, General," said Mr. Tenace, "I once made a vow I would never play whist again with a lady, and I have religiously kept it." "Tell us about it," said my father. "It was this way," he said. "I was at an hotel on the Continent, and one night sat down to play with two men (chance acquaintances) and a lady. The man who happened to cut the lady as partner accepted her responsibilities. Our stakes were high, and at the close of the play I rose a considerable loser. It so happened that I had lost the same amount to each of the men. As we were preparing to depart they offered me a last rubber, double or quits. I accepted the chance. The lady was my partner. The score was one game all, and in the third game we were four up and six tricks; we wanted one more trick to win both the game and the rubber. My game was certain. Trumps were out, it was my lead, and I was able to lead a suit of which my partner held the winning card. When it came to her turn to play she hesitated. . . . Her hesitation seemed interminable, perhaps because my nerves were excited. The lights in the room were becoming pale and dim because the day was breaking, and the rays of another dawn were forcing their way into the hot, close room. There was something uncanny in the light. . . . The more she hesitated the more anxious I became. I shivered down the back, as if a stream of cold water were trickling down it. Beads of perspiration stood on my forehead. . . . 'Good gracious!' I thought to myself, 'what can she be thinking of? She has only one card of the suit to play.' There was only one way in which the game could be lost, and that was by a revoke. She revoked!"

Surgeon-General J. McO. Grant, M.D., Retired List, Indian Medical Service, died at Netherleigh, Cheltenham, on Oct. 3, aged seventy-two.

Captain Charles Fairholme, R.N. (retired), died at West Kensington on Oct. 11, in his sixty-first year. The deceased officer served throughout the war in the Crimea, first as lieutenant in the Agamemnon, under Lord Lyons, at the attack of Fort Constantine; then as naval A.D.C. to the General Commanding-in-Chief during the siege and capture of Sebastopol; and afterwards in the Medusa, under Commodore Sherard Osborn, during the final operations in the Sea of Azof. He received the Crimean and Turkish medals, and the Sebastopol clasp. Captain Fairholme commanded the gunboat Havoc at the capture of the Peiho Forts and other operations in China in 1860, for which services he was awarded the Chinese war medal.

Captain O'Neill.—A Poona telegram of Sept. 28 says:—Captain O'Neill, of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, who died of enteric fever on Sunday evening, after one week's illness, arrived in Poona about three weeks ago, and was attached to the Pay Examiner's Office, Military Accounts Department, where he was in training for the paymastership of Kurrachee, whither he was to have proceeded at the commencement of the ensuing trooping season. The funeral took place this evening at the New Cemetery on the Sholapore road, and was largely attended, among those present being his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, attended by Captain Peyton, aide-de-camp; Major-General Blundell, attended by Captain Upperton, aide-de-camp; Brigadiers-General Gatacre and Hogg; Capt. the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, aide-de-camp, representing his Excellency the Governor; Colonels Rawlins, Carrington, Stopford, Cowper, Major, and Kays; Surgeon-General Webb; Majors Blomfield, Rainsford, and Lyster; Captains Geoghegan and Horrocks; Surgeons Trask, Thacker, &c. The firing party of 100 rank-and-file was furnished by the Worcestershire Regiment, under the command of Captain Lenox-Conyngham, the band of the regiment with fife and drums being in attendance. The 53rd Field Battery, Royal Artillery, furnished the gun-carriage upon which the coffin was borne from the Station Hospital to the cemetery. Numerous beautiful wreaths and crosses were placed on the coffin. Captain O'Neill, R.A., brother of the deceased, was chief mourner. The Rev. Mr. Beck read the burial service.

Captain Birch.—A Poona correspondent writes on Sept. 26:—The sad death of Captain Birch, of the 18th Hussars, who took part with his regimental team in the recent Polo Tournament, has cast quite a gloom over the station. He was ill when he came down from Mhow for the Tournament, and while still suffering from fever he took part in the match, at the termination of which he had two fainting fits. Enteritis and peritonitis subsequently developed. He was at first attended by Surgeon-Major Bull, but all that medical skill could do did not avail him. Some four or five days ago he was admitted into the Station Hospital at Wanowrie, where he was attended by Surgeon A. E. J. Croly. He gradually became worse, and died at about four o'clock this morning. The funeral took place this afternoon at the new cemetery on the Sholapore Road, and was very numerously attended. The firing party consisted of a hundred rank and file of the 2nd battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, with band, under the command of Captain Tallents. The coffin was conveyed from the hospital to the cemetery on a gun-carriage drawn by six horses, belonging to the Royal Horse Artillery, and was covered with a large number of beautiful wreaths and crosses. Among those present were his Excellency Sir George Greaves, the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, attended by Captain Peyton, A.D.C., Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, A.D.C., representing his Excellency the Governor, Major-General Blundell, Commanding the District, Brigadier-General Gatacre, Brigadier-General Hogg, Colonel Cunningham, Colonel Curteis, Colonel Stopford, Dr. Bull, Dr. Trask, Dr. Croly, Dr. Thacker, Surgeon-General Webb, Dr. Burness, Captain Carthew-Yorston, Captain Phayre, Lieutenant Lambert, R.H.A., &c. The deceased was a very popular officer and a keen sportsman. Captain Birch's death was so sudden that much to the great regret of all his brother officers, they could not arrive in Poona in time for the funeral. Major Moller, who is away at Muttra, and Mr. Stewart at Deolali, received the telegram from the Colonel too late to come down, so that none of his brother officers were able to attend the funeral. They, however, had sent a large beautiful wreath, which was buried with him; also a very large cross from his mother. Captain Birch's age was twenty-seven years.

Lieutenant W. O. Thurburn, of H.M.S. Hyacinth, was drowned at Hong Kong on Oct. 11, a Dalziel telegram states.

Mr. Laffan, Acting Collector of Vizagapatam, died at Madras on Sept. 26 from abscess of the liver.

Archbishop Jacobi.—A Calcutta correspondent telegraphed on Oct. 18:—After fifty years' toil in India, Archbishop Jacobi, of Agra, died on Wednesday last. His name stands high on the roll of the many great and good men whom the Church of Rome has sent to India. His fervour and piety won the respect, and his works of mercy the love, of all classes and creeds.

Monsieur de Closets died at Cuddalore on Sept. 27, aged seventy-four years, after a short illness contracted from exposure in carrying out the survey of the French line of railway from near Mayaveram to Karrikal. The deceased was well known throughout the Madras Presidency, where, says a Bombay paper, he has been conspicuous for many years in engineering works. He was also a talented musician.

A cable message from Siam conveys the intelligence of the death, in his sixtieth year, of Mr. William John Galwey, member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, while employed as chief of the engineering staff in the survey of the projected railway from Bangkok to Chiengmai and Chiengsin, on the South-West Frontier of the Chinese Empire, a distance of nearly 1,000 miles. Mr. Galwey owed his selection for the responsible post of chief engineer of the survey to a long unbroken record of good service. Beginning his career in 1855, as assistant engineer on the East Indian Railway, he advanced in his profession by rapid strides, until in 1872 he was offered and accepted service under Government on the State railways. The bridge over the Jhelum river, on the Punjab Northern Railway, and the Empress Bridge, the foundations of which were laid in the bed of the stream, at a depth of 100 feet below water-level, were his work, and his last Government employment was that of chief engineer in charge of the Rajpootana State Railway. He had worked for two years in Siam, and, having practically accomplished his mission, was looking forward to return to England, when a boat accident on the Meh-Nam river put an end to his career.

THE IMPERIAL DIAMOND CASE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 13.—At the further hearing of the Jacob case before the Hyderabad Commission, the Nizam admitted, in cross-examination, that the Resident spoke to him about the purchase of the diamond. The Resident drew his attention to the state of the treasury, and suggested that, with famine threatening, the purchase of a costly diamond was unreasonable. The Nizam thereupon assured the Resident that he would not purchase the diamond. At the close of the examination, Mr. Inverarity stated that he reserved certain points, as he hoped that the Nizam would go to Calcutta and be examined at the court. Mr. Woodroffe declared that this course was impossible for the ruler of Hyderabad.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 18.—In the course of his re-examination before the Jacob Commission, the Nizam reiterated that he did not agree to buy the "Imperial" diamond out and out, and declared that his ultimate refusal to buy it was due to certain defects in the stone, which he specified. He declared that he rejected the diamond of his free will. No pressure was brought to bear upon him by the Resident or by anyone else. The Resident, in his evidence, confirmed this statement, and declared that no pressure was exercised by him; he only advanced certain arguments. He understood from the first that the Nizam was free to take the diamond or reject it when it arrived. The Resident declared that he had found the Nizam truthful and a man of his word. —Times Correspondent.

A telegram dated Calcutta Sept. 25 says:—The "Imperial" diamond was sent to Hyderabad by last night's mail train, enclosed in a treasure chest, and in charge of two European Sergeants of the Reserve Police.

THE STAFF COLLEGE DINNER AT SIMLA.

THE annual gathering in India of officers who have passed the Staff College, Sandhurst, took place on Oct. 22, at the United Service Club, Simla. Major-General Colten, Secretary to the Government of India, in the Military Department, presided, and the following officers were present:—Colonel Dalrymple, Deputy Quartermaster-General; Colonel Hart, V.C., R.E., Director of Military Education in India; Colonel Ardagh, C.B., R.E., Private Secretary to the Viceroy; Colonel Murray, D.S.O., Assistant Adjutant-General; Colonel H. F. Grant, C.B., Assistant Adjutant-General; Major A. F. Barrow, C.M.G., Personal Assistant to the Military Member of Council; Major Balfe, Assistant Judge Advocate-General; Captain Smith-Dorrien, D.S.O.; Captain Inglefield, R.A.; Captain A. E. Jones, late A.D.C. to the General Officer Commanding Manipore Field Force; Captain A. M. Renny, 7th Bengal Cavalry; Captain Duff, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Captain Kemball, R.A., Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General for Mobilisation; and Captain de Brahm, 32nd Pioneers, of the Adjutant-General's Department. The following guests were invited:—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India; the Hon. Lieut.-General Brackenbury, C.B., R.A., Military Member of Council; Major-General Galbraith, C.B., Adjutant-General in India; Major-General Sir James Browne, K.C.S.I., C.B., R.E., Quartermaster-General in India; and Colonel Nicholson, C.B., R.E., Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief. Sir James Browne was unavoidably absent. After the Queen's health had been duly honoured, General Colten, in the course of a speech proposing the health of the Commander-in-Chief in India, said:—

We cannot, I am sorry to say, claim Sir Frederick Roberts as one of ourselves, but at least we may claim him as being one of that great fraternity of workers—a class now so numerous in the army—in every branch of the military art. I do not presume to speak of Sir Frederick Roberts as the general whose works are written in the pages of history, but rather of him in those days when he was preparing himself for the opportunities that were coming to him, and when he studied every branch of military science with that keenness and enthusiasm which have always so greatly distinguished him.

The Commander-in-Chief then spoke as follows:—

GENERAL COLTEN AND GENTLEMEN: I will not take up your time by enlarging on its merits, but will, with your permission, say a few words on the subject of Staff College training, and upon the responsibilities which are inseparable from the position which you have attained by your industry and the exercise of your natural abilities. To you, gentlemen, who have seized every opportunity of qualifying yourselves for the most important positions which soldiers can occupy, I need hardly insist on the value of the Staff Officer to an army. Weighty and responsible as were the duties of the Staff in the days of the Crimea and the Mutiny, the circumstances of modern life and the requirements of modern warfare have combined still further to emphasise the imperative necessity for a thoroughly efficient Staff, not only at Army Headquarters, but also with districts, divisions, and brigades. The pressure caused by telegraphs and railways necessitates all measures determined on being carried out with such lightning rapidity, that the staff officer of to-day needs to be possessed of the utmost decision of character and the readiest wit to be able to carry on his work in a satisfactory manner. Seeing, then, that the duties of the staff are so exceedingly important, it may not be amiss if I take advantage of the present occasion to give you the benefit of my experience as to the qualifications which are required to make a good staff officer; this will naturally lead to the consideration of whether our present system is absolutely the best suited in every way to ensure only those officers being admitted to the Staff College who are likely to do credit to the positions which they will have to fill. Well, gentlemen, I should say the qualifications required in a staff officer are:—Common sense and self-reliance; capacity for work, both mental and physical; knowledge, practical as well as theoretical; good horsemanship; and, last, though certainly not least, tact and good manners. And I would add one other—absolute reliability—without which the staff officer cannot possess the confidence and friendship of the general on whose staff he is working. Capacity for work is very essential. In a great crisis most British officers may be expected to do their duty to the best of their ability, but it is necessary that the ability should be trained, and capacity for continuous useful labour is not to be acquired by the desire to do one's duty, so much as by constant practice in making the most of one's time, and not wasting it on unnecessary details of routine. Let us consider for a few moments the work that would devolve on the staff officer of a division or brigade just mobilised for service, and see how much he would need to be possessed of common sense, self-reliance, power of hard work, and tact. For several days previous to his leaving his station for the place of concentration he will be inundated with telegrams and letters, day and night, detailing the advance of the various corps and departmental units. Everyone of these carries with it some obligation in the way of preliminary arrangements for transport, rationing, and reception of troops, &c. In spite of all the foresight of the Headquarters Staff, a thousand difficulties are sure to arise. Transport may be insufficient, wells may run dry, or else it may rain in buckets, and extraordinary measures must be taken to prevent the large collection of stores from being damaged. Urgent, carefully-worded orders on these and a hundred other kindred subjects must at once be issued, and in the midst of this incessant work the staff officer may be almost overwhelmed by finding that the clerk he has obtained with so much difficulty proves a failure, or perhaps has succumbed to an attack of fever. When the place of concentration has been reached the staff officer will find himself surrounded by officers of every rank and branch of the Service, newspaper correspondents and all sorts of people each wanting something, and fancying his requirements more urgent than any one else's—all in a hurry, and some not in the best of tempers. Many have no business to be there at all, and should be applying for aid to the different departmental heads, but all have to be listened to and answered courteously and told where to go for assistance and information. The staff officer has to discriminate with good humour and judgment between what is really pressing and what should never have been brought to his notice; he has to soothe the irate, to meet difficulties as best he can, and, above all, to spare his General, who will have plenty to occupy and harass him under the best of circumstances. In the midst of all this an orderly may arrive with a message from the General to say that he is going round the camps, and wishes the staff officer to accompany him. When the march actually begins, matters of interior administration no doubt gradually settle down, but the circumstances would be exceptional, indeed, were they to cease from troubling altogether. Moreover, a new set of anxieties and causes for untiring work will then arise, in connection with the amount of food and forage required daily for the force, and with the whereabouts and probable intentions of the enemy. In conformity with the information obtained, arrangements will have to be made for the movement and fighting of the division: the action determined upon being put in orders, and recorded, together with the reasons which led to the decision, in the staff officer's diary. Throughout a campaign the staff officer is hard at work from morning till night, and sometimes far into the night, and what requires so much readiness of resource is that everything has to be done on the spur of the moment. When the day's work is finished, the staff officer has to sit down and write a full and careful account of all that has taken place, and draft orders for the next day. I assure you, gentlemen, this sketch is no exaggeration. I speak of what I know and have had to do. You will see from it how essential it is that a staff officer should have a capacity for hard and rapid work, and that he should possess tact, good manners, and a temper perfectly under control; for, according to the method in which he deals with those with whom he comes in contact, will depend not only the spirit in which the instructions he has to give are carried out, but the reputation of the General in whose name he is acting. As to knowledge, the theoretical will not help the staff officer so much as the practical, and although it may assist him to know how Wellington or Napoleon would have acted under similar circumstances, I think I should be inclined to give the preference in point of utility to some experience of a like nature. I thoroughly agree with the proverb that an ounce of practice is worth a ton of theory. Altogether, and although I have only touched on the very fringe of the subject, I think I have said enough to show that the best troops in the world could not be of much use without an efficient Staff. Under these circumstances, how much must depend upon the method upon which the entrance to, and education at, the Staff College is regulated and carried on. It would be presumptuous of me to criticise the entrance examination or the subsequent curriculum of instruction followed at that institution. Generally speaking, however, I may say that the course of study appears to me sound, provided always it is carried out practically and by practical men. The only point about which I feel any misgiving is in regard to the preliminary selection. I know indeed the officers in this room afford sufficient testimony to the fact that the Staff College is fortunate in attracting some of the best men in our army; but do we by our present method make absolutely certain that the very best men, the very best all-round soldiers, are selected from our regiments? I am not sure about this: sometimes I think commanding officers do not put their foot down firmly enough when officers who are wanting in the necessary force of character or tact, press to be allowed to compete for the staff, and I believe that general officers also fail at times in not exacting a sufficiently high standard of natural aptitude and qualification, during the preliminary three months' trial on their staff. If the candidate were desirous of becoming a regimental adjutant, or the general's own staff officer, he would, I believe, be reported upon much less leniently than he is as a probationer for the staff of the Army. Now this is a great mistake, for one bad-mannered, weak, and unpractical staff officer not only tends to lessen the high respect with which the Army generally ought to regard those officers who have gained the Staff College certificate, but he may some day be placed in a position to do irretrievably national harm. I think a modification, not very radical in its character, might effectually secure the Staff College from such evil chances as these, whereby the prestige of the letters P. S. C. suffers immeasurably more than it can gain from any number of Staff appointments or complimentary speeches. I am convinced that the weak point of the system lies at the very commencement. Education is invaluable in developing the qualities of the man who has in him the making of a Staff Officer, and the certificates he gains are useful signs of his success, but these very certificates in the possession of the man of feeble and injudicious character have their drawbacks; it is difficult to ignore them, and they may result in an officer being placed in a position for which he is eminently unfitted. Such individuals should be excluded from the Staff College at any cost, and, as I have just said, I am sure it could be done, although I feel that this is hardly the time or place to discuss in further detail so technical a matter.

General Collen returned thanks to Sir Frederick Roberts, and General Brackenbury for the toasts of the guests.

CIS-INDUS DANGERS.

THE Pioneer says:—In a previous article on the subject an attempt was made to bring into clear light the points that by a competent German military critic the issue of a conflict for the possession of India between the Russians and English is not considered so doubtful as we should like to have it believed; how disastrous to Anglo-Indians a conquest of India by Russia would be; how important it is with this danger impending over us to have not only the tribes inhabiting the borderland on our side, but also the Punjabi inhabitants of the Cis-Indus tract, in which our base of operations will be, and from which some of our best recruits are drawn; and, lastly, the question was asked whether these people are satisfied with the existing order of things, and an attempt was made to prove that the warlike classes among them have many causes of dissatisfaction, owing to the exactions of the money-lending class and gradual alienation of the land from the hands of its former proprietors.

A perusal of the recently received Report on the Administration of Civil and Criminal Justice in the Punjab fully bears out the views expressed. The Civil Justice Report teems with references to the craft, forgeries and deceptions practised by members of the money-lending tribe on their clients, and one of the most experienced and capable judicial officers in the Punjab, himself a Punjabi Mahomedan, Sardar Muhammad Haiyat Khan, C.S.I., has not hesitated to express his opinion that the increasing transfer of land from the hands of its ancient proprietors constitutes a serious political danger. From the Criminal Justice Report, although it fortunately appears that violent crime, which in 1888 reached an abnormal development, has declined, yet that murder is rife in the province; that in the Rawul Pindi district alone there were forty-five murders during the year, a clear indication that lawlessness, which in India is frequently associated with poverty, oppression, and discontent, is still prevalent. In the present article an attempt will be made to trace some of the causes which have of late years led to the depression of the agricultural classes and the alienation of their land, phenomena which in the opinion of Sardar Muhammad Haiyat Khan can only be remedied by legislation. One circumstance which during the last few years seems unquestionably to have depressed the condition of the peasantry of the Western Punjab is the enormous export of wheat. Messrs. Ralli Brothers, who are the great grain exporters, have their agencies in important towns and their sub-agencies scattered throughout the country in all leading trade centres. The cultivator himself rarely stores his grain. When ready for the market he sells it to the trader, who formerly used to keep it stored up in mud granaries, or, as in Rawul Pindi, in huge pits dug in the ground. These stores have disappeared under the influence of a keen demand for the Europe market, and high prices, and there is very little grain kept in stock compared to what there was formerly. And even the grain which is kept in stock the money-lender is chary of parting with. It is not the case now that he must either dispose of it or run the risk of it rotting on the ground, becoming weevilled, or burnt in one of those conflagrations which are constantly occurring in villages. He can sell it for ready cash, and if he parts with it to a customer he must either feel very sure that he will get its full value back by securing high interest and ample security, or he wishes to get his client more deeply involved in debt, so as to obtain a lien on his land. The increasing stringency in the terms of loans is a feature which is said to strike everyone who has moved about the country and studied the rural economy. Its effect is most grievous, of course, upon the menial classes and the poorer agriculturists. It has to some extent neutralised the advantages arising from improved communications. In all probability during the ensuing winter the poorer people in many parts of the Western Punjab, especially where the ravages of locusts have been most severe, will be compelled to feed on the grains of wild clover and wild rice, and to use wild herbs for pulse. Now this cannot happen without arousing discontent. Calamities which affect the upper classes only have little effect on the political stability of a country.

Princes or lords may flourish or may fade!

A king can make them as a king has made, but the experience of every country shows that when the food-supply of the masses is restricted, discontent and crime are rife.

Another cause which has no doubt embittered the relations between agriculturists and the money-lending class of late years is the effect of recent decisions of the Chief Court tending to make the law more severe in its operation upon the debtor. It was formerly the rule that, in suits between money-lender and client, courts presuming from the unconscionable nature of the transaction that an undue advantage had been obtained by the money-lender over his client, went behind the actual contract made, or bargain struck, and gave equitable relief to the debtor. This rule was an admirable one. It was strictly in accordance with the usage of English law, for no English court will give a money-lender who has taken advantage of youth and inexperience any exorbitant interest he may demand; and, as we saw in a recent case in which a retired officer had presumed upon the confidence reposed in him by a female friend, even when the terms of a contract had been reduced to writing, the jury refused to uphold the contract. The peasant-farmer of the Punjab in his dealings with the money-lender is in his inexperience, his want of education and worldly knowledge, exactly on a par with the English minor or the confiding female in the law suit. Not to allow it to be taken as a legal presumption that his clients do repose confidence in their money-lender, that he exercises an authority over them, that an unconscionable bargain is caused by abuse of this authority, is to work grievous injustice in many cases; yet such, unfortunately, is the effect of recent Punjab rulings, such as those reported in Punjab Record, No. 32 of 1890 and No. 135 of 1889. In the former case, in a suit between two Mahomedans, agriculturists, father and son, and a Hindoo money-lender, an agreement to pay 396 rs. cash with simple interest at 25 per cent. per annum, and to pay compound interest on 443 maunds of grain at the rate of 50 per cent. per annum was upheld. This case has already been referred to in the Pioneer, but it cannot be noticed too often, if only to show how urgently a reform in the law is needed. Is it any wonder that, when such unconscionable bargains are upheld by the highest tribunal in the province, the decisions in which bind all lower courts trying similar cases, the Mahomedan agriculturists of the province are becoming ruined, landless, discontented and lawless men? Another decision of recent years which has had the effect of fettering the hands of executive officers in their attempts to relieve the landed aristocracy from bargains which, in their inexperience and ignorance, they may have fatuously entered into with astute and greedy money-lenders, is the decision reported in Punjab Record No. 18 of 1884. Under the law, as it was administered until that decision came into force, when a man of good family, the representative of an honourable name and as such a man of influence and position in the country side, had by his hopeless extravagance shown himself unfit to manage his own affairs, the Deputy Commissioner of the district took over the management of his property, made an equitable settlement with the creditors, and preserved the estate from ruin in the interest of the heirs. Under the decision quoted it has been ruled that the disqualification under the Punjab Laws Act "does not extend to incapacitating a person, otherwise competent to do so, from contracting debts, or that it exempts his property from the liability to which it is ordinarily subject, of being applied to the discharge of his debts by process of law." In the face of this ruling it is hopeless to interfere to save an old family from ruin, even though the effect of it, as every district officer knows, is to add unpopularity to our rule. It is in this way by the increasing rigidity and diminished flexibility of our law as applied to tribes still rude and little advanced in modern ideas that we are losing our hold upon the people, which loss of influence manifests itself in increased lawlessness. It is by the attitude of the tribes of the Western Punjab that our success or failure in the coming struggle will largely be determined. It is little to their advantage that we have substituted a light and fixed assessment for the onerous and irregular demands of former rulers, if we allow our benefits to be neutralised by the exactions and oppression of a class which owes its existence to British rule. It is still time for us to make a change in our policy, but no half measures will be sufficient; what the Western Punjab requires to make it loyal and contented, to make its manhood as devoted to us as when Sir Herbert Edwardes led them in 1848 against Mooltan, is a revision of the land administration, and the introduction of drastic reforms to restore prosperity to the old land-owning classes.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Review of Troops by the Governor of Bombay.—Lord Harris, G.C.I.E., Governor of Bombay, reviewed all the troops stationed at Poona and Kirkee on Sept. 26, the function being a brilliant one. The parade was witnessed by a very large concourse of people, numerous ladies being present. Lady Harris drove up to the flagstaff—which had been erected at the saluting-base—soon after the parade had commenced. The troops were formed up in one line on the General Parade Ground Racecourse, facing west, in the following order:—The Cavalry Brigade, made up of the R. batty. Royal Horse Artillery and the 3rd (Queen's Own) Bombay Light Cavalry, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Willoughby, of the 3rd Cavalry, with Capt. Fanshawe, R.H.A., as brigade major, were formed up on the extreme right of the line, the Royal Horse Artillery being drawn up in action for the firing of the salute. Then came the Bombay Sappers and Miners, under the command of Capt. Turner Jones, R.E., on the left of whom were the three battalions which formed the first Infantry Brigade, under Col. Westmacott, C.B., D.S.O. (of the 28th Pioneers), who had Capt. Tritton, S. S. O. of Kirkee, as his Brigade Major. These regiments were the 2nd batt. Lancashire Fusiliers, the 10th Bombay Light Inf., and the 28th Bombay Pioneers. The Poona Volunteer Rifles, under their commandant, Col. H. G. Meakin, were accorded a position in the centre of the line. The second Infantry Brigade, made up of the 25th Bombay Infantry (3rd Rifle Regt.), the 13th Bombay Infantry, and the 1st batt. Worcester Regt., were on the left of the Volunteers, and were under the command of Lieut.-Col. Tandy (of the 25th Regt.), whose brigade major was Capt. Vidal, of the 13th Bombay Inf. The artillery brigade, which was commanded by Lieut.-Col. Kaye, R.H.A., with Capt. Hobday, R.A., as brigade major, occupied the left of the line, and consisted of the three Field-batteries R.A. from Kirkee, viz. the 35th, the 53rd, and the 55th. The artillery were formed up at half intervals, the cavalry in quarter column, the Sappers and Miners in column of companies, and the infantry in quarter column—six paces interval between battalions and twelve paces between brigades. The whole division was under the command of Major-Gen. B. H. Blundell, commanding Poona District, who was attended by the whole District Staff.

Impending Resignations.—In the early part of next year, a Simla correspondent says, there promises to be a game of general post among some of the higher military appointments. On April 1 both the first-class districts of Lucknow and Lahore will become vacant through the retirement of Generals Perkins and Sir Hugh Gough, while on Jan. 13 and April 22 Brig.-Gens. Low and Keen will retire from Rohilkhand and Peshawur. We should not be surprised if General Nairne, who hands over charge of the inspector-generalship of artillery to General Tillard in April, were to succeed to the Lahore District, and probably Col. Collett may be sent to Peshawur. Col. P. Harris intends to resign the service in February next, instead of two months later, when his time is actually up. He will have had no less than forty-one years' service in India, of which thirty-seven have been spent in the plains. General Tillard is now in England, engaged in visiting the various arsenals and camps. He returns to India about the end of December.

The Trooping Season.—The following officers proceed to England to regimental depots, doing duty with troops on the homeward voyage:—Capt. Dewar, 2nd Dragoon Guards; Lieuts. Cooper, 7th Dragoon Guards; the Hon. Milles, 16th Lancers; Pilleau, West Surrey Regt.; Capt. Blackburn and Lieut. D'Aeth, the Buffs; Capt. Bird, Royal Warwick; Lieuts. Hickie, Royal Fusiliers; Barrington, West York; Capt. Child and Lieut. Curtis, Bedford Regt.; Lieut. Macgregor, Royal Scots Fusiliers; Capt. Cooper and Lieut. Hall, Royal Welsh Fusiliers; Second-Lieut. Dwyer, East Surrey; Capt. Saunders, Durham Light Inf.; and Capt. Parker, Rifle Brigade.

The New Hong Kong Battalion.—The names of the officers of the Staff Corps willing to volunteer for service with the new Hong Kong Battalion were being registered at Army headquarters when the mail left. The Commander-in-Chief was to select a certain number for reference to the Colonial Office.

Re-armament of British Troops in India.—It is now expected that a sufficient number of Magazine rifles will be forthcoming from England to provide for the re-armament of the British troops in India by April 1, 1892. The ammunition will have to be imported from home, and the rifles will not be issued until a sufficient supply of ball cartridges has reached this country. The Imperial Service troops will be equipped with Martini when Magazine rifles are issued.

Civilian Paymasters.—The Civil and Military Gazette writes:—There is a precedent of a very marked character about to be created in connection with the appointment of paymaster at the Deolali Depot. Our readers are of course aware that circumstances have occurred which have necessitated a change in the incumbency. One of the uncovenanted staff of the Bombay Military Accounts Department has been engaged in an examination of the Deolali Depot accounts for some time, and his Excellency Sir George Greaves now is about to give a startling shock to the traditions of the Department by nominating Mr. Adam Smith, paymaster to the Depot. Who knows? this may be the thin end of the wedge that is destined to revolutionise the whole system of audit of regimental accounts. Within the last couple of years the Bombay Presidency has furnished a nice crop of regimental account scandals, and it is no small praise to Sir George Greaves if he is bold enough to assert his convictions that properly trained accountants should be employed to audit military accounts, as is done in the Public Works Department.

New Barracks.—Government has just sanctioned the expenditure of 6 lacs of rupees for building new barracks in the Lawrence Military Asylum, Sanawar, the executive engineer and a committee having condemned those now in use. The foundation-stone was to be laid by his honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab on Oct. 11, and work would be begun immediately. It is not unlikely, the Times of India says, that the children will be sent to Sabathu for the winter, as has been done before, the principal, Mr. Hildesley, going there with them.

The Volunteer Conference. which was to meet at Simla during the week in which the mail left, is an informal committee only, says a Bombay paper, but arrangements may probably be made for a representative committee with members from Madras and Bombay to meet in Calcutta in the cold weather. Col. Rivett-Carnac, C.I.E., Mr. J. P. Hewett, deputy secretary, Home Department, Mr. Maude, Punjab Secretariat, and Major Leigh, commanding the Simla Volunteers, are likely to be the members present at the Conference. The Volunteer Conference does not seem, observes the Indian Daily News, intended to be anything more than a repetition of the Belvedere Conference of last spring, which has produced positively no useful results affecting Volunteer organisation or providing greater encouragement for either corps or individual Volunteers, so far as we can understand. It is time these "informal committees" that lead to nothing were at an end. The Government should take the subject in hand with a spirit of determination to decide promptly what reforms are necessary and desirable, and carry the programme into effect without further shilly-shally. Upon one important point, it appears to us, all persons interested in the Volunteer question, or who have given it any intelligent attention, are agreed, namely, that the appointment of an inspector-general of Volunteers is very necessary to secure for the interests of the force proper representation in influential quarters, and also to superintend and direct the operation of wheeling the whole force into line, perfecting its organisation and equipment—at present very far from perfect—and making it in all respects a thoroughly well-disciplined and well-trained second line of defence, every unit of which shall always be "ready, aye ready."

T batty. Royal Horse Art., now at Rawul Pindi, will proceed to the Camp of Instruction to be held at Aligarh, in place of K batty.

At the Camp of Exercise at Dablan, near Patiala, which will probably come off on Nov. 12, there will be about 3,000 infantry and 1,000 cavalry present.

For the forthcoming Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Aligarh, it is believed that there are sufficient supplies available to justify the assembling of the Cavalry Regiments and Horse Artillery already nominated.

Two special musketry classes assemble at Meerut under Capt. Cox, 21st Madras Inf., for the instruction of non-commissioned officers of the Imperial Service Troops.

The two Madras regiments selected for disbandment are the 30th and 31st. The former is at Belgaum, and the latter at Moulinein.

Two more Madras infantry regiments are to be converted into local corps for Burma, 1,800 men being transferred from the military police to the regular army. The new local regiments will be constituted on similar lines to those followed in the case of the four battalions already formed.

Final orders have been passed regarding the strength of the permanent garrison of Manipore. This will be a battalion and a half of Goorkhas, with two 7-pounder guns. The Assam Regiment will furnish the garrison, the 2nd Goorkhas returning to India. The mountain battery now at Manipore may possibly be sent to Burma.

Her Majesty's troopship Euphrates (Captain Arthur C. B. Bromley, R.N.) arrived at Bombay on Sept. 29, from Portsmouth, which port she left on the 2nd instant, calling at Malta on the 11th, Port Said on the 15th, Suez on the 16th, and Aden on the 21st inst. She carried 50 officers, 17 ladies, 13 officers' children, 1,007 men (rank and file), 68 women and 80 children, and 6 Naval men for H.M.S. Marathon. During the voyage she experienced fine weather throughout.

Major Broadbent, K.E., of the Military Department, will probably succeed Major Hildebrand as Deputy Director for Fortifications in India.

Capt. Cornish, on return from leave, will probably rejoin his appointment as Assistant Secretary in the Foreign Office.

Capt. Loch, of the 3rd Goorkhas, will probably be selected to command the Surma Valley Police Battalion, vice Lieut. H. Cole, who has joined the Assam Commission.

Deputy Commissary and Honorary Captain Charles Duke (Military Works Department (Barrack Branch), has been permitted to retire from the Service from Aug. 17.

The following officers have been appointed to command hill depôts:—Major Collins, 2nd Queen's, to Kasauli; Major Forbes, Warwickshire Regiment, to Pachmarhi; Major Ommanney, the Bufs, to Darjeeling; Major Evetts, Scottish Rifles, to Landour; and Major Burridge, R.A., to Dalhousie.

Surg.-Major J. H. Ritchie, M.D., senior medical officer, General Hospital, and Principal, Madras Medical College, is compelled to come home on furlough immediately on account of his health. He has been very seriously ill at the Madras General Hospital.

The Home authorities have ruled that the admission of Capt. Hext into the Indian Marine, by the Government of India, is not in accordance with existing regulations, although that officer has retired from the Royal Navy.

Capt. G. B. O'Donnell, on return from leave, will act as Third Assistant to the Political Resident at Aden; and on his arrival Lieut. H. D. Merewether will act as Fourth Assistant Political Resident; Capt. R. P. Colomb will act as Fifth Assistant Political Resident, and Capt. J. Davies as Sixth Assistant Political Resident, Aden.

Brig.-Gen. Steedman has not returned to Burma as Inspector-General of Police, but will revert to military duty on the expiry of his furlough in February. He may possibly be selected to command one of the second-class districts in Bengal, which may then be falling vacant.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Sept. 30.

The Bengal Presidency Rifle Association.—The forthcoming annual meeting of this association promises to be the best that has yet been held since the N.I.R.A. ceased to exist, the Pioneer says. The keen interest shown in musketry by the present Commander-in-Chief has done much to increase the importance both of the Meerut central meeting and the meetings held at local centres. Sir Frederick Roberts will be leaving India next year, and consequently he will practically say good-bye in December to the association he has started and fostered with such excellent results. The prospectus for this year contains the conditions for eighty-two matches; the prize list is, we believe, better than it has ever been; and certain changes have been made that will prove acceptable to competitors generally and also conduce to greater interest in the shooting. Thus the Council have ruled that the standing position shall be compulsory in all matches at 200 yards, an undoubtedly practical reform. Again, the cavalry have long felt that they were not given sufficient chances in the competition for prizes: now an extra "cavalry aggregate," open only to British Cavalry, has been introduced at the central meeting, while a separate course for native cavalry at local meetings has been adopted. A special championship badge, and purse of 300 rs. are to be given to the British soldier who is the first in the British Army in Bengal, should an officer, civilian, or volunteer win the Viceroy's Prize and the Association Championship. Rapid volley firing, both for British and native competitors, has been introduced for the first time at the central meeting. The match is open to sections of eight non-commissioned officers and men under the command of an officer or non-commissioned officer. The time allowed is 3 minutes 30 seconds, and each team will have to fire five volleys in any position at 600 yards, then double to 500 yards and fire five volleys more. A cup of the value of 400 rs. will be given for the British Service and one of 300 rs. for the Native Army, with three money prizes in addition. It is most important that rapid and accurate volley-firing should be encouraged, and the Council has unquestionably acted most wisely in instituting these two new matches.

Bengal Agricultural Statistics.—A first step in the collection of agricultural statistics for Bengal has recently been made by the Provincial Agricultural Departments, and great credit, says the Englishman, is due to the head of the departments for even this initial effort, which he believes, if persevered in, will give fairly accurate figures within a limited period of years. The returns are published in pamphlet form, and include the following tables:—(a) Crop statistics for the whole province; (b) crop statistics for cadastrally surveyed areas; (c) prices of produce; (d) incidence of land revenue on area and population (e) varieties of tenures held direct from Government; (f) area of forests; and (g) area irrigated by State canals. Although any approach to complete accuracy is not claimed for the statistics of crop areas, it is, nevertheless, believed that they are closer approximations to the truth than any figures hitherto compiled. The statistics are compiled for each division, and, taking them in the order given, we find the following particulars which may be of interest to our readers:—In the Burdwan Division, comprising five districts, the total area of crops is returned as 5,743,176 acres; for the Presidency Division, comprising five districts, the total area of crops is 6,229,114 acres; in the Rajshahye Division, seven districts, it is 8,709,328 acres; in the Dacca Division, four districts, 6,416,540 acres; in the Chittagong Division, four districts, 3,330,785 acres; in the Patna Division, seven districts, 13,062,274 acres; in the Bhagulpore Division, five districts, 8,879,532 acres; in the Orissa Division, three districts, 3,401,668 acres; and in the Chota Nagpore Division, four districts, 7,348,738 acres, giving a total for the whole province of 63,121,155 acres. The last figure is made up as follows:—

Wheat	1,844,851
Other food grains, including pulses.....	12,148,326
Oilseeds	3,821,339
Sugarcane	1,126,781
Cotton	219,118
Jute	2,478,973
Other fibres	234,822
Indigo	531,661
Tea	80,765
Tobacco	674,947
Cinchona.....	3,421
Miscellaneous (food crops)	1,685,848
Do. (non-food do.)	489,623
Total	63,121,155

The returns of incidence of land revenue on area and population show that the average incidence of land revenue in all Bengal, excluding the Darjeeling district, is 9 annas 1 pie per head of the population and 8 annas per acre; while in the North-Western Provinces it is 1-7-8 rs. per head of the population, and 1-0-9 rs. per acre. In only four districts of Bengal does the land revenue paid exceed one rupee per head of the population; while in some districts it is four to five annas per head, and in others as low as one to two annas per head of the population. The area of forests is shown to be as follows:—Reserved forests 3,192,535 acres, protected forests 1,449,262 acres, and unclassified State forests and waste lands, 2,581,420 acres. The total canal-irrigated area is shown to be 564,934 acres.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Oct. 1.

A Raja University Examiner.—A native gentleman writes to a Madras paper:—You will be very glad to learn that his Highness the Hon. Raja of Venkatagiri, K.C.I.E., has set a very testing paper in Telugu on two of the most difficult works in Telugu literature to the students of the Senior B.A. class of the Madras Christian College. His Highness is a scholar in Telugu. This is the first instance of a native Raja becoming an examiner, especially of the B.A. class. It is hoped that principals of other colleges will request his Highness to similarly examine their college students, and the University before long appoint his Highness as one of the examiners for the University Examinations in Telugu. It will be an honour to the University to boast of a Raja being in the list of examiners.

The Coimbatore Conversion Case.—The Judge of Coimbatore has given judgment in the appeal case preferred by the Rev. Mr. Bird, a missionary, against the judgment of the munsiff, in the Coimbatore Conversion Case. He finds that the youth about whom the trouble arose was a major, or over sixteen, and not only thirteen, and set aside the judgment of the Lower Court, and dismissed the suit against Mr. Bird, with costs in both Courts.

A Slow High Court.—Reviewing the administration of civil justice in the Madras Presidency in 1890, the Local Government observes with regret the falling-off in the outturn of work on the part of the High Court. In 1888 a fifth puisne judge was appointed, when the disposal of suits on the original side naturally showed a great improvement compared with 1887. Consequently the suits pending declined from 365 at the close of the latter year to 242, but since 1888 the number of suits disposed of has fallen off, and the arrears have accumulated so rapidly in consequence that at the end of 1890 they practically reached the figure attained at the close of 1887. Taking all kinds of business together, the work done in the High Court during 1890 showed a decided falling-off in quantity, as compared with 1889, the deterioration being noticeable under almost all heads.

Travancore.—The dictum of the Madras Government, after a perusal of the administration report of Travancore for the Malabar year 1065, ending Aug. 15, 1890, is that the administration was conducted wisely and well by his Highness the Maharaja and his advisers, and that in several branches of the public service there was undoubted progress. That the little "Model State" should deserve this encomium, remarks the Times of India, was nothing but what was expected, and is simply consonant to its traditions of the last decade or two. Favoured by position, picturesquely formed, and abounding in material resources, Travancore has been happy in having enlightened Maharajas as rulers and a succession of single-minded and able Dewans as counsellors and directors of affairs of State. If good climate, rich soil, abundant timber and water-supply can make a country prosperous, Travancore is prosperous above many Native States; and if an excellent inland water communication can give an impetus to trade and help to develop the resources of a country, Travancore can boast of it to perfection. Enjoying an uninterrupted peace from nearly the beginning of the present century, the country has rapidly improved, and its population has greatly advanced. The arts of peace also keep improving steadily, and as Travancore was once the birthplace of valour, so it is now the birthplace of originality in science and art. The signs of it are already there, and are full of promise and hope.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Oct. 3.

The Shroff Case.—The acquittal of this defendant on the charge of criminal breach of trust in his relations with the Oriental Life Assurance Company has come as a painful surprise in Bombay. The Times of India writes:—The escape of Dorabjee Dhunjeebhoj Shroff recalls the exclamation of Truthful James—"Are things what they seem or is visions about." Even before any accusation was made against him, while he was still in unshaken possession of the unlimited confidence of his employers, this man fully and in the most unequivocal manner confessed his guilt, declared that no one but himself was to blame, and begged hard for mercy. This he did in a letter written to Mr. Slater from Khandalla. Very shortly after that he wrote another from Lanowli, in which he ascribed his fall from the paths of honesty to his extravagant habits and his "too confiding nature." If he had ascribed it to the "too-confiding nature" of those who trusted him he would have been nearer the mark. He wound up this second letter by a piteous request that if he was to be prosecuted it might be done at once, as he intended to plead guilty at the Sessions. The jury, after an absence of thirty minutes, unanimously found the prisoner not guilty on two of the charges, and as to the third not guilty by six to three, the three taking the somewhat superfluous precaution of recommending the prisoner to mercy. The moral seems to be—if a crime is to be committed, let there be no shilly-shallying, no false sentimentality about it, do it thoroughly. . . . The prisoner was charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of three sums of 19,000 rs., 33,000 rs., and 2,45,000 rs., belonging to the Oriental Life Assurance Company. These were the sums which, according to the prosecution, the books showed, ought to have been in the safe on April 16, the day on which Shroff went to Khandalla, taking the key of the safe with him. In answer to a letter written on the 18th, asking him to return the key, as the contents of the safe had to be examined by the auditors before the annual meeting to be held on the 20th, he telegraphed he had missed the train, but that the securities were all right, and would be produced on his return next day. Such was the confidence reposed in him that the auditors, on the strength of this telegram, actually certified the statement of the amount of Government paper held by the company to have been found correct. The very first news of the defalcations was given by Shroff himself in the letters we have already alluded to. The first of these was dated April 21, and would probably never have been written if he had known the confiding spirit in which his telegram had been received. It need scarcely be said that when the key was eventually obtained, and the safe opened, it was found to be empty. Of the three sums named in the charges, that of 19,490 rs. represented the cash balance on April 16. Mr. Jardine, however, was able to show that a number of items had not been taken into account in fixing this amount, and after reducing it by about 5,800 rs., asked the jury to say that no charge whatever could be sustained in respect of it. The second sum of 33,828 rs. was the amount of premia received between April 1 and 16. As to this, the defence certainly succeeded in showing that between the 1st and 16th, exclusive of the cash balance on the first, the total receipts of the company, including this 33,828 rs., amounted to 1,43,382 rs. and the total payments to 1,43,311 rs., to which a sum of 100 rs. petty cash had to be added. Thus, the payments during that period from the 1st to the 16th exceeded the receipts by about 30 rs. But the cash balance, which ought to have been in the safe on the first, had disappeared. The way in which the third charge, in respect of 2,45,000 rs. Government paper, was arrived at was somewhat more complicated. At the beginning of 1890 there ought to have been a balance of 1,70,000 rs. Government paper in hand. During the year 5,30,000 rs. G.P.—to use the abbreviation employed by Shroff in his telegram to the office—was actually purchased, and 2,55,000 more was purchased—according to the books. Adding these two together we have, therefore, 7,85,000 rs. as the total for 1890. This with the 1,70,000 rs. in hand, makes a total of 9,55,000 to be accounted for. Of this 10,000 rs. were sold. 7,00,000 rs. were handed over to the official trustee, leaving a balance of 2,45,000 rs. G.P. which was not forthcoming. The Government paper handed over to the Official Trustee represented 80 per cent. of the balance of the receipts after deducting all the outgoings, which the company were bound to invest and deposit in this manner. The figures we have just given are those elicited by Mr. Inverarity from Jamsetjee Billimoria, an assistant in the company's employ, in re-examination, but it is only fair to say that in his answers to Mr. Jardine he told a very different story. It would take too long to go through all the figures, but the result of his cross-examination went to show that during the year 1890 the balance of 80 per cent. available for investment and deposit with the Official Trustee was 7,20,000 rs., and that the amount of Government paper purchased during that year and deposited was 7,24,000 rs. The remaining 20 per cent. was apparently all consumed by the outgoings, so that no other Government paper could have been purchased. It followed, therefore, first, that the whole of the 80 per cent. for 1890 was invested and deposited with the official assignee; second, that as no other monies were available for the purchase of paper, the amount in the safe at the end of the year was, or rather ought to have been, the same as at the beginning. Billimoria admitted in his re-examination that he was wrong in saying that 7,00,000 rs. had been purchased during the year; but how he came to make the statement at all, if it is not borne out by the books, it is difficult to understand. It was common ground to defence and prosecution that 1,70,000 rs. ought to have been in the safe on Jan. 1, 1890. But it was not seen then, and by April of that year, when the auditors checked the accounts, it could easily have been purchased and put into the safe. It was, therefore, abundantly clear that there had been a defalcation, and also that Shroff had been acting dishonestly towards his employers, but the rock the prosecution split upon was the not being able to fix the exact date and amount of his misappropriations. As we have seen in the course of the trial the precise sums which he had taken from the company were dexterously enveloped in doubt, and this was also urged as a reason why he should be acquitted. We cannot now enter into a consideration of the validity of these contentions, but, however unsubstantial they may appear, it must be borne in mind that the result of recent trials in Calcutta, and the fact that the learned judge who presided at this trial, instead of directing a re-trial, concurred with the verdict of the majority of six, who acquitted Shroff on the third charge, show that the state of the law is not free from doubt.

The All Saints Sisters.—No scheme ever started in Bombay, says the Times of India, has been productive of more good than the system of providing private nurses, started and carried on by the Sisters of the All Saints Community. Two years ago they handed over the financial management of the scheme to a small committee, of which the physician in charge of the European General Hospital and the honorary secretary of the Endowment Fund are ex-officio members. In another column we publish the yearly accounts prepared by the honorary secretary and treasurer, Mr. S. Gore Browne. The result of the year's working appears to be hardly as satisfactory as in former years, but we understand that the demand for nurses has again sprung up, and that the Sisters find it difficult to meet the calls made on them. The staff at present consists of four Sisters, fifteen nurses, and five probationers, of whom nine are engaged in the nursing of the European General Hospital, for which the nursing fund receives 340 rs. a month from Government and 250 rs. a month from the Endowment Fund. These amounts would be insufficient for the efficient nursing of the hospital were it not for the income received from the private nursing carried on under the management of the Sisters. Almost every week, we believe, the Sisters receive acknowledgments of the benefit derived by the families to whom the nurses are sent, and we would take this opportunity of calling attention to the provident fund, which is being gradually raised and for which the honorary treasurer will be glad to receive donations.

Dr. Pentecost's Visit to Poona.—Dr. Pentecost's five weeks' mission in Poona came to a close on Sept. 25, and he proceeded next day to Ahmednuggur, thence to Lucknow. The first three weeks of his mission at Poona were devoted to Europeans, the daily morning and evening meetings being numerously attended by representatives of all denominations and classes. The deepest interest was manifested unflinchingly to the very last. For the last fortnight, writes the correspondent of the Times of India, Dr. Pentecost has lectured to large numbers of educated native gentlemen, including the prominent leaders of the Hindoo community. The interest exhibited in these lectures has exceeded anything ever previously witnessed in similar connection in this conservative native city. A general desire prevails that the distinguished preacher might prolong his stay, but his engagements elsewhere will not permit of his doing so.

Prize Distribution.—H. E. the Governor, accompanied by Lady Harris and Captain Cox, A.D.C., attended the prize distribution at St. Mary's School on Sept. 25. The Right Reverend the Bishop of Bombay and a large number of ladies and gentlemen were also present. His Excellency, after distributing the prizes, spoke at length on the success achieved by the school during the past year.

The N.-W. Railway New Time-Table.—On Oct. 16 a new time-table was announced to be introduced on the Lahore-Kurrachee section of the North-Western Railway. The up Calcutta mail will be accelerated by 6½ hours, leaving Lahore at 21.30 as hitherto, but reaching Kurrachee at 10 A.M. instead of 16.30 as at present. This will give Kurrachee a mail delivery in the morning instead of on the evening of the second day. From Lahore also passengers will be enabled to go on board the steamers on the same day. Among other changes, the up Bombay mail, which has hitherto been the first train to Kurrachee, will take 47½ hours from Lahore instead of 36 as at present.

The final tie in the Lord Harris Football Tournament was played on Sept. 30 at Poona between teams from the Lancashire Fusiliers and the Worcestershire Regiment, and resulted in a victory for the former by two goals to one.

During the month of August 7,202,608 lbs. of cotton, worth 13,83,557 rs., were shipped from the Port of Bombay.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphed yesterday (Oct. 18):—

During the past week little change has occurred in the condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma. Rain is holding off in Mandalay and lower Chindwin, and anxiety is felt as to the standing crops in these districts. It has been discovered that the state of affairs in the Myingyan district is much worse than was originally anticipated. The Deputy-Commissioner had reported no distress there. It has, however, been ascertained that distress prevails, and relief works have now been started in Myingyan. The price of rice is unchanged.

The Meiktila and Myingyan Railway will be commenced in about three weeks. The question is being considered whether the starting point should be Samon Station or Meiktila Road Station, on the Mandalay line.

The ex-Tsawbwa of Wuntho continues to trouble the Mansi district. It is hoped that the Tsawbwa will be captured at an early date, some of his followers who were recently taken prisoners having offered to point out his hiding-place.

The Government of India have, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, sanctioned a scheme for the reorganisation of the Lower Burma police. There will be two battalions of Military Police, one of which will have its headquarters at Tounghoo and will consist of 12 companies, composed mainly of Karens. The other battalion, comprising 20 companies and numbering about 2,400 men, will be made up of natives of India, raised mainly from the fighting races of the North-West. It will have its headquarters at Rangoon. These battalions will be administered by adjutants. The Rangoon battalion will be in charge of the Hon. Arthur Hay, late of the Scots Guards, who, as Adjutant of the Military Police in Lower Burma, rendered valuable service and brought his men into a high state of efficiency.

At the annual distribution of prizes at Rangoon College, the Chief Commissioner delivered a long and interesting speech on higher education in Burma, of which the following is a brief summary. After declaring himself a strong advocate for encouraging private enterprise in education and reducing Government interference in management to a minimum, Sir A. Mackenzie explained that the organisation of Rangoon College under the control of an educational syndicate was a compromise between the original wish of the Government of India to develop collegiate classes in connection with existing aided institutions and the proposal to found a distinct Government college. After examining the work done by the college and its attached schools during the past five years, he pronounced the results in the school departments to be satisfactory, these being now almost self-supporting. But the college had succeeded in passing only six Bachelors of Arts, while only twenty-four students had reached the First Arts standard. This had been effected at a cost to the Government of 7,600 rupees per head. Of these only two B.A.'s and one F.A. were Burmese. It had, therefore, manifestly failed to stimulate effectively higher education among the Burmese. Yet nowhere was there greater need for educated natives for the Government service than in Burmah. Nowhere was the personnel of the administrative and ministerial staff so inefficient.

⁴ This failure was, he thought, partly attributable to the national character of the Burmese. Light-hearted and independent, the Burman had the defects of those qualities, and was disposed very often to be casual and conceited. He would not consent to work his way up the ladder by slow degrees, demanding a well-paid post before he was half-qualified. But when he reached a salary sufficient for his modest wants, he ceased doing more work than he was compelled to do in order to keep his appointment. He was wanting in persistent ambition and desire to excel. But the Chief Commissioner attributed this failure mainly to defects in the educational system, which did not rest, as it should, on a sound vernacular basis. Lads were set to learn English like parrots, and their minds were not first properly opened and exercised by education through their own tongue. The Chief Commissioner urged that examinations up to the middle standard should be conducted in the vernacular, with English allowed only as a second language, and even that not too soon. In conclusion, he urged masters to cultivate in boys a healthy ambition and a wholesome spirit of discontent, and gave some sound advice to boys. He specially urged the importance of kindling some corporate life in the institution, pointing out that if the relations of masters and pupils ended with the class-room the college had fulfilled but half its function.

THE EXPEDITIONS into the Chin Hills this cold season are expected to be on a larger scale than hitherto employed, writes the correspondent of the Pioneer from Thyetmyo on Sept. 13. Among native troops, it is expected the 12th Burma and the 32nd Burma and another corps will be utilised, in addition to the troops already on the hills. The commissariat have already commenced to make arrangements. At the instance of the Chief Commissioner, guns and rockets will accompany every column. Whether British troops will also be sent into the hills is doubtful after the experiences of the previous expeditions. The Government intends that the whole of the hills are to be thoroughly traversed this year and that roads are to be constructed wherever possible. There is no doubt that one of the most effectual ways of civilising these savages is to open up communication all over their country. Then we want sound political officers with our troops. The Government sustained a great loss when Captain Rundall left the Chin Hills to return to India with his regiment. He showed himself a master hand in dealing with these Chin savages. This year, as the 12th Burma is going up the hills, the Government could not hit upon a sounder officer for political duty than Lieutenant Rainey, who has already made a name for himself in connection with the Chinbôk expedition of two years ago.

THE DETAILS of the various columns are published in the Rangoon Gazette, which says:—The names of the commanding officers are not yet known, but it is probable that General Wolseley will be in supreme command in the Kachin Hills and Captain O'Donnell will share largely in the operations. Mountain guns and rockets are to be despatched into Chinland and into the Kachin Hills. The Survey Department is making special preparations to map out the country entered, and the topography, the meteorology, the forests and the minerals will all be enquired into and reported on.

SIR ALEXANDER MACKENZIE has just published in the Provincial Gazette his arrangements for the reconstitution of the police force in Upper Burma. Reduction it can hardly be called: for, though great subtractions can be made from the central and southern districts, which are now as peaceable as any part of British India, corresponding additions must be made to the north, north-east and north-west, where the extending administration is coming into closer contact with States and tribes who still have to be taught the lessons of order and subordination. Thus a small increase, the Chief Commissioner says, is required on the Upper Chindwin, for the chain of posts necessary to connect our present positions with Mogaung and Wuntho, and a substantial increase at Katha to dominate the latter State. The Ruby Mines battalion is to be increased from four and a-half to eight companies, since it is in future to have charge of the Momeik State, where a permanent garrison is to be maintained. But the principal increment is to the Bhamo battalion, which is to be raised from fifteen to twenty-two companies, with head-quarters at Bhamo and Mogaung. This increase, Sir A. Mackenzie points out, is absolutely necessary on account of the work that remains to be done in that region—the occupation of the jade and rubber tracts, the administration of the Kachin country, and the security of the trade routes to the Chinese frontier which are now infested by bandits and smugglers. The net result of the reorganisation is the reduction of the Military Police by 16 companies (the number of officers being unchanged), which will just make up the two new local regiments that are to take the place of the Madras Corps to be converted. The Shwebo and Pinyinmana battalions, with two companies from Pokkoko, are the portion selected by the Chief Commissioner for transformation into regulars. No radical change is proposed as to the manner in which the military police will be utilised. A number of changes are also to be made in the civil police, chiefly in matters of drill, discipline, and arms. On the whole, there will be a small increase in their number, which includes provision for Kale and Wuntho.

THE OPENING of through-communication between Assam and Upper Burma will be carried out this cold weather on the Nichugard Kohima-Manipore route, no funds being available for work on the Burma side. The alignment of the road from Tammu to Chindwin, however, has been settled.

A LEASE of the famous Royal wells, at Twingon and Beme, has been granted to the Burma Oil Company, who have also been allowed to commence boring in the Twingon outer circle. The leasing terms of the Yenankyat or Pakokku oil field are not yet settled.

THE Pioneer of Oct. 1 says:—The long looked for rain is at last reported to be falling in Upper Burma, and the prospects of the crops are daily brightening. Meiktila and Yamethin were the two districts in which the scarcity threatened to be most severe, and altogether the outlook in this part of the country was extremely gloomy. But with the coming of the rain, it is hoped to save a portion of the crops; and though the rice is gone almost beyond redemption, the millets and maize may prove sufficient for the sustenance of the population. The next two or three months are bound to be times of great anxiety for the Chief Commissioner and his district officers; but if the present favourable conditions of the season are maintained, the opening of the new year should see all fears of famine entirely dissipated.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

FEMALE EDUCATION is not making large strides in the Punjab judging from the report for last year. The fact is, points out a contemporary, that the general opinion of the country, so far from demanding female education, still rather distrusts it. Until this opinion is changed one cannot anticipate any very great results. It is especially to be regretted that the educated classes of the community generally show little or no desire for the education of their wives and daughters. The Municipal bodies, too, with the honourable exceptions of Gujranwala and Amritsar, are said to be apathetic, if not obstructive, in the cause.

THE CHOLERA mortality in the North-West Provinces, which reached the figure of 34,453 deaths in June, fell in July to 32,018, still a very high total.

THE Pioneer correspondent writes from Ajmere (Sept. 24):—Our ordinarily quiet and peaceful district has for the last week or so been in a wild state of agitation and ferment. All the officials have their hands more than full. Chuprassis and orderlies cross and recross with messages in all directions. Gangs of prisoners under escort may be seen on the roads. The cause of the excitement is this: bands of robbers, immigrants from outlying districts, reinforced by famine-stricken villagers, have been looting villages and plundering the bunniahs' well-stocked godowns. Everything is being done to check these riots, but the police force is very inadequate—the mounted police especially—and a village can be plundered before the police which have been engaged in quieting a disturbance elsewhere can be on the spot. As soon as feasible the local militia were called out, and guards of the Merwara Battalion have been ordered to the principal villages, but also in this respect great difficulties are experienced owing to scarcity of fodder and water. Up to date, more than a dozen villages have been looted, but it is to be hoped that with the strong measures now taken the riots will come to a speedy end. At the bottom of all the trouble is, as usual, the bunniah.

A RIOT, which might have ended more seriously, occurred at Almorah on Sunday morning, Sept. 20. It appears that the friends of a young native, taking umbrage at his recent conversion and baptism, attended by a sympathising crowd, entered the American Mission Chapel while service was being held. There was a full congregation, including some ladies, who shut themselves into the building, while the missionaries went out and endeavoured to pacify the incensed relatives and friends of the convert. One of the missionaries was somewhat severely handled by the mob, his coat being torn off his back. The arrival of Colonel Reade and Mr. Shaw, the Deputy-Magistrate, on the spot, soon put an end to the riotous behaviour of the crowd, and the leaders have been arrested.

THE OODEYPORE DURBAR propose making a railway from Chitor to Oodeypore, and surveys are in progress. The Durbar will in all probability provide funds for the construction of the line.

IT HAS been decided that one of the two Judicial Commissioners for Oude may be selected from among the duly qualified members of the local bar—the qualification to include a competent knowledge of the vernacular.

HYDERABAD.

CAPTAIN BEAUCLERK, the secretary of the Sir Salar Jung estates, who proceeded to Poona in August as President of the Congress held there on industrial matters, speaks highly of the interest in the subject developed in the minds of those present, and suggests that in Hyderabad there is even a better field for such a mission as that of industrial development than there is in Poona. The wealthy and enlightened middle class of his Highness' capital would be the natural patrons of local arts, and might find useful and profitable employment for their sons in local industries. His Highness' Government has for some time had before it a suggestion by the Revenue Secretary, Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, Bahadur, to appoint a commission to inquire into the subject of technical education and industrial enterprise generally in the Nizam's dominions. The bad season has no doubt postponed all projects not immediately fruitful of good, but so acute is becoming the question of finding provision for the people in other walks than agriculture, that in these dominions the industrial survey of the conference is only a matter of time. In the state of Hyderabad the difficulties will be lessened by the objects to be attained being better defined, and the facts to be reviewed enclosed in a smaller and more manageable compass. It is certain that the report of a Commission on the industrial progress of the dominions, and on the availability of capital and labour for new enterprises, would awaken great interest in this State. A local exhibition, according to the Pioneer, is by no means an impossibility. The nobles here would, no doubt, give every assistance, if Sir Asman Jah, the most enlightened of modern native statesmen, really takes up the subject in downright earnest.

HIS Highness of Nizam has had rather a severe attack of fever, but under the able and skilful treatment of Surgeon-Major Edward Lawrie he was, on Sept. 27, much better.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE Times of Oct. 16 contained the following telegram from St. Petersburg (Oct. 15):—

Not long ago reports reached St. Petersburg that in the month of August attacks were made upon the dwellings of Russian subjects in Russia's Central Asian province of Ferghana, formerly Khokand, by bands of foreign marauders from the neighbouring countries. This news is now confirmed by a newspaper published at Samarcand called the Okraina, which contains a letter on the subject from Marghilan, the chief town of the old Khanate of Khokand. From this it appears that on the occasion of one of the attacks in question a wealthy inhabitant of the district named Aba Khotschin was robbed of 87,000 roubles, and had one of his sons killed and another wounded. The local authorities proceeded to take energetic measures to secure the marauders, but whether they succeeded or not is apparently unknown. The curious, and to some extent perhaps important, feature of this piece of news is the political colouring which is given to it. Simultaneously with the appearance of these foreign marauders the report was spread that in the autumn a relative of the former Khan Khudayar of Khokand, who was deposed by the Russians, would make his appearance from Badakshan with a numerous body of troops, and execute a raid through Ferghana in order to drive out the Russians. On this subject exciting proclamations are said to have been already distributed among the inhabitants. The correspondent at Marghilan continues thus:—

"Ferghana and the neighbouring countries are in a state of ferment. It is everywhere declared that Englishmen are the instigators of the trouble. An Englishman, apparently a spy, with a reconnoitring detachment, has been arrested in the Pamir. Sooner or later a conflict must occur. The only means of putting an end to the evil state of things which hinders the development of Ferghana would be to incorporate the adjacent Khanate. It is said that some of the inhabitants have already, on their own initiative, sent messengers to the Governor of Ferghana, praying to be taken under the protection of Russia. The answer they received is not yet known."

Supposing the above representation to be a genuine one, we must be prepared to hear of the incorporation probably of certain of the Kashgar frontier districts. If the countries on the frontier are in a state of ferment and the people are expressing a wish to belong to Russia, it shows that Russians and not Englishmen have been at work there. The capture of Merv will be remembered. I had the privilege of announcing in the Times the Russian decision to take Merv nearly two months in advance of the fact, and not the least notice was taken of the news in England, which was strange, considering the great concern for the independence of that place expressed during so many years previously. Then the chiefs of the Mervli-Turcomans presented their long parchment petition dictated, and in fact drawn up, by Russians, praying General Komaroff to persuade the Czar to accept their allegiance, and the refractory Turcomans were forced to surrender in a skirmish on the Russian march into Merv. History repeats itself in Russian Central Asia more than anywhere else.

A telegram from Reuter's Bombay agency (Oct. 16) states:—No steps will be taken by the British or Indian Governments in regard to the Pamir Question pending the return of Captain Younghusband, as it is desired to obtain from that officer fuller information upon the real state of affairs in the region of the Pamirs. The report current in St. Petersburg, that the matter would be settled by a Delimitation Commission, composed of delegates of the four countries interested, and that these delegates would shortly start on their mission, is certainly premature, as no proposition of this kind has yet been put forward.

Disquieting reports continue to be received at Peking with regard to the proceedings of the Russian expedition to the Pamir, says a Reuter telegram from Peking (Oct. 18), and the new Governor of Sin Kiang, or the New Dominion (Chinese Turkestan), who is now on his way to his post, has been ordered to lose no time in reaching Kashgar. Meanwhile the Chinese Minister at St. Petersburg has been instructed to ask the Russian Government for explanations regarding the presence of a Russian force in Chinese territory.

The journal Svet (Oct. 16) complains of the depredations carried on by marauders in the Russian province of Ferghana, and declares that they are encouraged by the neighbouring Khanates, including Badakshan. In the latter country, the journal states, a relative of the former Khan of Khokand is inciting the people to invade Ferghana and massacre the Russians. The Svet believes that sooner or later serious conflicts must occur in that region, and that, in order to secure tranquillity in Ferghana, it will become necessary to incorporate the neighbouring Khanates with Russia.

The Times correspondent writes from St. Petersburg (Oct. 18):—"To-day's Novoe Vremya publishes an important article on the Pamir question, confirming the account of the Russian view of the case which I telegraphed to the Times more than a week ago. The article states that since the invasion of Khokand in 1878 the Pamir question has remained an open one. Owing to the fact that the Pamir is surrounded by a number of small khanates, the southern frontier of the Russian Empire remained undefined. In the course of the last fifteen years three States have laid claim to the Pamir—Russia, Afghanistan, and China. In 1883 the Ameer Abdurrahman Khan invaded Badakshan, and the Governor appointed by him occupied the two small khanates of Shugnan and Roshan, in the Southern Pamir. During the Anglo-Russian negotiations it was made clear that the Ameer could not justify his claim either to Badakshan or the smaller khanates.

"China, on the other hand, after having dethroned Yakoob Beg in Kashgar and incorporated that territory, advanced on the Pamir from the west. As a consequence, when in 1883 the expedition of General Medinski entered the Pamir, they found the Chinese commanders already in possession, while Captain Gromchevsky found them in the valley of the Ak Su in the Little Pamir, as well as at the sources of the Murghab and Alikur. On the south the English advanced towards the Pamir, and, after having destroyed the independence of Cashmere, they extended their influence further north to the khanates of Shatrar, Yassin, and Kanshut, where English garrisons are now established. Thus English and Russian travellers came into contact. The circumstance that the expeditions on both sides consisted of military men caused foreign journals to publish reports of a conflict between English and Russian outposts in the Pamir. The time has apparently now come to determine the Russian frontier of the Pamir in a decisive manner."

One of the scientific emissaries of the Imperial Geographical Society, M. Katanoff, has written home saying that he is at present at Tchugotchkak, awaiting permission from Peking to proceed into the interior. He expects to return to Russia at the end of a year.

A telegram to a Bombay paper from Allahabad, dated Sept. 27, says:—No further news has been received regarding affairs on the Pamirs. The Russians can be readily proved to have no right to annex up to the Hindoo Kush, for in 1873 General Kaufmann, Governor of Turkistan, reported that the Chinese frontier extended westwards to Wakhan, in the eastern portion of which Victoria Lake lies, and this was accepted at St. Petersburg at the time as being an accurate definition of the boundaries, and nothing has happened since to alter its validity. The Russians are now reported to be collecting stores and erecting quarters for troops at Shikh Junid on the Kushk River, some fifty miles south of Penjdeh, and eighty north of Herat. They have also increased the strength of the garrison of Yulatan, south of Merv.

In military opinion, says a Simla correspondent (Oct. 1), the Pamirs are of little strategical value, and Government is believed to be disinclined to take any decided steps to counteract the Russian advance beyond the Alai Range. If the Ameer resents the intrusion of Russia in Wakhan, he will doubtless be advised to adapt his attitude to the requirements of our Imperial policy. Independent and hostile action on the part of Afghanistan might complicate matters, and until it is known that the Ameer is willing to forgo his claims to Wakhan, the situation will be regarded as somewhat serious.

It seems only too probable that the Russians are bent upon reviving the question of the boundaries of Afghanistan on the Upper Oxus, says the Pioneer, with a view no doubt of asserting their right to place outposts on that portion of the Hindu Kush which their exploring parties have lately been visiting. Captain Gromchevsky failed last year to penetrate through Afghan territory to Kafiristan, and his attempted journey to Badakshan was summarily checked. This summer he moved further eastwards, and crossing the Alichur Pamir, managed to get his advanced detachments well on to the Hindu Kush. The local Chinese authorities could not stop well-armed men, bent upon going forward; and as the Ameer of Cabul has no posts east of Sachad on the Oxus, the intruders had a perfectly easy game to play. In the No-man's Land east of Wood's Lake the Russians can apparently do just as they please, as the Chinese at Yarkand have neglected to push their frontier right up to the borders of Afghan territory. The country which thus lies open is a high plateau intersected by great mountain chains; it is covered for many months in the year with snow, and the only people who frequent it are nomads with their herds in the late spring and summer. The Kanjutis from the south raid upon the Pamirs from time to time in search of slaves; stray travellers visit them for sport and adventure; but not until this year have these wastes been traversed by the soldiers of a European Power. Russia from her secure position in Central Asia can send exploring or filibustering parties on to "the Roof of the World" without anyone being the wiser: it is only when they actually reach the Hindu Kush passes, as was the case last month, that news reaches India of their movements. From the Oxus at Khamiab to the Khorasan border in the neighbourhood of Pul-i-Khatun the northern frontier of Afghanistan is clearly marked out by the boundary pillars which remain as the outward and visible sign of the International Boundary Commission of seven years ago. From Khamiab to Wood's Lake the Oxus is recognised in a way as the Afghan boundary, though in 1873, when Earl Granville came to an understanding with the St. Petersburg authorities on this matter, the course of the river was not accurately known to geographers. It is owing to this fact that the Amir's ascendancy over Shignan and Roshan gives such offence to Russia, who is doubtless now collecting data with a view to making mischief in this direction hereafter. Eastwards beyond Wood's Lake there is the debateable ground we have already referred to, and it is here that the first signs of Russian activity have been given. Their further development will have to be carefully watched.

The following paragraphs are from the Civil and Military Gazette:—

"A Cabul correspondent repeats the statement to which we have before referred, that it is the Ameer's wish, if possible, to go to England on a visit to Her Majesty Queen, without seeing the Viceroy of India. If this is a correct representation of His Highness' desires, it may be taken to show that Lord Lansdowne's advice to him concerning the atrocity of his punishment of Ishak Khan's captured adherents still rankles.

"Before, however, visiting England, the Ameer, having evidently taken to heart the comments which have been made in India of his system of government, appears to have made up his mind to whitewash his administration as liberally as circumstances allow, in order that it may make a presentable appearance before the civilised world. He has directed, we are told, Yais-ud-din-Khan, his caravan agent, to summon together all the chief merchants and traders of Cabul and ascertain their grievances.

"Another attempt at whitewashing the administration which is reported is the effort which has been going on for some time to compel all the people to take oaths of allegiance and express confidence in the justness and benignness of his rule. Armed with a plebiscite from the whole Afghan people, his Highness will be in a position to demonstrate that any more troublesome suggestions from Lord Lansdowne about the way he should govern his kingdom are entirely unnecessary, not to say impertinent. Consequently every clan or community in Cabul is alleged to have been separately sworn on the Koran and bound down to be devoted to the rule of his Highness. The common folk were ordered to assemble in the great Jumma Musjid on a Friday and Sunday for swearing. The doors of the mosque were closed to prevent egress till the process was complete, and as there was no accommodation beyond standing room for the people in the mosque, incidents occurred which aroused the fury of the Faithful, and several poor wretches were fined 200 rs. for desecrating the holy temple. The result of the proceedings generally was to unsettle the city, and cause active discussion as to probability of a jihad, and the pros and cons. of the Ameer's projected visit to India and England. There was a whisper, too, that all this tamasha only foreboded some new device of general taxation of the people.

"Even our correspondent declares that he is puzzled to explain the fuss which the Ameer is making in getting these oaths of allegiance, because it is not as if the Ameer had never before left Afghanistan to visit India, and there are other circumstances which give colour to conflicting rumours, for the utterances, notifications, and sermons of the Ameer's officials—military, political, and ecclesiastical—are considerably mixed in character. They (1) preach the benefits which the Afghans have derived from the Ameer's rule; (2) explain the advantages to be expected from his Highness' intended visit to India; (3) recall the sufferings of the people during the temporary rule of the Feringhis (Kaffirs) in Cabul ten years ago; and (4) point out the duty and necessity of being ready to fight to the death against Kaffir rule."

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been published since our last issue:—

SINGAPORE, Oct. 13 (Times).—Advices from Shanghai, dated the 3rd inst., state that all is quiet with the exception of a small local disturbance in Fukien. According to Shanghai reports, the foreign Ministers have broken off negotiations, and have announced that their Governments must act. Viceroy Li's Northern Squadron is coming in detachments from Port Arthur, but only two vessels have arrived. The Chamber of Commerce at Hong Kong has complained to the British Minister that on the produce exported in native craft at Canton, the local Customs levy lower duties than on the produce shipped in foreign vessels, which come under the Imperial Maritime Customs. This inequality diverts trade from the British local steamers, and is considered a breach of the treaty.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 13 (Times, Dalziel).—Viceroy Li has stated in answer to inquiries that he does not regard the situation as serious.

The Chinese Government is unable to control the population in Hunan, where there has lately been a riot, during which the Prefect was killed by the mob.

The Government at Peking are deeply wounded by the unfriendly attitude of Germany.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 14 (Dalziel).—The Japan Mail received here by the steamer Empress of India publishes a despatch from Shanghai under date of Sept. 19, which says:—"The details of the Ichang riot thus far received show that it was not the work of an ignorant mob, but an attack planned and carried out by a few soldiers under the command of the very mandarin whose duty it was to protect foreigners at Ichang. Other officials to whom foreigners looked for safety were among the rioters, and pretended to be unable to control the mob. The mission premises inside the city were open, and patients were being treated at the dispensary at the very time the soldiers were burning the foreign buildings. Although every unofficial foreign building was burned, the British Consulate was unharmed. The water was so low at the port that her Majesty's ship Swift and the French cruiser Ospic were unable to reach Ichang."

PARIS, Oct. 14.—According to authentic information no intelligence has been received from China confirming the report lately current at Shanghai that the Foreign Ministers at Peking had broken off negotiations with the Chinese Government. In diplomatic quarters the rumour is not credited.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 15 (Reuter).—With reference to the statements recently published in London, it is untrue that any rupture occurred between the foreign representatives at Peking and the Chinese Government, though the former express their dissatisfaction at the measures taken by the Chinese Government for the protection of foreigners at the treaty ports. Since the Ichang incident no fresh disturbance has occurred or even been threatened at any of the ports on the Yang-tse-Kiang. In order to prevent a diplomatic scandal, the Chinese Government has consented to pay the loans fraudulently contracted in the name of the Government by a former member of the Imperial Legation in Paris.

The New York Herald has received the following despatch from its correspondent at Shanghai, Oct. 15:—Germany has entered into the agreement of the Powers against China. Gross deception has been practised at Peking in the hope that Germany would again refuse to enter the combination on the strength of her wish to sustain the position she has tacitly held all along with the Tsung-li-Yamén against European diplomacy. Recently the German Minister, the doyen of the Diplomatic Corps at Peking, compromised the dignity of his colleagues in the matter of an audience for the purpose of securing Chinese favours and concessions for public works and railways inaugurated at Kaiping, near Tientsin. He appeared to act for the agency of the ironworks conducted by the Krupp firm of Essen, seeking for a monopoly in the furnishing of rails and guns. It is reported to-day that the old official friendship between Germany and China is a thing of the past. Minister Brandt also demands indemnity for the outrages against foreigners, as he has now realised the colossal deception of the Chinese. A Tientsin message says that the French Minister, M. Lemaire, has returned to his post at Peking, and confirms the unanimous agreement of the foreign Powers. Many warships have arrived at Shanghai. Rumours are abroad that the insurgents are to set fire to the European quarter to-morrow. To-day all is quiet. A British subject named Mason, leagued with Kolahui, will be tried at the assizes next week on the charge of transporting contraband arms and dynamite, consigned to and intended for the insurgents. The situation remains serious."

The North China Herald (Sept. 11) says:—The foreign Powers have, we may presume, come to the only possible decision, which the Ichang affair must have confirmed, that Hunan must be overawed. A demonstration of strength must be made, and made promptly, and a force of bluejackets should be sent to Ichang in a merchant steamer, if a gunboat cannot get up. Hunan has to be repressed or to be allowed to have its way, and this means perhaps the expulsion of foreigners from every place on the river and in the interior, where they are not protected by men-of-war. That obviously the foreign Powers cannot allow. The central government cannot control Hunan, for it has Hunan officials everywhere—the Viceroy here, the Taotai and the Magistrate are all Hunan men—and the troops everywhere are Hunan men, except Li Hung-Chang's disciplined force. To order Li Hung-Chang to repress Hunan with his Anhui men is to start a civil war in China, and possibly to raise the Chung-t'ang to pre-eminence undesirable on many grounds. The situation is very critical and very difficult, and the only solution apparent at the moment is that Hunan shall be overawed by a foreign force, acting with the tacit connivance of the central government, which will have to save its "face" by formal protests. The Tsungli Yamén will no doubt resort, as it did in the Franco-Chinese trouble, to Sir Robert Hart to get it out of the mess in which it now is, and he may be able to suggest some other solution: but it seems to us that there will be no security for foreign life and property in mid-China, unless the rebellious Hunanese are constrained by force. If force is not used, the Hunanese will persuade themselves that they have been victorious over their own government and the hated foreigners. M. Lemaire, charged with the latest views of the Home Cabinets, will be here next week, and as soon as he arrives at Peking, the present state of quiet should be broken up: prompt action is necessary, and our Ministers should notice that it was the presence in the port of Ichang of the Paohua, not the interference of the officials, that alone prevented the riot there of Sept. 2 having as tragic scenes in it as that of Wusueh, or even as that at Tientsin in 1870.

M. de Lanessan, Governor-General of Indo-China, has telegraphed to the French Colonial Department that, having accomplished his tour of inspection in the Delta, he is able to state that the situation of Tonquin was never before so good, and that the Delta might be considered as pacified, and its tranquillity as secure for the future. M. de Lanessan describes the Annamite authorities as co-operating everywhere in the organisation of the police; and he adds, as a proof of the goodwill of the Annamite Government, that two out of the five Regents of Annam had left Hué to pay him a visit at Hanoi.

A letter from Shanghai, received by the New York Times by telegraph from San Francisco (says Reuter), reports that a number of French officers and privates have been killed by pirates in Annam.

Advices from Hanoi state that a continuous warfare is going on between the French troops and large gangs of pirates. A detachment of soldiers charged with the protection of a party who were constructing a station at Don Son was surprised by Chinese robber bands, who fired at the French, killing or wounding thirteen of them, including M. Levecq, who was in charge of the party. The Chinamen afterwards beheaded M. Levecq and seven of his men. The French gunboat Avalanche, which was moored off Don Son, fired two shots into the village of Yen Lang, where the pirates were in ambush. Four pirates were subsequently executed at Bay Say. They met their death with the most absolute indifference.

The Standard correspondent telegraphs from Bangkok, Oct. 15:—The tenders received by the Siamese Government for the construction of the proposed Rarat Railway have been opened to-day. Some German firms have been very anxious to secure the contract; but Messrs. Murray, Campbell and Co., of Singapore, in their tender, offer to build the line for two hundred thousand pounds less than is asked by the German syndicate.

The Times correspondent at Singapore telegraphs on Oct. 15:—The Governor, Sir C. Clementi Smith, on opening the Council to-day, said that the reserve balances of the Straits Settlements had nearly all been realised to pay the military contribution. The revenue, he stated, had fallen. The deficit for the present year was $850,000, and next year would show an estimated deficit of $190,000. The prosecution of public works would be suspended, and the schemes for the regulation of the coolie traffic would be stopped. Nothing, in fact, could be done until it was known whether the Home Government would reconsider the military contribution. If not, the colony would be obliged to raise a loan. The Malay Native States were improving, but the colony could lend them no more money. The Governor also announced that a Bill would be introduced to amend the banishment ordinance, which was recently much criticised.

The Recent Government Resolution on the Income-Tax.

A deputation from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce waited on Sept. 28 on the Lieutenant-Governor at Darjeeling on the subject of the recent Income-tax Resolution. Mr. Mackay, President of the Chamber of Commerce, headed the deputation, and made special reference to the statement in the Resolution that mercantile classes kept fictitious accounts, which had created a painful impression among the mercantile community, and to the publishing of facts which gave a clue to the incomes of individuals. The Lieutenant-Governor, in replying, said that the Resolution was carelessly worded, and there was no intention in the first paragraph complained of to refer to firms which kept regular books. As to publishing the earnings of certain classes, the figures were published annually by the Board of Revenue, but it now appeared there was an objection to publishing figures among a limited community, and in future they would be treated as confidential.

THE "BANGABASI" CASE.

THE Times of India says:—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has been permitted by the Government of India to withdraw the prosecution against the Bangabasi newspaper. The proprietor, editor, manager, and printer of the paper have sent in a petition expressing their deep and heartfelt sorrow for having allowed the articles which were the subject of the recent prosecution to appear in the columns of the Bangabasi, and have thrown themselves unreservedly on the mercy of the Lieutenant-Governor. This petition they undertake to publish in their paper. Their petition has been supported by the newly-formed Native Press Association, who in their turn express regret at the language used in the articles in question, and also by the British Indian Association, who also condemn the tone and language of the incriminated articles. The prosecution has evidently had some effect, and under the circumstances it is perhaps as well that the charge should be withdrawn. Both the Government of Bengal and the Government of India agree in thinking that the late trial, abortive though it proved—"owing to what might be described as an accident"—has established the sufficiency of the law as it stands, and that after the Chief Justice's interpretation of Section 124 (a) of the Indian Penal Code, every editor who in future admits a seditious article inciting his readers to feelings of disaffection against the Government will know that he is committing a breach of the law "as laid down by the highest authority in Bengal," and "will hardly hope to escape punishment through the chance that the jury may disagree, and that the judge may again decline to be governed by the verdict of the majority." We are not quite so sure of this as these two high authorities, for we fancy that in special cases jurymen will continue to differ and judges continue to act on independent lines. However, the men connected with the Bangabasi would hardly have confessed the errors of their ways so fully and humbly as they have done unless they felt absolutely sure that in a second trial they would have been punished under section 124 (a). Section 124 (a) now becomes the most powerful instrument in the Indian press laws, and the Government of India are convinced "beyond a doubt" that the existing law is strong enough to punish any native journalist who endeavours to excite feelings of enmity and ill-will against the Government. The prosecution of the Bangabasi was not particularly well-judged, and "the accident" of its failure was rather awkward for the Government. The next case of the same nature will no doubt be better prepared, but even then much interest will certainly be felt as to the practical working of section 124 (a). The Government can afford to be magnanimous in this special case, and it is a relief to all connected with journalism to learn that no further press legislation is either contemplated or necessary. Section 124 (a) has been a dead letter since its introduction into the Indian Penal Code in 1870. It is to be a dead letter no longer, that is the real upshot of the famous Bangabasi case. At the same time the Government of India take the opportunity of declaring that "neither now nor in the future has honest and independent criticism, however mistaken or even hostile to Government measures, or the action of public officers, anything to fear from the law, so long as it is put forward in good faith, and does not attempt to stir up hatred of the Government, or attack its inherent characteristics." Criticism, so far as it is well-informed, will be welcomed as "a valuable auxiliary in the good administration of the country." This is well said, but, on the other hand, we trust that sedition and enmity, gross personal attacks on individual officials, and obscene libels on our countrywomen will be vigorously prosecuted wherever they appear.

Alluding to the case, the Pioneer is of opinion that under the circumstances it is no wonder that the Government of Bengal should have been glad to close the case with a pardon, or that the Government of India, when this course was submitted to them, should have readily fallen in with it. The Englishman thinks that the Government and the native press should have equal cause for satisfaction in the issue of the Bangabasi prosecution. From the point of view of the former, the trial, although without definite result, has been satisfactory in this sense, that it has disposed of certain mistaken readings of the Penal Code. It has shown to what extent the existing law is adequate to cope with the offence of exciting or attempting to excite disaffection. There has long been a doubt in the minds of those best qualified to judge whether the wording of the now famous section 124 (a) was sufficient to meet the cases against which it was obviously framed. In view of the Chief Justice's charge to the jury, there can now be little question on this point. So far as the Native Press is concerned, the effect of the prosecution promises to be in every sense beneficial. It will be impossible henceforth for the most rabid and perverse of native journalists to misunderstand the vital difference between bona fide criticism and seditious libel. There has been, in fact, a general clearing away of cobwebs, and both parties are now aware of their respective powers and responsibilities. The lesson to be learned by the Native Press is not, after all, a difficult one. In instituting the recent proceedings Government had no intention whatever of restricting the legitimate scope of the Bengali newspaper. "Neither now nor in the future," it is asserted, "has honest and independent criticism, however mistaken or even hostile, of Government measures or the action of public officers, anything to fear from the law, so long as it is put forward in good faith, and does not attempt to stir up hatred of the Government or attack its inherent characteristics. So far as it is well informed such criticism is welcomed by the Government of India as a valuable auxiliary in the good administration of the country." This assurance is in itself a sufficient reply to the charge which has been put forward in some quarters that Government has any intention of restricting the liberty of the press in India.

The following is the letter addressed by the President of the Native Press Association, to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal:—

SIR,—The editor and the proprietor of the Bangabasi newspaper have sent to the Committee of this Association, a copy of a petition, which they have presented to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, in respect to the criminal prosecution now pending against them in the High Court of Calcutta, and they have asked the members of this Association to support the prayer of their petition.

The Native Press Association is of recent formation. It came into existence after the institution of the present criminal proceedings against the editor and the proprietor of the Bangabasi newspaper, and the object of the Association, to quote the words of the resolution under which it was formed, was "to profess, maintain, and further by all legitimate means the lawful interests of the native press, and to improve its tone and status; and to preserve moderation in the discussion of all public questions, and to take all such measures as might be necessary to enable the native press to fulfil the important functions which belong to it, as the educator of the people, the exponent of public opinion, and the faithful interpreter between the rulers and the ruled."

The members of the Press Association at present consist of the editors and the proprietors of the following papers:—The Hindoo Patriot, Amrita Bazar Patrika, Bengalee, Indian Christian Herald, Unity and Minister, Hope, National Guardian, National Paper, Indian Public Opinion, Indian Messenger, Bangabasi, Dainik, Sanjibani, Samaya, Somaprakash, Sambad Pravakasi, Hitaladi, Sahachar, Vedayasi, Bharat Mitra, Uchit Bakia, and Hindi Bangabasi.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor will perceive from the above list that this Association represents nearly all the most important Native newspapers published in Bengal; and the Association is, therefore, deeply interested in any prosecution which affects any member of this body. The Association does not desire to discuss the merits of the present prosecution. In instituting the prosecution the Government was influenced no doubt by considerations of what it thought was due to public interests. That being so, the Association has little hesitation, considering all circumstances, in saying that the objects of the prosecution have now been attained.

The editor and the proprietor of the Bangabasi newspaper in their petition to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor have frankly admitted that the language used in the articles, which formed the subject of the criminal prosecution, was "intemperate, disrespectful, and unjustifiable," and laid them open, however unintentionally, to the charge of attempting to excite disaffection to the Government. They have now unreservedly disclaimed any such intention, and have expressed their deep sorrow and regret that they should have been betrayed into the use of such intemperate language.

The members of the Press Association equally regret the use of such language, and a disclaimer having now been made of any intention to excite disaffection, the Press Association have ventured to approach His Honour with the respectful recommendation that he will be pleased to accept the humble submission now made by the editor and the proprietor of the Bangabasi newspaper, and direct that further proceedings in the present prosecution should be stayed.

The Press Association firmly believe that this act of lenity will be deeply appreciated by the community generally, and is sure to exert a wholesome influence on the tone of the press.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant Rajkumar Sarvadhikari, President, Native Press Association.

Rules in Connection with the Existing Famine Codes.

The Government of India has proposed certain rules in connection with the existing famine codes for the improvement of the system of reporting under the Departments of Land Records and Agriculture; the reporting, in normal times, of prices, rainfall, state of the crops, &c., from which the approach of scarcity and distress is to be detected and will be improved. The Government of India demands only that the special departments shall examine and report upon the efficiency of working the machinery, not that the departments should take the work from the district officers, even in the menaced districts, the Local Governments having the option of calling upon the Agricultural Department for special inquiries with regard to the high prices of staple food or grains. The Madras Government suggested that an explanation be submitted by district officers wherever there is a 25 per cent. increase, but the Government of India are disposed to prefer the 20 per cent. adopted in Bombay. The point is left, however, to Local Governments.

Kalianpur and the Trigonometrical Survey.—Kalianpur is a small deserted village of no political importance, situated in the territories of the Nawab of Tonk, within three miles of the large city of Sironj. And yet it has been one of the most useful villages in India, for it is this point which forms the pivot on which the whole triangulation of the great Trigonometrical Survey of India has been hung. Kalianpur lies near the centre of the Continent at the junction of the two most important series of triangulation in India; the great Arc which follows the Meridian of 78° from Cape Comorin to the Himalayas, and the great longitudinal series that runs from Kurrachee to Calcutta. In 1840 Colonel Everest discovered the village, and to him the selection is due.

THE INDIAN MAIL ROUTE.

A BELGRADE telegram through Reuter's agency says:—With regard to the adoption of the Salonica route for the Indian and Australian mails, it is understood that, although its practicability is being seriously considered by the British Post Office, the matter at present is only in the inquiry stage. In any case it would appear certain that the British authorities are desirous of effecting a saving by the proposed new route, both as regards the time and cost of transit, and its adoption would depend on the greater advantage to be secured in these respects over the Brindisi route. The British Government would expect Serbia to carry the mails across her territory at cost price in consideration of the advantages accruing from the passenger and other traffic. Should the new route be adopted, the mails would be conveyed by steamer from Salonica to Port Said, and not to Alexandria. The British authorities are at present in negotiation with the six different countries concerned, and some time must therefore elapse before a definite decision is arrived at. The question of brigandage will naturally receive serious consideration, but is not expected to offer difficulties rendering the proposed route impracticable.

A Dalziel telegram from Rome, dated Oct. 18, states that the Italian Government have decided to urge the Italian railway company to improve their line and rolling stock, increase their rate of speed, and take the train right on to the pier at Brindisi. The Ministry will undertake to repair the harbour of Brindisi and improve the lights on the coast. With these improvements the Italian Government believe that England will certainly continue to use the Brindisi route to India.

The Paris correspondent of the Times writes on Oct. 18:—With a view to the Calais and Chalons route to Vienna being adopted if the Indian mail is despatched by Salonica, a train of eighteen carriages went from Paris to Calais on Friday in 3 h. 35 min.

Forest Administration.—Mr. Ribbentrop, Inspector-General of Forests, has issued his review of the Forest Administration and working of the department during the year 1889-90. It may be broadly summarised as follows:—The total area of forest estates under control was increased during the year by 4,254 square miles, of which 2,909 are either reserved or protected forests. The total area of forest lands on the books of the department at the close of the year amounted to 105,445 square miles, and of this 85,890 are managed under Forest Acts and Regulations. Fire protection was successful over 22,244 square miles of forests, principally reserves, and the area of 49,253 acres was planted or sown with forest species. 2,83,829 rs. were spent on buildings or lines of export for material in connection with the improvement of forests. Timber and fuel amounting to 153,168,882 cubic feet were removed from the forests during the year. Minor produce, at the gross value of 33,66,804 rs., was also extracted. The gross revenue for the year was 1,53,03,572 rs., and the expenditure 80,12,518 rs. The surplus amounted to 72,91,054 rs., as against 57,68,690 of the previous year.

LONDON: MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1891.

RAILWAY CONNECTION BETWEEN BURMA AND CHINA.

THE Glasgow Chamber of Commerce is moving in the matter of the Burma-China Railway. It has been decided to present the following petition to the SECRETARY OF STATE:—

This Chamber is impressed with the urgent need for the speedy construction of a railway in continuation of the present line from Mandalay towards the province of Yunnan in China. Such a line of railway would, in the opinion of this Chamber, be an important trade route, establishing communication between Burma and a very vast, rich, and populous district of China. It would also open up extensive trade between the United Kingdom and the north-eastern portion of Burma, as well as between the United Kingdom and the above-mentioned district of China. As to the importance of such a line to the general opening, settlement, and development of Upper Burma, your petitioners believe there is generally a very strong opinion entertained in commercial circles. This Chamber, therefore, expresses the earnest hope that no further delay will be allowed to interfere with the final survey and alignment of the railway above indicated. Further, that as soon as the best route is ascertained, the Government will sanction the construction of the line with the least possible delay.

In 1890 a reconnaissance was made with the view of finding the best line for connecting the Mandalay-Rangoon Railway with the Shan States and the Chinese frontiers. The report of the engineer who conducted this preliminary survey was published, and it might have been expected that, as the line was shown to be practicable at a moderate cost, a regular survey would have been instituted. The Government of India, however, suddenly lost all interest in the matter, called away the officer who had been employed on this duty to other work, and postponed sine die the duty of opening up the Shan States and the country beyond them to British trade. Now that Upper Burma has been annexed, the conditions have changed under which attention was directed to the scheme so ably advocated by MESSRS. COLQUHOUN and HALLETT. We have now possession of the country lying between Burma and China. It is necessary for administrative and strategic reasons to have speedy and cheap communication with the Shan States and the country beyond. And it is a matter of the first importance to the progress of our trade to have the work done as quickly as possible. What hope is there that anything will be done within any reasonable time? It is to be feared there is very little hope. It will be said that the best line has not yet been ascertained; and nothing will be done to ascertain it, lest this excellent reason for not commencing work should be removed. The chambers of commerce are ready enough to resolute; but the beginning and end of their energy are their resolutions for which no one cares a farthing. So the time goes on. A valuable field remains closed, if it is not lost or handed over to a more energetic rival.

The Government of India, it may be, has enough on its hands already, and does not care to undertake another large enterprise. Perhaps, if a company were formed for the construction of this line, LORD CROSS might be induced to look favourably upon it and give it conditions similar to those granted to the Assam-Chittagong line. It is more than probable that the Burma-China line will pay a dividend sooner than the Assam Railway. It will have certainly a much larger field for extension, and a much grander country to draw upon and to feed. And it will probably be much less costly to construct. The subject is commended to men of enterprise and capital. There could be no grander project for British money and British enterprise to undertake.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

BEFORE rushing into a war on the strength of our preparedness, as to which "Y" professes to be a judge, prudent men will consider whether the Indian Army as a whole is such a grand weapon for encountering a European foe as "Y" would have us believe. It is worth noting that on Sept. 10 at Simla the Commander-in-Chief presided at a lecture given by LIEUTENANT-COLONEL YOUNG, assistant quartermaster-general, on the reorganisation of the native infantry. SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS evidently thinks highly of COLONEL YOUNG's judgment and capacity. He did not express any definite opinion on several of the points raised in the lecture. He said, however, that it was his belief that any reorganisation of the native infantry which may eventually be decided on, will be to a great extent on the lines of COLONEL YOUNG's lecture. Now, the main point in COLONEL YOUNG's scheme is the increase of the number of British officers in the native infantry regiments. He says that we have now to organise the native infantry so as to enable them to meet European troops on a modern battlefield. He shows that the company must be the tactical unit in modern warfare. And he says, with all the earnestness of a man who feels how much rests upon this one matter, that nothing but the leading of a British officer will carry one native infantry company through a battle with a European enemy and "bring it out right side uppermost at the other end." What LIEUTENANT-COLONEL YOUNG says in other words is that our native infantry, as at present organised, is not fit to meet a European enemy. Few who are capable of forming a good opinion will differ from him. No one denies the excellent qualities of the men in the Goorkha regiments and in those recruited from the warlike races of the North. But the men must be efficiently led. With the present paucity of British officers they cannot be efficiently led. It is a pity, therefore, to brag about our army or to court a struggle, however inevitable it may seem. The better wisdom would seem to be to put the crisis off as long as possible, redeeming the time by making our weapons more keen and our defences more sure. It might have been hoped that all that has been done to strengthen the frontiers would have enabled us to endure the presence of a few Cossacks in the distant region of the Pamir with equanimity, and at least have saved us from letters written, it may be, by British officers, which will be copied into native papers and will be hailed as symptoms of alarm and fear.

Mr. C. E. Biddulph's article from the Asiatic Quarterly Review, of October 1889, entitled "The 'Friend of London,' or the Rajput of Meywar," has been reprinted by Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner, and Co., in a pamphlet, price 1s.

The Persian Minister entertained a party at luncheon on Oct. 14 to take leave of Sir Frank Lascelles on the eve of his departure for Persia as the new Minister at the Court of Teheran. Among the company were Lady Lascelles, Sir Arnold and Lady Kemball, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Sir H. Drummond-Wolff, Baron and the Baroness de Reuter, Major Talbot, and Mr. and Mrs. George de Reuter.

Sir Frank Lascelles left Victoria Station at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon. He was accompanied by Colonel Gordon, military attaché. Among those who were present to see them off were Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, late Minister at Teheran and now Minister at Bucharest, the Bishop of London, Lady Lascelles, and the Persian Minister in London.

Prince Damrong of Siam arrived in Paris on Saturday.

President Carnot received on Oct. 17 Viscount Namura, the new Japanese Minister. He was introduced in regular form by Count d'Ormesson, and was attended by the Secretaries and Attachés of the Embassy. General Brugère attended the President. The interview lasted scarcely ten minutes.

The 1st (King's) Dragoon Guards, a regiment which has been nearly twelve years in India, is expected to arrive home in the Euphrates on Nov. 2. A squadron will, however, be landed in Egypt en route, to remain there a year, the Euphrates bringing from Alexandria the squadron of the 17th Lancers left in Egypt last year when that regiment returned from India.

A representation which was some time ago made to the Secretary of State, after previous representation to the Government of India, by officers of the Indian Marine, in reference to the appointment of Port Officer of Calcutta, says the Bombay Gazette, has just met with a favourable response. Lieutenant Petley, R.N., Deputy-Conservator of the Port, was in 1889 appointed Port officer. The contention is that the appointment is a scheduled appointment, which can properly be held only by officers of the Indian Marine, and this view has been strongly represented to the Secretary of State in a memorial from officers of that Service. The answer which has just come to the representation admits, we understand, the main contention of the memorialists, and an intimation has been given that when the five years' term of the present incumbent of the appointment is at end the rights of the Indian Marine will be duly recognised.

A Press Association communiqué, published on the 14th, stated that "Great Britain has within the last few days instituted inquiries as to the object of the movements of Russian troops in the Pamirs. The information in possession of the Foreign Office at present is so meagre, and the district in question so ill-defined, that it is at this date impossible to make any specific demands as to the action of Russian troops beyond their frontier and in a country under the protection of Great Britain. For the present it is understood that the British Government will not make direct inquiry at St. Petersburg, but will await the arrival and report of Captain Younghusband, who is on his way to Simla."

The Globe says:—Although more than one of the Service journals, and the morning papers generally, stated last week that it had been definitely settled that the Duke of Connaught was to succeed Sir Frederick Roberts as Commander-in-Chief in India, the rumour is entirely discredited at Aldershot, and we have it on high authority that no decision will be arrived at regarding the succession to this most important command until the spring. The general opinion at Aldershot is that when the Duke of Connaught vacates the command of the Southern District, he will replace Sir Evelyn Wood in the Aldershot command.

According to the Manchester Guardian's correspondent, a curious rumour is current in well-informed circles in regard to Lord Salisbury's diplomacy in the question of anti-foreign riots and outrages in China. It will be remembered that at one stage of the episode the Chinese protested against the pressure that was being put on them and said it would do more harm than good, that they could not punish the guilty as they desired lest serious popular disturbances should take place, and that they could not send troops into Hunan, the centre of the disturbances, to restore order, for that would involve civil war. All this appears in the Blue Book; but I am told that a far more serious communication was made by the Chinese Government to the Powers. They said that a rebellion or prolonged disturbance following on extensive repressive measures would endanger the stability of the present dynasty, which is an alien one in China, and against which there had always been much hostility. There were great and ambitious men of the Chinese race ready to take its place, for in China, as the Powers were reminded, it was not necessary for a man to be born in the purple in order to be Emperor. Whether the Western Powers to whom this communication was made believed it or not, it appears that they resolved to remove this excuse from the mouths of the Chinese statesmen. They undertook, led by England as the Power best able to carry out any given policy on the spot, to aid the Chinese Government in putting down any rebellion caused by their efforts to prevent and punish outrages on foreigners, and to permit of no revolution in China on this account. In other words, in reply to the threat or apprehension of the overthrow of the dynasty, the Powers offered to guarantee the dynasty through the present troubles. It is to this guarantee, it is said, that we owe the renewed activity of the Chinese authorities, the further punishments, the degradation of certain high officials, and the prompt settlement of compensation. If this story is true, says the correspondent with some reason, it is one of the strangest in modern diplomacy.

Some misapprehension still appears to exist as to the facts of the expedition to the Himalayas which is shortly to start for India. The expedition, according to the correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, will be under the sole command of Mr. W. M. Conway, the well-known Alpinist, who has reduced the art of travel to a science. Mr. Conway, as the result of much experience and thought, has reduced the impedi-menta of travel to a minimum, and the expedition which he is about to undertake will be conducted on the lines most conducive to obtaining a maximum of results for a minimum of effort. The Mr. Eckersteni who is variously reported to be the leader of the expedition and the medical man attached to it will, it is true, accompany the expedition, but in an entirely subordinate, though by no means an unimportant, capacity. He is not a medical man, but he is an experienced climber, as, indeed, everyone who accompanies the expedition must of necessity be, for the real work to be done must be done only after a considerable elevation has been reached. The officers of the Indian Survey, by whom work of the highest and most enduring excellence has been done, have practically mapped into the lower ranges of the great mountain mass that rises from the plains of India towards the central axis of the continent, but much still remains to be done in determining the actual position and relations of the higher peaks, and it is work of this special character which the small but specially-equipped expedition under Mr. Conway's leadership will undertake. The expense of such an expedition will, of course, be very considerable, and could not be allowed to fall on one man alone. I believe that I am correct in saying that part of the expenses will be borne by a great journal, and help is also forthcoming from some of the learned societies which are more particularly interested in the work to be done. The Alpine Club is rendering valuable assistance, and the Royal Geographical Society has made a grant of 300*l.* and the loan of the necessary scientific instruments to Mr. Conway. I hear, too, that Mr. Conway has himself invented a new application of photography by which photographs may be of service in fixing the actual elevation of the object photographed. By an ingenious arrangement of graduated lines on the plate the operator is, it is said, enabled to measure the height of a mountain path, and it is obvious that if this is so, a new and valuable means of checking observations obtained in the usual manner has been found. Mr. Conway's party will leave England very shortly, so as to spend the winter at the foot of the Himalayas collecting information and acquiring some knowledge of the language and people which may be useful to them when the work they have gone out to do is actually undertaken.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

A NOTIFICATION in the Home Department states that the Government of India considers it advisable to cancel the order of 1886 relating to ex officio titles in the Public Works Department. This is done owing to the difficulty in connection with the extension of the practice to other departments. Those officers and subordinates already in receipt of the same will, however, retain them.

A Poona correspondent writes on Sept. 27:—Talking of the Civil Service, great excitement prevails in the higher ranks of the Bombay civilians as to the result of Sir Charles Pritchard's anticipated promotion. For some reason best known to themselves the Supreme Government will not hurry over gazetting this gentleman to the berth he is supposed to be certain of obtaining, and as Mr. John Moore becomes time-expired unless he can become a pukka Member of Council before November 4, it is feared that the delay in filling the vacancy may lose us one of the most popular members of Poona society.

The final scheme for the establishment of a Civil Veterinary Department in India has been sent to the Secretary of State. Every province will be equipped with a veterinary officer or officers selected from the military cadre for organisation of measures to educate natives in veterinary science, to deal with cattle disease, and to facilitate and extend horse-breeding operations. For this last purpose the officers of the present Horse-breeding Department will be incorporated in the Civil Veterinary Department. The total number of officers required is eighteen, of whom ten are already at work in some of the provinces. Eight new officers have been applied for to strengthen the military cadre, as the latter has to supply a similar number to the new department. Mr. Hallen will be in charge of the civil veterinary operations so long as he remains in the country. The provinces most affected will be Bengal and the N.-W.P. In the former there is now no veterinary officer at all.

His Excellency the Governor in Council, Bombay, is pleased, in supersession of the rules published in Government Notification No. 1,323, dated Feb. 22, 1884, to publish the following rules requiring subordinate judges to pass examinations in vernacular languages other than their own in use in the Regulation Provinces of the Bombay Presidency:—i.—Every subordinate judge is required to pass, within two years of obtaining his first substantive appointment, an examination before the Central Committee for Departmental Examinations in any one of the three vernacular languages—Marathi, Gujrati, and Kanarese—other than his own, unless he shall have already done so before obtaining a substantive appointment, or shall have obtained from the High Court a certificate that he has proved in the course of his official work that he is proficient in one of the said languages other than his own. A subordinate judge, who has not passed in a second vernacular, will be liable to supersession in rank and grade promotion by such subordinate judges as have passed, and will be subject to removal, unless his failure to pass is accounted for by special reasons deemed satisfactory by Government: provided that a subordinate judge appointed before April 20, 1883, must pass the aforesaid examination or obtain the aforesaid certificate before the expiration of two years from the date of this rule. Any such subordinate judge failing to qualify within this period will be debarred, until he qualifies, from promotion to the first class. ii.—In making new appointments, candidates already qualified as above will ordinarily be selected in preference to candidates who have passed the High Court Pleader's or LL.B. Examination in the same year, but are not thus qualified. iii.—In making promotions to the first class, preference will ordinarily be given to those subordinate judges in the second class who have qualified according to Rule i.

THE INDIAN COMMANDERSHIP-IN-CHIEF.

THE writer on Indian matters in the Times contributes the following on the above subject to to-day's issue :—The approaching change in the Commandership-in-Chief is being awaited with considerable anxiety in India. A recent telegram in our columns announced that the Viceroy, the present Commander-in-Chief, and the Military Member of Council were unanimous in their recommendation as to the officer who should succeed Sir Frederick Roberts. Such unanimity is by no means a matter of course, but in the present case it has been rendered almost compulsory by considerations of an unusually cogent character. A series of difficult and delicate measures are being carried out for the conversion of the Indian Army into a more efficient fighting body, and for the creation of a powerful auxiliary force to be maintained by the Feudatory States. Recent events have given additional gravity to the situation on the Afghan frontier, a situation which seems to be tending to a new Delimitation Commission on the Upper Oxus, and to the reopening of strategic questions of serious importance to the safety of India. The definite settlement of our new Burmese frontier with China must also take place during the next Commandership-in-Chief, and demands in a special manner a practical soldier's acquaintance with the problems involved. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising that the telegraph should report the Viceroy and his military advisers to be unanimous in recommending a general of tried service in the field, and of long personal experience in handling mixed British and native troops on the Indian frontiers to succeed Sir Frederick Roberts. The necessity for a personal acquaintance with Indian military and frontier questions is the more imperative for the new Commander-in-Chief, as the Governor-General's Council happens to be exceptionally weak in "political" experience at present. Sir Charles Aitchison, with his robust and unrivalled knowledge of frontier problems, has given place to Sir Philip Hutchins, whose service has been passed in quiet judicial appointments in Madras. Sir David Barbour's training has been that of a district officer in Lower Bengal, among the most peaceable population of India, and in financial bureaux at the headquarters of the Government. Sir Alexander Miller is a barrister and Q.C., who went out the first time to India the other day at the age of 63. General Brackenbury, who succeeded Sir George Chesney as Military Member, is a soldier of talent and of many high qualities, but without personal knowledge of the Indian Army, except what he gained as a subaltern with the Central Indian Force in 1857-58. Indian military experience and a practical knowledge of Indian frontier problems are now represented on the Viceroy's Council by Sir Frederick Roberts. Without the combination of military and political knowledge represented by himself, Sir Charles Aitchison, and Sir George Chesney, it would have been impossible to carry out the great military and frontier, and semi-military, semi-feudatory measures of the last six years. It would be a public misfortune if Sir Frederick Roberts were at the present juncture to be replaced by a general who, however high his other qualifications, had no experience in actual Indian campaigning and in the handling of a mixed army of British and native troops in the field.

The Government of India seems justified, therefore, in its reported unanimity in designating Major-General Sir George White, V.C., K.C.B., for the commandship-in-chief. A large part of Sir George White's service of 38 years has been spent in India, and the latter portion of it in high Indian commands. Entering the Army in 1853, he served in the Indian Mutiny, 1857-59 (medal), and with the 92nd Highlanders in the Afghan campaign of 1879-80 (medal, bronze star, and V.C.). In 1881 he became lieutenant-colonel commanding the 2nd Battalion of the Gordon Highlanders. In the Nile expedition of 1885 he rendered distinguished service on the staff (medal with clasp and Khedive's star), and he was appointed to a brigade in the British expedition to Burma in the same year. He commanded the Burma field force from 1886 to 1889, and established his character as a general of the highest practical ability during the difficult and protracted operations which followed the annexation of the country. During those four years he had command of an army of occupation numbering about 30,000 men, drawn together from every branch of the British and Indian services. His management of the complicated questions which arose, alike on the military and on the political side of his duties, elicited the highest approval from a Viceroy so careful of his praise as Lord Dufferin. On the conclusion of his service in Burma he was appointed to a first-class division in Northern India, and holds the most important military charge on the frontier—the Baluchistan command. Throughout his career he has been as distinguished for the personal gallantry which won for him his Victoria Cross, as he is for sound judgment and administrative ability in handling a large mixed force of native and British troops. Everything that has been given to him to do he has done well; and he enjoys in a high degree the love and esteem of the Indian armies.

The only demerit that can be raised to Sir George White's appointment is that he is still only a major-general. His regimental promotion had been slow, and when he was selected in 1886 for the command in Burma, it was only after repeated applications that the Government of India succeeded in getting his local rank of major-general made substantive, the Horse Guards objecting that "he would supersede so many colonels." His brilliant and valuable services since then in Burma have received no military recognition, although prominently brought to notice by the Government of India. It can hardly be argued with sincerity that a mere defect in army rank, a defect which may be remedied by a stroke of the pen, and which the Government of India, who know his services most intimately, have done their best to remedy, should be allowed to weigh against the exceptional value of Sir George White's experience as a proved Indian commander, and his knowledge of impending questions alike on the Burmese and the North-Western frontiers.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, September 29.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Sept. 24 raised the rate of interest 1 per cent., making the official minimum 3 per cent., an advance which had been foreshadowed by the course of outside markets during the last week. Below are the figures given of the Bank's statement for the week ending Sept. 22.

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 12,97,209	Increase
Do. at Branches.....	8,88,348	Decrease
Other Deposits	37,44,030	Decrease
Post Bills	26,669	Decrease
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	Rs. 6,18,385	Increase
Loans.....	3,79,658	Increase
Accounts of Credits.....	2,35,463	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	10,85,234	Increase
Cash at Head Office.....	22,60,616	Decrease
Do. at Branches	30,80,142	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows a further increase of nearly 50 lacs in public demand, made up as follows:—By a decrease of nearly 37½ lacs in "Other Deposits" and over ½ of a lac in "Post Bills," together with an increase of over 3½ lacs in "Loans" and 10½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of about 2½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits." The Treasury Balance stands augmented by over 12½ lacs at the head office, while there is a decrease of about 9 lacs at the branches. The bank's investments were increased by over 6½ lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of about 22½ lacs in the cash at head office and over 30½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 5,17,88,364 rs.—equal to 59½ per cent. of the current liabilities of the bank, against a proportion of 63½ per cent. of last week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—In spite of the gradual rise in silver in London, the sterling market has not shown the slightest symptoms of responding, and the tone of the market has throughout been rather quiet and business very dull, the absence of private paper, together with a prospective inquiry for bank drafts from remitters against the usual Poojah sales in piece-goods, has no doubt largely contributed to prevent any upward movement setting in, and rates during the week have remained fairly steady at 1-5-1/16 to 1-5-3/32 for ready bank wire, and 1-5-7/16 to 1-5½ for credits, except just at the close, when a rather weaker feeling became apparent, and rates receded about 1/16d. all round on the above-named quotations.

TEA.—Last week's sale comprised 15,500 chests, and of these about 1,000 packages were withdrawn. Common and ordinary grades were a shade lower, but anything with quality commanded attention, and obtained fully last sales prices.

JUTE.—Business has been of a spasmodic nature after a few quiet days, with a small trade; a general desire to buy was apparent on the part of some shippers, resulting in a good turn over at 33 rs. for first native marks. The market is now quieter, with some pressure to sell ready parcels. The loose bazaar is firm for good jute, but easier for wet stuff.

GUNNIES.—There has been a fair inquiry, and prices remain firm. Further business is reported in corn sacks and A twills for October delivery both from mills and secondhands. Burma took a small line of C's for the season. The country trade remains inactive, but bazaar dealers are not anxious sellers, and are reported to have brought more twills forward. For Western markets business is reported in salt bags and E's. Other sorts are inquired for, but buyers' ideas are below the market.

HESSIANS 40-inch cloth has again been in request for October-December, and forward goods are scarce, and the tendency of the market is higher. San Francisco has been inquiring for wheat bags, but offers low rates. A small line of Bra-bags were taken for the colonies from secondhands.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—The week would have been uneventful were it not for the revival of the demand for Sonapat Shares, in which a large business has been done. This stock was almost a drug in the market at 1-1 rs., but on the opening a brisk inquiry set in, and prices rapidly advanced to 1-7 rs., receded to about 1-5 rs., and again close firm at about 1-6 rs. This demand for shares was not on investment account, as there was scarcely a single European operating, but is attributable to purely speculative reasons, the business put through having been almost confined to Marwari dealers. Large numbers of shares had been sold "forward," and proportionately large purchases had to be made for cover—hence the rush. Pat Pat at the close appear firmer on the strength of a very favourable report just issued, the decisive tone of which is pleasant reading in these days of suspicion and distrust. The market for jute mill scrip on the whole has kept easy, with the exception of Budge-Budges, which appear to be unreasonably high considering the prospects. There are strong attempts being made to "bear" the market, and as the persistent high prices ruling for the raw material are assisting such operations, we shall probably see prices rather lower than at present. In tea there is practically nothing doing.

BANK OF BENGA.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, October 2.

Business gives no indications of returning activity; and during the week under review transactions in the leading export staples—cotton, wheat, and seeds—have been upon a small or moderate scale, in quiet or steady markets, and without material change in prices. Exchange declined in the earlier part of the week, but recovered slightly, rates being 1-16 lower in bank and private paper than they were. Government paper, after a fall of about two per cent. from the highest point lately reached by Fours, has rallied somewhat, and closed 1 7-16 per cent. below the rate ruling on Sept. 25. Freights have been weak and declining, and are still so for prompt shipment, though rather steadier for the new season's loading. A slightly better inquiry for staple grey goods is the only change noticeable in the import market, business continuing on a very moderate scale both on ready and arrival terms.

MONEY.—Although money had continued to be abnormally abundant, even for the dull business season, and trade had become almost stagnant in some of the most important lines, it can hardly have been expected that the Presidency Bank's Statement of Affairs, issued on Sept. 28 would have disclosed the large increase of 82 lacs in the Cash Balance during the previous week, bringing up the Balance to not far from 4½ crores, and, in fact, this was partly due to an accession of some 25½ lacs to Government Deposits at the Head Office of the Bank and at its Branches. But, taking this into account, there remained a large increase to be accounted for by a diminution in the trade demand; and this falling off was represented by some 58 lacs, a large increase in Private Deposits, and a material decrease in Loans, having been only counterbalanced to the extent of 5½ lacs by an increase in Bills Discounted.

IMPORTS.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been a little improvement in the demand for grey goods; but rates for all descriptions are much about the same as they ruled a week ago. Encouraged by the lower exchange, wholesale up-country buyers have taken some lots at current rates, but otherwise inquiry from the Mofusil has been very restricted. In bleached, dyed, Turkey red, and printed goods, there has been no change whatever in prices, and demand has continued on the previous limited scale, and the same remark applies to local-made goods. The week's clearances of imported goods are again put down at about 1,500 packages; those of local goods at some 1,000 bales.

YARNS.—Imported twist has found few buyers, and the market is quiet at previous quotations.

METALS.—Copper has been taken to only a small extent, but the market has been steady in tone at the last previous rates. In yellow metal a moderate business has transpired, and an advance of 2 annas per cent. has been established, in a steady market. Iron has also been in but moderate request, but prices have advanced 4 to 12 annas, the feeling having been steady at closing.

COAL is firm, sales have been made during the week of 2,500 tons of Nixon's Navigation and 2,000 tons of Powell's Duffryn, on the Bunder, at 16½ rs. and 15 rs. per ton, respectively, and 500 tons of Beyts Merthyr Cardiff, ready in harbour, at 15 rs. per ton. For forward business sellers are asking 15½ rs. for Powell's and 14½ rs. for Davison's, while buyers' idea is half a rupee per ton less.

EXPORTS.—COTTON.—The tone of this market remained quiet to the close of last week, with rather more doing for export, but nothing for the mills, and with prices unchanged except for Dharwar and Westerns, which were 1 r. to 2 rs. per candy lower. On Sept. 28 no purchases were made for export, and only a few hundred bales were taken for local consumption; but thereafter transactions were on a larger, but still only on a moderate, scale, both for shippers' and spinners' account, in a steady market, and on the basis of previous sales. The purchases from stock for export sum up nearly 4,000 bales for the week, and consisted principally of Dharwar, Compta Ginned, Dholera and Oomrawattee descriptions, and Westerns; while the mills took about 3,000 bales of Bengals, Dholera and Bhownugger, Oomra Kinds, Dharwar, and Westerns. The market closes firm, with prices 1 r. to 3 rs. per candy higher than they were.

WHEAT.—Only a small, or at most, a moderate business has been passing in this staple in a market which was quiet or steady at previous rates, until Oct. 1, when the feeling became firm, but without any change in quotations.

SEEDS have been in much the same position as wheat, and have not attracted the attention of exporters to more than a moderate extent on any day, only a small business having, as a rule, been done. A slight decline in the price of linseed was recovered on Oct. 1, and other descriptions have not changed in value.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES.

THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL" on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Oct. 7; Madras, Oct. 8; Bombay, Oct. 10.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Oct. 25 :—The Viceroy reached Srinagar on Friday. The Maharaja, accompanied by his Ministers, met him in a State barge some distance below the city. The long procession of State boats, manned by rowers in scarlet, winding their way up the broad river, with the snow-capped mountains in the background, formed a striking picture. The population turned out to see the spectacle and welcome the Viceroy. At sunset a royal salute announced his Excellency's arrival at the Residency.

News has reached Srinagar, the same telegram adds, of the safe arrival of Captain Younghusband at Gilgit. It is stated that Lieutenant Davidson is with him. Captain Younghusband proceeds to Srinagar at once to meet the Viceroy before he leaves Cashmere. Lord Lansdowne will then be able to learn from him what occurred at Bozai Gumbaz.

The Viceroy, a Reuter telegram of Oct. 25 says, was entertained by the Maharaja at a State banquet last night. His Highness, in proposing Lord Lansdowne's health, expressed great satisfaction at his Excellency's visit. The Viceroy, in acknowledging the toast, said that his visit was not merely one of pleasure, but was due to the fact that the affairs of Cashmere constantly engaged his thoughts. The Government of India had throughout entertained towards the Maharaja and his State no other sentiments than those of sincere good will, and he trusted that this assurance would dispel once and for ever the mistaken idea that India in its dealings with Cashmere harboured any ulterior designs upon the Maharaja's rights and privileges.

It is reported that the Cashmere durbar sanctioned an expenditure of 75,000 rs. for the visit of the Viceroy.

The Viceroy, on returning from Cashmere, goes to Gwalior, Bhopal, and Indore.

It is definitely arranged that Lord Lansdowne will visit Burma in January.

Sir Frederick Roberts presented the memorial gift to Lady Lyall on Oct. 6.

The Hon. Sir Charles Pritchard was on Oct. 8 invested with the insignia of Knight Commander of the Indian Empire, by Lord Harris at Poona.

The Governor of Bombay was to leave Poona on Oct. 20 on a tour to Ahmednagar and Sholapore to inquire into the water supply.

His Excellency has presented a handsome challenge cup to be shot for annually by company teams of eight of any rank among the Poona Volunteers.

The Lieutenant-Governor, North-West Provinces, was to leave Naini Tal on Oct. 5, and, after taking a short trip through the hills to Ranikhet and Almora, return by way of Bhim Tal, reaching Kathgodam on Oct. 29.

Sir James Dormer leaves Madras for Burma on tour on Nov. 2. He will visit all the military stations in Burma, leaving the country about the end of December. He remains in Madras till the end of March, and then proceeds to Army Headquarters at Ootacamund.

Permission is given to Sir Harry Prendergast to remain at Mysore as Resident until the end of the current official year.

No successor has yet been appointed in place of Sir H. Prendergast. The next vacancy in the Political Department will be Jodhpore, Colonel Powlett retiring under the age rule on Feb. 5 next.

Sir John Hudson, having been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general, will vacate the Meerut command on April 1.

The military authorities at Home have ruled that Lieutenant-General T. E. Gordon must be seconded while holding the post of Military Attaché at Teheran.

Colonel Channer will probably be appointed to the command of the Assam district when General Collett proceeds to Peshawur next April.

We (Times of India) learn that General Michael Pedrowich Theodorowich arrived at Bunder Abbas from St. Petersburg on Sept. 23 via Meshed and Kirman in Eastern Persia, and subsequently proceeded to Gwadar in Beloochistan to join a party of four other Russian officers, one of whom, it is said, speaks twelve different languages. He appears to be an officer of some importance, and at Kirman he was courteously received by the people. He left for the Coast on Sept. 5 in company with Mr. Marshall, a young English gentleman who was spending his summer at Kirman. In conversation the General is not unnaturally very guarded with respect to his mission in Beloochistan, which is supposed to be a political one. As he could not obtain a passage by the mail steamer on account of her being full, he left Bunder Abbas on Sept. 27 to make his journey overland. He expects to arrive at his destination on or about Oct. 17. Gwadar is about 300 miles westward of Kurrachæ.

The Calcutta High Court has addressed a letter to the Government regarding the proposal that hereafter the term of actual service qualifying for full pension shall be 14½ years instead of 11½. The judges, a Times telegram says, point out that barristers appointed from England to the Bench must ordinarily be of middle age to possess the necessary qualifications. They will realise what fourteen years' service in India, beginning in middle life, means, and it will be difficult to get good men. The judges consider that a substantial proportion of the Bench should be men of ripe experience recruited from the English Bar. They further state that local barristers of standing earn more than the judges, and that if the inducement of pension be withdrawn by increasing the length of service, suitable men will not join the Bench. The same argument applies to native barristers and pleaders. The public will endorse the opinion of the judges. The general feeling is that under the existing rules India does not get the right men, and that if the term of office were extended, no man fit to be a County Court judge would join the Indian Bench.

The proceedings before the magistrate's Court at Hyderabad in the Imperial diamond case closed on Oct. 22, a telegram from Calcutta states, when Mr. Jacob was committed for trial at the sessions, the same bail as before being accepted. His counsel read a short statement, in which the accused asserted that he never had any fraudulent intention in the matter. He believed that the Nizam wished to purchase the diamond, but was prevented by the remonstrance of the Resident. The Resident, in a memorandum, points out that the price of the diamond exceeded the Nizam's annual personal income, and that to provide funds for its purchase, with a famine impending, was an important matter of State.

A despatch has reached India from the Secretary of State fully recognising the ability with which the military operations were carried out in Manipore, and eulogising the behaviour of the troops.

The Secretary of State has approved of officers of the Indian Army and Indian Medical Service, who are duly qualified, proceeding direct from India to Russia for a further course of study to enable them to qualify as interpreters. Such officers will leave India in May or November, travelling at their own expense via Persia, or such other route as Government may direct. In case of their passing their examination they will receive a gratuity of 200*l.*, plus a further sum to cover travelling expenses.

The Volunteer Committee, among other subjects, is considering the question of the organisation of the Reserve.

The Native Press has fallen into the mistake of supposing that the Press Act applies to all parts of Native States. The fact is, a Bombay paper says, that it applies only to cantonments or the British entourage in Native States, and is designed to prevent their being converted into "Alsatis," and for the protection of the Native States.

The Rawul Pindi Defence Works are to be begun immediately. Lieutenant-Colonel Greenstreet, Captain Craster, and Lieutenant Thuillier are to be appointed to settle details and superintend the works.

The defence works about to be undertaken at Rawul Pindi are estimated to cost between 40 and 50 lacs of rupees, a considerable portion of which will have to be spent on roads, as the country about the station is much broken up by ravines.

The revised estimate of the cost of the defensive works on the Samana Range amounts to 3,73,814 rs.

The projected railway from Chitor to Oodeypore will, it is calculated, cost only 25,000 rs. per mile, as the bridge work will be light, and the country to be traversed is fairly level throughout.

Sanction has been given to the survey of the Taptee Valley, with a view to opening it out by railway. The projected line will run from Surat through Nandurban to Jalgaon on the G. I. P. system. From Nandurban a branch will be thrown off through Dhulia to Manmad Junction.

Ninety lacs of rupees will probably be allotted to the Mushkaf Valley Railway turning the Bolan next year. The project will take two years to complete, and the total outlay be 170 lacs.

The following figures show the Government share of the surplus profits for the half-year ending June on certain railways:—G.I.P.R., actuals 52,16,200 rs.; Rajputana-Malwa Railway, actuals 33,20,870 rs.; B.B. and C.I.

Railway, estimated 16,00,000 rs.: and E.I. Railway, estimated 62,40,000 rs. The total equals 1,63,77,070 rs., or about 1,160,000*l.*, taking the rupee at 1*s.* 5*d.*

Destructive floods have taken place at Lucknow.

THE acquittal of SHROFF at Bombay by a jury, of whom six were Europeans, more than justifies the emphatic condemnation passed upon it by the Indian newspapers, and is calculated to bring justice in India into contempt. In face of the fact that the accused, who had been assistant manager of the Oriental Life Assurance Company, had admitted in writing a criminal breach of trust in respect of three sums of large amounts—the third being no less than 2,45,000 rs.—the jury unanimously acquitted him on the first two charges, and as to the third were for acquittal by a majority of six to three. Thereupon MR. JUSTICE BAYLEY, who had the option—under section 305 of the Criminal Code, if he disagreed with the majority—of discharging the jury and sending the prisoner over for trial by a new jury, entered a verdict in accordance with the opinion of the majority, with which it is alleged he stated that he agreed. This last statement, we confess, we hesitate to believe. We cannot understand the action of the jury, except on the suggestion freely thrown out that they had been influenced. The point raised as to the absence of proof of the dates on which the misappropriations had occurred—a point it will be remembered which was successfully taken in a famous Calcutta case some time ago—is a point of law, and ought not to have had any influence on the minds of the jury, in face of the prisoner's confession. We are unable to find any excuse for a summing up which left the jury free to find a verdict of acquittal in the teeth of the accused's confession. Still less can we understand why MR. JUSTICE BAYLEY should have registered the verdict of the majority as one of acquittal. No wonder the merchants of Bombay are beginning to take extraordinary precautions to secure themselves from the operation of a law which, by the pedantry of judges and the stupidity of juries, practically gives immunity to the fraudulent employé. The two cases in Calcutta and Bombay are a disgrace to Indian jurisprudence, and the commercial classes should agitate until they get the law so clearly stated as to leave no loophole for the folly of jurymen or the perverse ingenuity of the bench.

A marriage has been arranged between H.H. the Begum Ahmedee, youngest daughter of Sir Syed Ahmed Ali, K.C.S.I., and Mr. A. Flower March, of The Hembs, Great Barr, Birmingham. The Begum Ahmedee is through her father a lineal descendant of the Emperors Akbar.

The Maharaja Dhuleep Singh has rented a villa at Beaulieu for the season.

Prince Damrong, the brother of the King of Siam, at present travelling in Europe, will arrive in St. Petersburg in November, and will reside there for a month, taking up his residence at the Winter Palace.

Prince Wathama, brother of the King of Siam, has been appointed Siamese Minister at Paris. He is expected to reach Genoa in two or three days, and will arrive in Paris next week.

The Siamese Government have instructed Messrs. Ramage and Ferguson, Leith, to proceed with the building of a fast twin screw steel cruiser of about 2,500 tons.

M. Dury, the Japanese Consul at Marseilles, died on Oct. 24.

The Sultan, on Oct. 23, received in private audience Sir F. Lascelles, the British Envoy to Persia, and General Gordon, Military Attaché, who subsequently left for Teheran, via Batoum and Baku. His Majesty was pleased to compliment Sir F. Lascelles on his appointment.

Mr. C. Purdon Clarke, C.I.E., has succeeded Mr. G. Wallis as Keeper of the Art Collections at South Kensington Museum. Mr. Clarke retains his appointment as Curator of the India Museum, in the Exhibition Road.

The Earl of Carlisle and his eldest son, Lord Morpeth, will be among the visitors to India this winter. They sail from Liverpool in the Anchor Line steamer Britannia to-morrow.

Lord Douglas Compton, 9th Lancers, who has been aide-de-camp to Lord Wenlock, Governor of Madras, and was invalided home from India, has undergone a severe operation for the removal of an abscess. He is staying at the house of his father, the Marquess of Northampton, in Lennox Gardens, and is now doing very well.

Mrs. Grimwood's account of her life in Manipore and of the terrible scenes amid which her experiences culminated, and throughout which she acted so courageously, will be brought out very shortly by Messrs. Bentley and Son.

Dr. K. N. Bahadurji, who represented the Bombay Millowners' Association at the Congress of Hygiene and Demography, has left England for India. Dr. Bahadurji hoped to have had an opportunity of addressing the Manchester Chamber of Commerce on the subject of Indian factory legislation, but a convenient date could not be arranged. Mr. B. M. Malabari, who had so much to do with the passing by the Viceregal Legislative Council of the Age of Consent Bill, and who has been spending a few months in England mainly for the benefit of his health, is also about to return to the East.

Sheikh Djumal Uddin Al-Husainy has arrived in London, having made his escape from Basrah, in Turkish Arabia, where he was detained a prisoner at the request of the Shah of Persia. One hundred of his followers and friends have been thrown into secret dungeons in Teheran and subjected to cruel tortures, while six of them were secretly put to death. Five years ago Sheikh Djumal Uddin was on a short visit to this country. He then went to Russia, and afterwards, at the special request of the Shah, visited Persia, where later on he incurred the wrath of that monarch on account of his having suggested a few necessary reforms. The Sheikh is regarded by almost all Mahomedans as the leading Oriental savant and a true descendant of Mahomed. He is, moreover, supposed to have a large number of followers in most parts of the East and is a strong reformer.

The Russian papers report the death of Colonel Kostencko, of the Army Staff, the author of a well-known work on Turkestan, the greater portion of which was translated into English by Colonel Gowan, of the Indian Intelligence Branch.

Her Majesty's Indian troopship Euphrates has arrived at Malta from Bombay, and was to leave yesterday for Portsmouth.

Her Majesty's ship Egeria was at Singapore on Oct. 24, and was about to proceed to Hong Kong. Letters have been received at the Admiralty from the Commodore at Hong Kong, dated up to Sept. 22. The Plover was to remain at Pagoda, and the Pigmy at Hong Kong.

On Oct. 24 Sir Redvers Buller notified from the War Office that the 1st King's Dragoon Guards, on their arrival from India on Nov. 2, will be stationed at Shorncliffe. The 18th Field Battery Royal Artillery is to leave Colchester for Coventry on Oct. 29; the 41st Coventry for Aldershot on Nov. 6; and the 47th Aldershot for Kurrachee, by the Euphrates, on Nov. 11. The 79th battery, returning from India by the Malabar on Nov. 16, is to go to Colchester; and the P Horse Battery, by the same vessel, to Dorchester. The 38th, 61st, and 71st Field Batteries, due from India by the Crocodile on Nov. 30, are to be stationed respectively at Shorncliffe, Christchurch, and Athlone. The 2nd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders are to leave Aldershot on Nov. 25 for India.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 20.—Heavy rain has been falling in Madras since Saturday. Copious and continuous rain is also reported in the Southern districts. Owing to the consequent improvement in the outlook throughout the Presidency, agricultural operations have been resumed.—Times' correspondent.

MADURA, Oct. 22.—A spectacle was witnessed here yesterday which shows how little "the progress of education" has as yet affected the ideas of the people. To propitiate the goddess to whose malignity the dearth of rain is, according to Hindoo superstition, attributed, the barbarous practice of "hookswinging" was revived. Iron hooks were pushed through the skin of the man's back who had consented to be the victim or the actor in this hideous rite. A rope was fastened to the hooks, and by this the wretched fanatic was hoisted into the air. Thus he remained "swinging" for upwards of an hour, his agonies being regarded as a welcome offering to the offended deities.—Standard's correspondent.

WE give our readers the following paragraph from the Indian Daily News for what it is worth:—We hear that rumours are still rife as to possible changes impending over the Viceregal House. It is said that Lord Lansdowne will not remain in India for another hot season. The reasons for this are various. According to some accounts, the office of Viceroy has not of late been a bed of roses from the political point of view. It is one full of anxiety and care on political grounds, and the crop of glory reaped has not been sufficient to offer temptations for another reaping. And, again, his Excellency, it is said, has not found the Simla retreat to be the sanitarium which popular opinion assigns to it. On any or all these grounds a change does not seem unlikely, though his lordship might stay in deference to party exigencies. What tends to give countenance to the rumours of retirement is the speculation as to the probable successor. It is said that the first favourite in the running is the Earl of Coventry, who is fifty-three years of age, a member of the Privy Council, and deputy lieutenant for the county of Worcester. We are not aware that his lordship has had any political or diplomatic experience, though he has been captain of the Honorary Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms. If there is any ground for this speculation, it breaks the idea that the way to the Viceregal throne of the Empire lies through Canada. Perhaps all these speculations are premature.

At the Barnes Court, Simla, on Oct. 6, the memorial gift of a handsome lotus pattern dessert service was presented to Lady Lyall by Sir Frederick Roberts, in the presence of Lady Lansdowne and a gathering of some 200 friends. The Commander-in-Chief in his speech paid a graceful tribute to the qualities by which Lady Lyall had endeared herself to her host of friends, and gave a sketch of Sir James Lyall's career. It was, he said, as a Revenue officer that he made his name in the Punjab. He was distinguished for his intimate acquaintance with land tenures, and his sympathy with and knowledge of the people. His settlement work was chiefly carried on in Gurdaspore and Kangra, and he (Sir Frederick) recollected being struck when travelling in those districts a few years ago by the kindly manner in which he was remembered there. Sir James was at that time Resident of Mysore, and numerous were the inquiries made about him and expressions of hope that he would be the next Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. A year or two after Sir James and Lady Lyall left Mysore the Maharajah of Mysore came all the way to Lahore to see them. The speaker met his Highness in Calcutta, and remarked that it was a long journey for him to take. The Maharajah replied, "I would go twice the distance to see my friends, Sir James and Lady Lyall." Sir Frederick concluded by saying that Lady Lyall had won all hearts by her generous kindness, her warm sympathy, and her genuine unselfishness, and by her cordial and genial manner would cause the Barnes Court hospitalities to be looked upon as among the most cherished of our Indian reminiscences. In response, Sir James spoke with great feeling on behalf of himself and Lady Lyall, bidding farewell to Simla and to their many friends in India.

A Poona correspondent writes on Oct. 8:—The members of the Deccan Ladies' Association this afternoon entertained Mrs. Chatfield, their President, who leaves Poona to-morrow for Bombay en route to Europe for one year, at the Boottee Hall, when they presented her with a handsome and costly silver bowl as a token of their deep gratitude for all that she has done for the Association, and the kindly interest she has invariably evinced in the welfare of each individual member of the Association. Lady Harris graced the occasion with her presence, and a very pleasant afternoon was spent.

An extremely pleasant Gymkhana Meeting was held at Ganesh Khind this afternoon, a Poona correspondent writes on Oct. 9, and was favoured with beautiful weather. Lord and Lady Harris entertained a large number of guests on the occasion. The programme consisted of five events, in some of which his Excellency himself competed and took first prize. This fact gave an additional interest to the proceedings, which were carried out in an excellent manner, thanks to the energy of Captain Cox, A.D.C., the honorary secretary of the meeting. General Hogg and Col. Rawlins assisted in judging and starting, while Mr. Le Messurier undertook the duties of clerk of the scales. For the tent-pegging competition there were four entries, but one of the Kirkee teams failed to put in an appearance. The Government House team were in great form, and carried everything before them. They took all four pegs at each run, their dressing, style, and pace being greatly admired. The team, which was made up of his Excellency the Governor, Captain the Hon. St. L. Jervis, Dr. Martin, and Captain Cox, earned full marks. The 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers' team, consisting of Captain Brunker, Lieutenants Lyons, Woolmer, and White, were second. They took three pegs out of the four at each run. The scratch team from Kirkee did nothing. For the Steeplechase four ponies weighed out, but Lieutenant Moore's Alderman gave trouble at the post, and absolutely refused to join his field. The other three started off without him, Captain Fowle's Baby, piloted by Captain Cox, winning easily. Captain Jervis' Judge and Lieutenant Greer's Rosette, ridden by Captain Brownrigg, R.E., refused the first jump, but eventually took it, Judge finishing second. The Stick, Ball, and Bucket Race created considerable amusement, competitor after competitor missing the ball, which had to be taken off a post while the competitor went at a gallop and deposited it in a bucket of water some 12 yards away from the post. The prize was eventually awarded to Resaldar Sayadulakhan, native aide-de-camp, who was nominated by Mrs. Gott. Colonel Rhodes, nominated by Miss Croft, and Lieutenant Whyte, nominated by Mrs. Woolmer, tied for second place in the jumping competition for horses. The first prize fell to his Excellency, who rode that beautiful jumping country-bred mare Heatsease. She cleared the jumps very well, but failed somewhat in the first attempt over the bush jump. The judges gave her 25 points. Dr. Martin's chestnut Australian mare Meg earned 24 points. The other competitors were Captain Fanshawe, Mrs. Beckham, Mrs. Howard Warden, Captain Cox, and Lieutenant Bidgood. In the jumping for ponies General Gatacre's handsome Jewel took first prize, with 28 points, Colonel Rhodes' Sir Victor being second with 25 points. There were five competitors. The last event on the card was a three-furlong race on the flat for ponies. Colonel Rhodes' black Arab pony Crow, 10 st. 4 lbs., ridden by his owner, won easily by a couple of lengths from Dr. Martin's o a p Mystery, 12 st., ridden by its owner, between whom and Captain Peyton's b a p Herodotus, 11 st. 11 lbs., owner up, there was half a length. The others which ran were—Captain the Hon. St. L. Jervis' gr a p Jester, 11 st. 11 lbs.; Captain Cox's gr a p Donner, 10 st. 10 lbs.; and Mr. Whyte's br c b m Grasshopper. The Governor's band was in attendance, and played sweet music during the afternoon.

The Bombay Polo Tournament of 1891 commenced on Oct. 5 in the presence of a large concourse of people under most favourable circumstances. The weather was all that could be desired, and the ground was in almost perfect order, though in places somewhat slippery. The match was between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Golconda (Nawab Afsur Jung's) Team, and resulted in a victory for the latter by three goals to one, a result which was generally anticipated. The play during the first two rounds was somewhat wild, and it was during these that the strangers scored their three goals. The Bombay team then settled down to their work and held their adversaries fairly well in hand throughout the rest of the game; but unfortunately, notwithstanding several brilliant runs on the part of individual players, the backing up was not such as it should be, and luck certainly did not favour the Bombay men when they had chances at goal. The best run in the game was undoubtedly made by Mr. Barton in the fourth round, terminating with a magnificent hit, when the ball unfortunately hit the outside of the post. The play of the Golconda Team was very good throughout: each player kept his place, and evidently was thoroughly drilled in the duties of that place. The goal-keeping of Abbas Khan was magnificent, and Ebram Beg is a host in himself. The Bombay goal-keeper also did extremely well, and in addition to his duties in that capacity made one or two very brilliant runs. The teams were as follows:—

BOMBAY.		GOLCONDA.
1 Mr. E. Steel		1 Shaik Goolam Ahmed
2 Mr. C. Gray (capt.)		2 Mahomed Ebram Beg (capt.)
3 Mr. E. L. Barton		3 Mahomed Houssein Khan
4 Mr. F. A. Prevost		4 Abbas Khan.
Umpires—Mr. A. Craigie and Lieut. C. I. Orr.

The second game of the Tournament was played on Oct. 6, and was between the 7th Hussars and Poona. Before the commencement of the match the Hussars were very hot favourites. They have a great reputation, says a correspondent, whereas the Poona team, although comprised of excellent material, had played very little together, and were emphatically a scratch team. The result of the match showed, however, that certainties at polo, as in every other game, are not to be depended upon; for, although the Hussars won, they had their work cut out for them all through the game, and the spectators were treated to as fine an exhibition of polo as has ever been witnessed on the Bombay ground. Both sides played magnificently. The game was very fast throughout, the backing-up admirable, and the goal-keepers excellent. The Hussars won by nine goals to seven. When all the play was so good it is hardly necessary to call attention to that of any individual player; but we must make an exception in favour of the captain of the Hussars team, Captain Haig. His marvellous dribbling was a "sight for sair een," and of the nine goals made by his side we believe he made seven. He received a nasty hit over the head about half-way through the match, which caused a good deal of blood to flow; but he pluckily went on playing as soon as he had had it bound up. The only other accident during the game was one to the Poona goal-keeper, whose pony rolled over him and knocked him out of time for a couple of minutes; but he also pluckily continued to play as soon as he could get on to his pony. A great deal of time was wasted during the game, but we suppose this could not be avoided, and the game which began at four o'clock, and was played in six rounds of eight minutes, lasted until five minutes past six. The following are the names of the players:—

7TH HUSSARS.		POONA.
1. Lieut. Hon. I. Beresford		1. Lieut. Fisher
2. Capt. Haig (captain)		2. Capt. Le Gallais (captain)
3. Capt. Nicholson		3. Lieut. Wogan Browne
4. Lieut. Liebert		4. Capt. Bronnigg.
Umpires—Mr. A. Craigie and Mr. F. A. Prevost.

There probably will be considerable difficulty for some time to come, says an Allahabad correspondent, in addressing members of the Medical Services. Some at least of them resent being "Doctor," time-honoured title though it is. In one instance a Major of the Royal Engineers was rash enough in a demi-note to address a Surgeon-Major as "My dear Doctor." The latter, in his reply, wrote "My dear Barrack Master," and asked that in future he might be given his proper rank. A reference to the General Officer Commanding the District followed, but the result is not known.

PERSONAL.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Admiral the Hon. George Disney Keane, C.B., heir-presumptive to his brother, third Baron Keane, died on Oct. 19. Born in 1817, he entered the navy in 1831, and served in the Syrian war 1840, the Kaffir war 1851-52, and at the rout of the Imperial Camp at Shanghai 1854. His promotions were dated as follows:—Captain, 1855; rear-admiral, 1873; vice-admiral, on Retired List, 1870; and admiral, 1884. He was created C.B. in 1871, having received a good-service pension in the previous year. Admiral Keane married, in 1881, Catherine Mary, widow of Thomas Langford-Brooke, R.N., of Mere Hall, Cheshire. Lieutenant-General the Hon. Hussey Fane Keane, C.B., now becomes heir-presumptive to the barony.

We (Times of India) regret to announce the death of Surgeon-Major W. E. B. Moynan, of the Indian Medical Service, who was lately in medical charge of the Duke of Cambridge's Own 20th Punjab Infantry, which melancholy event took place at the Officers' Sanitarium, Colaba, on Oct. 6. The deceased was born on Feb. 11, 1851, and joined the Indian Medical Service on April 1, 1873, and was in his fortieth year at the time of his demise. For about twelve months past Surgeon-Major Moynan had been in hospital up-country suffering from paralysis, accompanied by a nervous complaint. On Oct. 3 he arrived in Bombay from Rawul Pindi, and went to the Officers' Sanitarium at Colaba, intending to go home on medical certificate for twelve months, by the troopship Euphrates. On his arrival, the deceased remained under the treatment of Dr. Hosie, of the Officers' Sanitarium, and Dr. Wilson, but notwithstanding the best medical aid, he gradually grew worse and died on Oct. 6. It seems the deceased officer had been in continuous service for upwards of eighteen years, and during that period had never been home. Immediately on the news of his demise being communicated to the District Staff Office, Town Hall, General Budgen, District Staff Officer, commanding the Bombay District, issued a District Order, expressing his regret at the sad occurrence. The funeral left the Officers' Sanitarium at 3.30 P.M. on Oct. 7, arriving at Sewree at 5 P.M. The Yorkshire Light Infantry Regiment furnished the usual escort and carrying party, and the same regiment also furnished the firing party.

A telegram has been received from Urmi, Persia, announcing the death from pneumonia on Oct. 13 of the Rev. Arthur S. Jervis, one of the clergy of the Archbishop's Mission to the Assyrian Christians, and chaplain to the branch house of the Sisters of Bethany, who are working for this mission.

THE SHROFF CASE.

As it is most important, says the Times of India, that the true meaning and effect of the acquittal of Dorabjee Dhunjeebhooy Shroff should be adequately appreciated in order that, if necessary, legislative changes may be introduced into the Criminal Codes, so as to make them effective instruments for the punishment of similar offences in the future, we propose to consider shortly the topics relied on by the defence. Apart from the discussion of the weight and conclusiveness of the evidence, Mr. Jardine contended that inasmuch as the prosecution had failed, in the first place, to fix the particular time at which the misappropriation took place; and, in the second, had failed to prove the offence in respect of any definite sum, the prisoner could not be convicted. As to the necessity of fixing the exact date of the crime, reliance was chiefly placed on the directions given to the jury by Mr. Justice Prinsep at the trial of Shama Churn Sen in Calcutta a year ago. The circumstances of that case were almost exactly similar to the one we are now considering. There were defalcations extending over a considerable period, suspicions were aroused, and the accused made an abject confession. He was charged with having committed criminal breach of trust in respect of a sum of 3 lacs, which were said to be a part of the total of 12 lacs which he admitted he had taken from the Chartered Bank. In his summing-up the learned judge is reported to have said:—"You must not be influenced by the fact that he may have embezzled 12 lacs of rupees. It is your duty to consider whether, in the charge laid before you, he has embezzled this particular sum of 3 lacs on one particular day, and to give your verdict accordingly." We venture to think that the scope of this direction has been somewhat misconstrued. In Shama Churn Sen's case the identification of the sum of 3 lacs, in respect of which he was charged, to a great extent depended on the Bank being able to show the exact date on which it was embezzled. In England the only difficulty that has arisen in connection with fixing the precise time has been in determining the place where the prisoner should be tried. In one instance, a servant received money in Shropshire, and told his master in Staffordshire that he had not received it; he was convicted in Shropshire, and the judges were of opinion that he could have been convicted either in the county where he received the money or where he embezzled it by not accounting for it. In another case the servant was sent to Derby to receive money, and did not return. Some months afterwards he met his master in Nottingham, and told him he had spent the money. The trial at Nottingham was held to be perfectly regular for the same reasons. It can hardly, therefore, be supposed that Mr. Justice Prinsep laid it down that in order to convict on a charge of criminal breach of trust (which is an analogous offence to the English one of embezzlement) the prosecution must establish the exact day on which the money is taken with a criminal intent. If the day is necessary, why not the hour and the minute?

On the other hand, it seems only reasonable that an accused person should be told exactly what property, with the dominion over which he has been entrusted, the prosecution allege he has dishonestly disposed of. This being admitted, there has been some difference of opinion among the judges in England as to whether an indictment for embezzlement can be supported by merely proving a general deficiency in the accounts. In one case it was laid down that "some specific sum must be proved to be embezzled in like manner as in larceny some particular article must be proved to have been stolen." On the other hand, on a different occasion, Mr. Justice Erle said: "I think the offence is sufficiently made out if the jury are satisfied that the prisoner received in the aggregate the amount with which he has charged himself, and that he absconded, or refused when called on to account, leaving a portion of the gross sum deficient. There would be constant failures of justice were I to decide otherwise." It will be noticed that Mr. Justice Erle only contemplates the existence of any difficulty where the prisoner absconds or refuses to account. It is only in more modern times that confessions have come to be regarded as impediments in the way of the prosecution. In considering these and other more or less conflicting opinions of English judges, it must be borne in mind that for the most part they had reference to the distinction then prevailing in English law between the misappropriation of moneys given to a servant for his master, and of moneys given to the servant by his master. The one would be embezzlement, the other larceny by a servant. Discussing these very decisions, a high authority on English Criminal Law has recently written as follows:—"Now that this distinction has been removed by the Legislature, the two stand on the same footing: if money be continually passing from the master to the servant, and the servant, instead of appropriating it to the purposes indicated, appropriates any part of it to his own use, he is guilty of larceny, and in the numberless cases which have occurred of this kind, no one has ever thought of objecting that the servant could not be convicted of larceny because he could not be shown to have received a particular sum, and to have appropriated a part or the whole of that particular sum." It is undoubted that under English law it is sufficient to show that any part of the sum named in the charge has been embezzled. It will therefore be seen that, though the matter is not altogether free from doubt, the better opinion seems to be that it is not necessary, in order to support a charge of criminal breach of trust, to prove either the precise date of the offence or the particular sum misappropriated. That it should be uncertain, however, is little short of a calamity, for if the law requires strict proof of these matters, it will be well nigh impossible ever to secure a conviction where there are accounts running over any considerable period.

Although the learned judge, who presided at the trial of Shroff, seemed, in his summing up, to incline towards the wider and more liberal interpretation of the duties incumbent on the prosecution, he appears not to have given the jury any definite direction upon the subject, leaving it to them to say generally whether the prisoner was guilty or innocent. Had the jury seen fit to convict, we should of course have had an authoritative decision upon these points which would certainly have been argued before a full Bench of the judges of the High Court.

In the meantime it is impossible to foresee what course may be taken in the future. It may be that on the next occasion the prosecution will try the effect of charging the accused with theft as well as criminal breach of trust, in which case they may perhaps avoid some of the difficulties now in their way, but till the experiment is tried it would be rash to anticipate its result. One of the principal dangers inherent in the present state of things lies in the manifest temptation to which managers of banks, assurance offices, and other similar undertakings are now exposed to accept the offers which may be made by friends and relatives of the defalcator to hush the matter up and let him go free. Shroff and Shama Churn Sen both made such proposals in the letters which were put in as confessions at their trials; and, however contrary to the public weal such a departure from the strict path of duty might be, managers are but men, and the consciousness that refusal would mean incurring the heavy expenses of a probably abortive trial might frequently turn the balance in favour of the cheaper and easier course of accepting whatever sums could be squeezed out of the culprit and his friends. No man should be placed unnecessarily in a position of temptation, and we trust that by some means or other—and if all others fail, by legislation—these obstructions to the path of justice may be cleared away, and the law be rendered what it ought to be, a real terror to evil-doers.

The Pioneer is responsible for the following:—The Commissioner of Burdwan is quoted in the Bengal Police Report, just published, as inclined to be of the opinion of an experienced judge who told him that “the safest way to act after committing a murder is to make a confession to the police.” But in the case of a cashier who has embezzled the contents of his employers’ safe, a full and free confession, so long as he leaves out such particulars as dates, is not only the safest alternative, but one which apparently affords absolute immunity from any disagreeable consequences. Nothing can be more frank and candid than Mr. Shroff’s confessions to Mr. Slater, the manager, of having robbed the company, and they secured him, as we know, a unanimous verdict of guiltless on two counts and a favourable majority on the third. Next to the jury Mr. Shroff evidently owes his acquittal, as everyone must discern who read the report, to the admirable tact with which he was defended. Mr. Jardine, his counsel, was in the position of a jockey who has to ride a finish that looks to be hopeless, and yet knows that if he moves on his horse he is lost. He had practically no defence to offer; there was no counter theory to be proposed for the disappearance of the money; to have suggested that anyone else could have been the offender would have been fatal to the retention of the jury’s sympathies. So Mr. Jardine had to sit still, only throwing in a few searching questions to display the loose management and negligence of the office, and thereby insinuate the great temptations which were thrown in the path of the accused. With a light hand, yet most effectively, he brought out how it was the rule of the office for everyone to put implicit trust in everyone else—from the manager down to the hamal.

The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—Public morality is shocked. It is not to be wondered at if there is a consternation among bankers and merchants of all classes. The inevitable fiduciary relations which should subsist between themselves and those whom they trust must necessarily undergo a radical change. A constant state of benevolent suspicion and distrust must now prevail—a factor which will certainly not be conducive to the cultivation of that healthy morality in the mercantile community which is the very basis of its credit. Evidently, if the law is in such an uncertain state that it could easily tempt persons in the way of temptation to rob with impunity those who entrust them with their property, the sooner the law is altered the better.

The Rast Gofar says:—Nothing could be clearer than the law his lordship thus laid down. His summing-up, on the whole, was fair and although it was not so severe in tone as was expected from a judge of his sterner ethics, it certainly was not in favour of the accused, notwithstanding the somewhat unusual incident of praising at the end of the summing-up the pleas urged by the counsel for the defence, which might be construed by a lenient jury into a hint favourable to the accused. We feel justified in saying therefore that Shroff’s acquittal is not due to any quibbling in legal technicalities. The jury have neither followed the judge’s exposition of the law as made in his summing-up nor does the verdict seem to be in conformity with the weight of the evidence recorded before them, materially supported as it was by the written confessions of the accused which he had himself volunteered. Indeed, Shroff’s letters formed the most important exhibits in the case against him; and the judge surely did not direct the jury to set them aside. They were, however, most surprisingly set aside by the jury as they set aside both the voluminous evidence and the careful summing-up; and a verdict was returned by a majority in defiance of all that was told to them as their duty and contrary to the expectations of all but the accused and his friends.

The Gujarati says:—According to Shroff’s confession he would seem to have enriched himself at the expense of poor widows and orphans and other innocent beneficiaries, and though the trial has proved abortive, the disclosures have prevented a still greater calamity which would surely have overtaken the public if he had remained silent and gone on in his most profitable business. That this is a substantial gain everybody will admit in view of the possible dangers that have been averted by the fortunate existence of what Shroff called in his letter to Mr. Slater “a white spot in his conscience.” This is some consolation in the midst of disappointments all round.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Oct. 1, at Simla, the Bill amending the law relating to bankers’ books was passed.

The Hon. Mr. Rattigan presented the report of the Select Committee on the Punjab Municipality Bill, and stated that, according to practice, he should reserve his remarks until the next meeting of the Council.

Sir Philip Hutchins, in presenting the report on the Bill amending the Lower Burma Municipal Act, said he should next week have to move the addition to the Bill of those clauses in the Punjab Bill which were designed to prevent strikes or desertion of their duties on the part of sweepers, as well as other classes of menial servants, the performance of whose functions is essential to the public health or safety. The necessity for such provision had been brought home to him by a telegram just received from the Chief Commissioner of Burma reporting a sweepers’ strike at Rangoon, from which serious consequences were expected.

A Bill of one section defining the status of certain petty magistrates in Burma was then introduced by Sir A. Miller and passed forthwith.

Sir P. Hutchins introduced a Bill extending the Inland Emigration Act of 1882 to the Central Provinces and certain selected districts of the Madras Presidency. He said it was very desirable to open a further field for coolie labour, and such a field had been found in the Central Provinces. The Chief Commissioner had concurred in applying the Act to those provinces, while in Madras the Local Government had expressed a wish for legislation. It would not be possible to extend the Act to all parts of the Presidency, because it would be in conflict with the local Act. It would only be applied to such districts wherefrom emigration to Assam already takes place.

The Council adjourned to Oct. 8.

THE “PIONEER,” MR. MACLEAN, AND THE AFGHAN PROBLEM.

THE following article is from the Pioneer of Oct. 1. Owing to pressure on our space last week we were obliged to defer its publication until to-day:—

Nothing can be more mischievous than Mr. J. M. Maclean’s letter to the Times on the subject of the proposed railway to Candahar. In breaking a lance with Mr. George Curzon, who can claim to be an authority on the Afghan question, he attacks both the Government of India and the Ameer, and that in a way which is both ungenerous and unjust. The former, he asserts, have done nothing to bring about the abolition of the differential tariff, under which English and Indian goods are so severely handicapped in competition with Russian wares; while the Ameer is accused of doing nothing in return for the annual subsidy received from India. Mr. Maclean is not in the confidence of the Government, and cannot therefore know what has been done from time to time to induce Abdul Rahman to abandon his short-sighted policy in trade matters; but if he had stuck to stock arguments regarding Central Asian trade, not much harm would have been done. As it is, he launches out into a tirade against the Government for having “isolated” Afghanistan. “The Ameer,” he writes, “evidently has the profoundest distrust of our intentions, and no wonder, for our whole system of frontier defence seems to be based on the belief of the authorities at Simla, that we cannot defend the independence of Afghanistan, and that we must, when war breaks out, let the Russians quietly overrun and occupy the greater portion of the Ameer’s dominions, and only attempt to stop them when they have reached Candahar.” Mr. Maclean is perhaps scarcely qualified to sit in judgment on the Indian military authorities, or criticise their schemes for the defence of Afghanistan, but however this may be, he is wide of the mark when he talks of the Russians being quietly allowed to overrun and occupy the “greater part of the Ameer’s dominions,” no attempt being made to stop them until they shall have reached Candahar. They certainly could occupy the non-Afghan part of the kingdom of Cabul, namely the Herat Province and Afghan Turkistan, but once they moved across the boundary line the great game of war would be begun in earnest, and there would be no spirit of inaction to complain of in the councils of the Government of India. The idea of patiently waiting until our enemy had actually reached Candahar is too absurd. The line of defence against real invasion is Cabul-Ghazni-Candahar. Were Russia to embark upon a campaign, each move that she made would be met by a corresponding move from the side of India. The fighting races in Afghanistan proper would be encouraged to put forward their full strength, stimulated by the appearance of British troops in their country, as allies and not as enemies, and the invaders would soon find that their project was one full of danger to themselves. It would not be a campaign merely of the Russian garrison in Central Asia against the English garrison of India, but a war between England and Russia in every part of the world. Our soldiers would acquit themselves well in Afghanistan without going on a wild-goose chase to Herat, which, it is to be presumed, Mr. Maclean would like to see. The 389 miles which separate Candahar from Herat are quite sufficient to deter the Russians from advancing on that line, as we have so frequently pointed out; while it should also be remembered that from the Trans-Caspian Railway at Dushak to Herat is 250 miles. Distance from one’s base of operations is always an important factor in planning a campaign, and Sir Frederick Roberts and other soldiers who have studied the Afghan problem, know the enormous advantage there would be on their side, in case of war, with Candahar only seventy miles from the railway at New Chaman and Cabul 180 miles from the terminus of the North-Western line at Peshawur. When the time comes for the forward movement in reply to Russian aggression, it will be seen how much of Afghanistan proper can be overrun by our enemies without a blow being struck at them.

Mr. Maclean argues that we have practically acknowledged the superiority of Russia as a Military Power by the precautions taken to guard the frontiers of India, and he rashly states that “the Ameer, wise in his generation, is already more anxious to propitiate the Russians than he is to show his gratitude to the English for all they have done for him. If the Russians ask him for a concession to construct a railway from their frontier to Herat, how can he now refuse to grant it?” Now our ally Abdul Rahman has many faults, and is not an easy man to deal with; but it is ridiculous to say that he is full of anxiety to propitiate the Russians, and would grant them a concession for a railway to Herat. He knows that the English do not covet his dominions; that they desire to see Afghanistan strong and united, and will do all in their power to maintain its independence; while, on the other hand, he has watched the steady progress of Russia in Central Asia for the last thirty years, and sees that the Czar, or at least his ambitious officers, are bent upon further conquests. "The Cossack never retires" has passed into a proverb among the races who have come under the influence of Russia; and the Ameer will never willingly consent to giving him a footing in the Herat Province. Mr. Maclean solves the difficult problem of English policy towards Afghanistan in a very light-hearted fashion. "We should have concluded a treaty of commerce with the Ameer and offered to lend him English capital for the purpose of building railways through his territory, which would have been under his own control." A simple matter this, but unfortunately Abdul Rahman will not tolerate the telegraph wire, let alone the railroad, in his territory. He is firmer now than ever in his refusal to let the locomotive enter the hills and valleys of Afghanistan, and not all the eloquence of a dozen members of Parliament would shake his determination. We should like to hear his criticism of Mr. Maclean's last proposals.

HOW THE "BANGABASI" CASE WAS SETTLED.

THE Hindoo Patriot says:—We have the authority of Maharaja Bahadore Sir Jotendra Mohun Tagore, K.C.S.I., for stating that when a proposal for settlement was made before the trial by the friends of the Bangabasi to Government, Sir John Edgar pointed out that the primary object of Government in instituting criminal proceedings against the paper was to ascertain whether the present law was sufficient to deal with seditious writings. It was not from vindictive feelings that the proceedings were instituted, and that, therefore, no settlement was possible before the object aimed at was obtained. It was for this reason that he insisted upon obtaining a verdict one way or the other. It did not matter whether the finding was "guilty" or "not guilty." When the Chief Justice in giving his charge laid down the law, and the majority of the jury agreed in their verdict, the friends of the Bangabasi again approached the Government for a settlement. The manner in which the trial terminated did away with the condition which was previously insisted upon, and it was only now that Sir John Edgar consented to consider the question of accepting an apology without a formal plea of guilty. We are also bound to state that Sir John Edgar did not stipulate about any conditions regarding either the British Indian Association or the Native Press-Association supporting the prayer of the conductors of the Bangabasi. The proposal about these two associations recommending mercy was made to him by the authorities of those two bodies and approved by him. But he distinctly said that unless the memorials from those two bodies were explicit, unambiguous, and emphatic, it would be much better not to send them. It was only when an assurance was given to him that these memorials would be emphatic that he entertained the proposal. He clearly gave the friend of the Bangabasi to understand, however, that he acted solely on his own behalf, and all that he could at any time say was that he was willing to recommend the Government to adopt his views, but he would not say whether they would be accepted.

THE AMEER OF CABUL IN ENGLAND.

It is reported from Cabul that the Ameer has posted announcements throughout the country of his intention to pay a visit to England. The probability is, we (Englishman) should say, that the journey will never be made, even if Abdul Rahman is serious in the matter. Still, there is no insurmountable obstacle in the way of such a project. The Ameer was able to leave Cabul for several weeks on the occasion of his visit to India, apparently without any fear of troubles springing up in his absence. A three months' run to England would, therefore, seem to be perfectly feasible. The risk of a rising during his absence would not be a formidable danger, and the Ameer would doubtless take the precaution of minimising it by carrying with him a number of hostages. That in the event of an outbreak he could not kill his hostages in regular Afghan fashion would not affect the binding nature of the arrangement, for the Afghans left behind would certainly not understand the immunity enjoyed by their friends while on British soil. If the Ameer were to take the bold step of visiting England he might almost certainly count on his administration being carried on peacefully during the three months of his absence, while the welcome that he would receive in England would far exceed his utmost conception. The Ameer has a charming manner which would astonish those who have been accustomed to regard him as a semi-barbarian. He is dignified and courteous, shrewd and pleasant of speech, insatiable in his curiosity regarding Western ways, and more especially regarding Western workshops. If he ever finds himself in England, he will spend his days in visiting the factories and workshops that produce the wonders with which he is already familiar. His simple, dignified mode of life, his incisive comments upon civilisation, his freedom from the awkward eccentricities of some former Eastern visitors, and, perhaps still more, his whole-hearted appreciation of the joys of the domestic circle—all these things would secure for the Ameer an instant popularity among the English people which would have its effect upon our future relations with Afghanistan. The impression which would be created in the public mind at home would only be partially correct. It would leave out of sight the sterner qualities of the Ameer's character—qualities which are necessary to the maintenance of his rule, but which the Western mind would utterly fail to palliate. No doubt, the Ameer would pour his grievances into sympathetic ears in high places, and it may be mainly the hope of being able to do so that has suggested the idea of a trip to England. Recent English visitors to Cabul have undoubtedly filled his mind with a desire to see the mother country of the English, and it may be to secure a share of friendly support in that democratic council across the seas by which the doings of the Indian Sirkar is controlled. In such aspirations there may be an element of danger, but it is one against which precautions can be taken. On the whole, the Government of India has more to gain than to lose by the carrying out of the Ameer's projected holiday excursion.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

A NOTIFICATION in the Home Department states that the Government of India considers it advisable to cancel the order of 1886, relating to ex-officio titles in the Public Works Department. This is done owing to the difficulty in connection with the extension of the practice to other departments. Those officers and subordinates already in receipt of the same will, however, retain them.

We recently advocated the placing of all officials on the same footing with regard to privilege leave, writes the Civil and Military Gazette, by letting it count from the port of embarkation, and pointed out what a great pull those gentlemen serving in or near Bombay have as the rule stands at present. A case in point has now occurred. An official in Bombay has just gone home on a month's privilege leave, which he tacks on to a short vacation. He will have but little time in England, it is true, but yet he will get a sea voyage and a complete change. Had he been in the Punjab, he might have got home, but he would have had to leave almost as soon as he got there. The journey to and from Bombay means at least a week. We trust that Government may see its way to granting what would be an immense boon to a large number of its officers at a cost merely nominal to itself.

The following, Indian Engineering says, are special hardships of the Secretary of State's men in the Punjab Irrigation Branch:—1. Some men of sixteen years' service, and all men of less service, are working as subdivisional officers—that is, doing exactly the same work as they were considered fit for on first joining the service. 2. All officers of the Irrigation Department have to live an exposed and lonely life. Very few subdivisional officers have their headquarters even in a civil station, while the large majority are in the most lonely places far from all civilisation, and living in small and unhealthy bungalows, for which, as a rule, they are charged exorbitant rents. 3. Promotion in the lower grades is entirely blocked, partly by the twelve men of the 1875 year, but also by several comparatively senior men having been brought in from other provinces, while no less than six chief engineers have been brought in from other provinces, in the last ten years. 4. The hope of being pushed up from below has been dashed by temporary hands being employed; and the members in the service remaining the same, the proportion in the higher grades also remains the same.

Volunteer Committee at Simla.—The Volunteer Committee sitting at Simla will discuss the question of reservists, and the possible modifications of the existing rules relating to them—concessions which may be made to Volunteers with a view to increasing the popularity of the force; the measures to be taken to improve it, and raise it in efficiency; and generally they will map out the regular series of points which the representative Conference will be able to thrash out in detail. The Government of India are really in earnest in their desire to make Volunteer Corps auxiliaries to the regular Army, and this preliminary Committee, an Allahabad correspondent says, is a sign of their earnestness.

Rain-making Experiment.—Mr. Wolfe-Murray, Collector of Cuddapah, has commenced his rain-making experiments. On Sept. 24, at Madanapalle, a small charge of dynamite was exploded at an altitude of 800 feet above the plain by means of flying a kite first and then sending up the dynamite with a time fuse attached to a second kite along the string of the first kite. That night about 12 centimetres of rain fell. The experiment was renewed on the 25th ultimo, the wind, however, was scarcely strong enough, and the kite could not be got higher than 750 feet above the plain. Two messengers were sent up along the string of the kite to each of which was attached half a pound of dynamite; the explosions took place successfully. Three pounds of dynamite were also exploded on the top of the rock, but no rain fell that night. As the supplies of dynamite were insufficient no more trials took place. It was, however, proposed to explode 300 lbs. on the top of a hill about 4,000 feet above the sea level. On the evening of the 27th, however, there was a heavy fall of rain to the extent of 65 centimetres.

The Indian Mints.—From the report on the Indian Mints it appears that the net imports of gold during the year amounted to upwards of 26 crores, against 46 crores last year. Gold of the value of 97,338 rs., consisting of English and Australian sovereigns and bar gold, was tendered for coinage at the Calcutta Mints, but as gold coin in the Reserve Treasury was sufficient to meet tenderers' claims, none was coined. No gold was tendered for coinage at Bombay during the year. The net imports of silver amounted to 142 crores, against 109 crores in the previous year. This was the largest import on record, with the exception of those of 1862-66 and 1877-78, an abnormal inflow of silver having been caused by silver legislation in the United States and consequent speculation. The amount tendered for coinage at Calcutta was more than four times larger than in the preceding year. At Bombay there was an increase of 30 per cent. All the coinage of copper is now being carried out at Calcutta, the amount for the year being 1,83,902 rs., against two lacs the previous year, in addition to the usual coinage for the Straits and Ceylon Governments. Piece of the value of 76,999 rs. were struck for the Imperial British Africa Company. Out of a total of 769 offences against the coinage reported, 467 are described as possessing and delivering counterfeit and altered coin. There were 18 cases of counterfeiting coin, in which 13 persons were convicted. The pyx trials in India show that the standard weight and fineness of Indian coins have been maintained with accuracy.

Eckford and Bayley, 1st Bengal Infantry; Berger, 30th Bombay Inf.; Rowcroft, 35th Sikhs; and Watson, 30th Punjab Inf. The Colonial Office has ruled that the local allowance for Indian officers serving with the new regiment shall be only 100 rs. per month.

The grant of free rations will be continued to such of the troops as may remain on the Black Mountain during the ensuing cold weather.

The issue of tents for all authorised commissariat and transport followers when on the line of march and at camps of exercise has been at last sanctioned.

It is proposed that a portion of the Imperial Service Cavalry from the Rajpootana States and Gwalior should attend the cavalry camp of exercise at Aligarh.

No 8 Bengal Mountain Batty. at Manipore will probably be utilised in Upper Burma during the coming cold weather in the operations against the Chin tribes.

No further cases of cholera having been reported among the transport followers of the 5th Goorkhas at Abbottabad detailed for Gilgit, the detachment has started on its march to Cashmere.

No. 11 company, Western div., Royal Art. will proceed to Aden during the ensuing relief season. This will bring the number of garrison batteries to be located at Aden up to three.

An honorarium of 5,000 rs. has been given to Col. Toker, Military Dept., in recognition of his services in translating the military standard text-books for the Native Army.

Cholera has broken out among the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers stationed at Trimulgherry. Three deaths occurred on Oct. 4, and there had been four fresh attacks.

The 1st Madras Pioneers and two companies of Madras Sappers and Miners will be employed on the Nichuguard-Manipore Road during the ensuing cold weather. A metre-gauge line will be laid from Lunding to Nichuguard.

It is notified in an Indian Army Circular that appointments to the General Staff, which require the approval of the Home authorities, include not only the adjutant-general and quartermaster-general, but the appointment of officers of the British Service to situations carrying substantive rank of colonel in the Army.

Sir James Dormer has, through the Adjutant-General, Madras Army, paid a high compliment to the general officers commanding the Secunderabad garrison and the Hyderabad Contingent, which he inspected during his visit in the early part of last month. Having expressed his high approval of the dress, turn-out, and soldier-like appearance of the men, the Commander-in-Chief also compliments them on the manner in which the various manoeuvres were executed on the field day at which he inspected them.

The grievances of the British soldier in the matter of clothing on going out to India has apparently not been overlooked in high quarters, and, says a Bombay paper, it will no doubt be a source of satisfaction to all concerned to know that the price of the sea kit has already been reduced, on the representation of the Commander-in-Chief, from about 18s. to 4s. 2½d., all superfluous articles being omitted. The question of substituting a free issue of white and khaki clothing for the present scale of compensation is also, it is believed, under consideration; but it is one which cannot be decided for some time.

H.M.S. Pigeon, under the command of Capt. S. W. A. Gray, arrived at Bombay on Oct. 4 from Zanzibar, which place she left on Sept. 14. She called at the Seychelles, and remained there for four days, and then sailed on Sept. 24 for Bombay. Since leaving Bombay in the early part of 1890 she has been cruising about the Zanzibar coast. It is expected she will remain at Bombay for about three months.

The Indian Marine steamer Clive, under the command of Capt. B. P. Creagh, arrived at Bombay on Oct. 6 from Bushire via Kurrachee, with Surg. Hojel, Capt. Sheppard, and eight other passengers, two horses, and 249 mules. She left Bushire on Sept. 29, with 280 mules and nine horses, of which forty-seven mules and nine horses were landed at Kurrachee, at which port she embarked sixteen mules for Bombay. The Clive experienced fine weather during the voyage.

H.M.S. Cossack, Commander Cross, arrived at Bombay on Oct. 1 from Aden, which port she left on Sept. 27. While on the Aden station she occasionally cruised about the Somali coast, visiting Berbera, Zeyla, and Bulhar. The ship has had a most trying commission, having been engaged in the blockade work on the East Coast of Africa in 1889 and 1890, during which time she did most valuable service which is well deserving of recognition at headquarters. The Cossack will make a short stay in Bombay, in the course of which she is to be commissioned with new officers and crew.

Sir Mortimer Durand is likely to accept the command of the Simla Volunteers.

Major-Gen. Nairne, Inspector-General of Artillery, arrives at Aden from England on Nov. 10, halting there a week on inspection duty. He will reach Simla on Nov. 28, and visits Muridki, the artillery camp, from Dec. 2 to 8, and attends the cavalry camp at Aligarh from Dec. 10 to 18.

Brig.-Gen. Luck has returned from leave, and resumed his appointment of Inspector-General of Cavalry. General Luck will begin his cold weather tour early in November, arriving at Aligarh on the 11th of that month, or ten days before the cavalry regiments begin arriving for the camp of exercise.

Lieut.-Col. and Col. Gregory Colquhoun Grant, Staff Corps, has been admitted to the colonel's allowance, with effect from Oct. 4, 1891.

Col. Begbie will succeed Col. Hope as Deputy Adjutant-General, Army Headquarters, Col. Stainforth, 21st Madras Inf., succeeding Col. Begbie as Assistant Adjutant-General, Army Headquarters.

Capt. Loch, of the 3rd Goorkhas, has been appointed to the command of the Surma Valley Police.

Capt. Thunder, A.P.D., Paymaster of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Inf., has been selected for the vacancy as Paymaster of the Kurrachee Depot caused by the death of Capt. O'Neill. Capt. Thunder proceeds to Deolali to acquire a knowledge of the system in force at the Trooping Depot.

In case of Major Broadbent succeeding Major Hildebrand as Deputy Director for Fortifications, it is probable that Col. Maitland will be appointed Junior Deputy Secretary in the Military Department, and this will cause a vacancy in the Assistant Secretaryships. Col. Toker, Senior Deputy Secretary, may possibly proceed to England on furlough in February.

Captain B. B. Russell, Royal Engineers, company commander, Bombay Sappers and Miners, has been allowed furlough to Europe for two years.

Lieut. Cyril Uvedale Price, 1st batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers, officiating wing officer, 30th Regiment Bombay Infantry; Lieut. F. W. D. Trotter, 1st batt. Leicestershire Regiment, officiating wing officer, 3rd Regiment Bombay Light Infantry; and Second Lieut. Edward Newnham Davis, 1st batt. Royal Munster Fusiliers, officiating wing officer, 3rd Regiment Bombay Light Infantry, have been admitted to the Staff Corps.

Colour-Sergeant J. Mawhood has won the gold medal of the Poona Volunteer Rifle Association with an aggregate score of 180 points out of a possible 210. The distances fired from were 200, 500, 600, 700, 800, and 900 yards.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Oct. 7.

Fatal River Accident at Calcutta.—A melancholy accident occurred on the river at Calcutta on Oct. 3. A committee of naval volunteers assembled on board the Government steamer Guide to make necessary arrangements for a cruise, which it was proposed as many of the members as could join should make in her to the vicinity of Shotts Island and Chandbally during the ensuing "poojah" holidays. Having settled certain details the party embarked on board the steam launch Enchantress, which was to bring them ashore. The launch had scarcely cast off from the Guide when the cry was raised that one of those returning ashore had fallen overboard, and it was quickly ascertained that Mr. Duncan Henderson was the gentleman missing. Although known to be an expert swimmer, Mr. Henderson seems to have been unable to make any effort to save himself, for he sank immediately and never rose to the surface from the moment he disappeared. It is possible that a strong undercurrent may have carried him under the steamer or under the launch, and that the propeller of the latter struck him. The accident was due to a sudden lurch which the launch gave. Mr. Henderson was sitting at the time on the gangway rail. It is thought he must have overbalanced himself and fallen into the river. The deceased was Assistant Harbour Master of Calcutta, and was held in much esteem by his superior officers. He was the sole survivor of the officers and crew of the ill-fated British merchant ship which was wrecked off the Sandheads in the great cyclone of 1886. He leaves a wife and two young children.

Municipal Improvements in Calcutta.—Arrangements for a new cemetery in the suburbs of Calcutta, to be accessible by a line of railway, are under consideration. Compressed air, which is now so largely used in many cities of Europe and America, is likely soon to be introduced into Calcutta, the International Society for Compressed Air and Electricity at Berlin having already obtained the sanction of the Commissioners to lay down the necessary pipes in the town.

A Zemindars' Association.—A large and influential meeting of the zemindars of Purneah and Bhagulpore was held on Sept. 30 to form an Association solely for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of zemindars, at which the following resolutions were passed:—First, that an Association be formed, with headquarters in Calcutta and branches in the Mofussil, for the protection of zemindars' interests and to deal with all matters relating to zemindary in every way. Second, that Government be memorialised to protect zemindars against the proposed Cadastral Survey, and to draw its attention to the harm that has already resulted from the introduction of the Survey. Third, that those few zemindars that are not present, and are not represented owing to their not having received notice, be informed of this meeting and invited to become members, and that copies of the proceedings of this meeting be translated into the vernacular and circulated.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Oct. 8.

New Quarters for the Governor's Bodyguard.—It having been found essentially necessary on sanitary grounds, as well as for the maintenance of discipline and efficiency, that his Excellency the Governor's Bodyguard should be located in properly-ordered lines, plans and estimates were called for, and these having now been submitted, sanction has been accorded by Government to an expenditure of 30,653 rs. for the construction of new quarters. The design of the lines has been made to conform as far as possible with the approved plan of huts for a Native Cavalry regiment. The work is to be put in hand and carried out immediately.

The Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association.—The anniversary meeting of the Eurasian Anglo-Indian Association which was held at Madras on Sept. 30 marks an interesting step forward in its career, the Association having decided to drop its slight connection with the Congress, and to endeavour to secure assistance and co-operation from Anglo-Indians. In this it has been already fairly successful. The Hon. Mr. Garstin presided. This meeting was well supported by Europeans, including Mr. Hanna, manager of the Madras Railway, who, in an able address, described his experience in the Madras Railway Company with Eurasians. He pointed out where they were of most value as railway employes, and arrived at the conclusion that Eurasians should endeavour to become first-class artisans and ignoring office work. He strongly urged their qualifications as soldiers, pointing to the Madras Railway Volunteers, of which he is the colonel, as instance of the remarkably good Volunteer Corps. Mr. Garstin expressed strong concurrence with Colonel Moore's approval of the idea of throwing open the Association to Anglo-Indians. He also agreed with Mr. Hanna that Eurasians should take to technical training rather than become clerks. Mr. Garstin warmly approved of the employment of Eurasians as soldiers, and added that the Governor held a similar opinion, while he thought the Commander-in-Chief would not oppose it.

The introduction of the Station Veterinary Hospital system into the Madras Presidency has been sanctioned.

A sporting correspondent writes:—I hear rumours of a polo tournament being held in Madras, towards the end of January, for a challenge cup presented by the Madras Gymkhana Club.

The statistics of coffee cultivation in Mysore for the year 1890-91 show that the number of plantations had reached 27,848, and covered a total area of 147,543 acres, of which 18,991 acres have not yet been planted out. The outturn of tea in the year amounted to 8,768,366 lbs.

Mr. Cousins, sanitary expert, is expected shortly to arrive in Madras for the purpose of advising the Madras Government in connection with the drainage and water schemes for the city.

The Madras Railway Company is apparently determined to benefit by the experience of the South India Railway in the recent dacoity of a train. For the future, the guards who convey gold from the Kolar Gold Fields to Bombay monthly are to be armed with loaded revolvers and weighted batons to repel any attack by dacoits.

Mr. Barton, of Coonoor, who says he has discovered a new tea disease, declines at present to speak about either the disease or the cure for it, not having completely satisfied himself yet, but he intends making a few researches in Ceylon and then making known the result of them. He will be in Ceylon probably three weeks. The new disease, whatever it is, he says he first discovered in the low country of Ceylon, after which he found it again in Assam and then in high-grown tea on the Neilgherries.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Oct. 10.

Investiture at Ganesh Khind.—There was an official dinner at Government House, Ganesh Khind, on Oct. 8, immediately preceding the investiture ceremony. After dinner, the Knights Commanders and the Companions of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire assembled in the drawing-room at 9.20 P.M., formed a procession according to ancient custom, the junior preceding the senior members, and entered the durbar-room punctually at 9.30 P.M. All being seated, Mr. Lee-Warner, the secretary, reported that the business was the investiture, under the Sovereign's grant, of the Honourable Charles Bradley Pritchard, and delivered to his Excellency Lord Harris, G.C.I.E., whose seat was on the dais, the grant of her Majesty. His Excellency handed the document back to the secretary, who read it aloud. Mr. Lee-Warner and two Companions of the Order, Colonel Bisset and Mr. Barnett, then conducted the Honourable Charles Bradley Pritchard from his seat to the dais, where he made his reverence, and his Excellency conferred upon him the title, degree, and honour of a Knight Bachelor of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. The Secretary having represented that there was no further business, a procession of the Knight Commanders and Companions of the Order of the Indian Empire was formed and left the durbar-room in the reverse order in which they had entered, the band playing a grand march. Besides those who had the honour of dining with their Excellencies, about one hundred other ladies and gentlemen witnessed the investiture ceremony, which was performed in a very impressive manner. The function was a very brilliant one.

Lady Harris at the Poona Convent.—Her Excellency Lady Harris, accompanied by Captain the Hon. St. Leger-Jervis, aide-de-camp, visited the Poona Convent on Oct. 8 and inspected the entire school. Her ladyship was much gratified with all that she saw, and before leaving presented two prizes for needlework, which will be competed for later on. The children recited some pretty verses composed specially for the occasion, and before Lady Harris left, the Lady Superior of the Institution thanked her ladyship for honouring the school with a visit.

Lord Harris and the Poona Volunteers.—Lord Harris presented a handsome cup for competition among cadets of the Poona Volunteers, which was shot for on Oct. 5. The weather was calm; the distances being 200 and 300 yards, and there were nine competitors. The prize was won by Lance-Corporal Ruttonjee, who made 60 out of a possible 70. The second best score was 50. His Excellency had also presented a very handsome challenge cup to be competed for annually by company teams of eight of any rank among the Poona Volunteers.

At the meeting of the Bombay Corporation on Oct. 1, Dr. Weir and Mr. Rierzi Walton were unanimously reappointed to the offices of health officer and executive engineer respectively.

The Bombay Chamber of Commerce had addressed the Government of India with a view to bringing about the cancellation of the quarantine regulations at Alexandria against Bombay, there being no facts of cholera having occurred since Sept. 17.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

A REUTER telegram from Rangoon, dated Oct. 20, says:—

The British force which started in pursuit of Boh Leh has returned to Mautsi. The Tsawbwa of Wuntho is supposed to have fled to the north of the Kachin Hills.

The Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs yesterday (Oct. 25):—

The condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma has not improved during the past week. In some places the crops have been destroyed by caterpillars. The relief works have been temporarily discontinued in the Mandalay district, but it has been found necessary to establish relief works in Yeu, where sharp distress prevails. The condition of the Myingyan district is very unsatisfactory. It has been ascertained that severe distress has prevailed there for some time, and a considerable number of people who were unable to obtain food were migrating to Lower Burma. The Deputy Commissioner, however, not only failed to report these facts to the local Government, but neglected to use the funds placed at his disposal for the relief of distress. In an official minute on the condition of the Myingyan district, the Chief Commissioner states that he has already conveyed to the Deputy Commissioner an expression of his grave displeasure with that officer's neglect of his duty and ignorance of his district. The Deputy Commissioner has been informed further that if a single death from starvation occurs in his district he will be reduced to the position of Assistant Commissioner. Vigorous steps have now been taken to relieve the distress in Myingyan. There has been a great increase in the number employed on relief works, and it is anticipated that early next month ploughing and sowing will have ceased. The price of rice in Rangoon has fallen slightly during the week.

The ex-Tsawbwa of Wuntho has escaped from the force sent against him, and has fled to the jungle.

The condition of the civil police force in Rangoon causes great dissatisfaction. A memorial has been sent to the Chief Commissioner, signed by every European rice-milling firm in Rangoon, who represent three-fourths of the commerce of the town, praying for a full and independent inquiry into the conduct of the local police in failing to arrest for two years a Chinese trader, for whose apprehension a reward had been offered. This man obtained 140,000 rs. by means of fraudulent cheques and then disappeared with the coin, which weighed over two tons. The culprit was recently arrested owing to certain private information which had been supplied. It was then discovered that he had for months resided in his own house, almost next door to the residence of the assistant superintendent of police in charge of the district. The memorialists say that it is generally stated—and they believe correctly—that a large portion of the stolen money was used to bribe the police, whose conduct, they urge, is consistent only with corruption or the grossest incompetence.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has sanctioned the appointment of four officers selected from the police in Burma to be assistant commissioners on probation. The province has been undermanned for a long time past.

BESIDES THE NUMEROUS MILITARY COLUMNS operating on the Burma frontiers this cold season, two police columns go out. One marches from Momeik, meeting the Bhamo Eastern Column at Namban; the other will explore the Sinkar Valley, South Bhamo, which has been a place of refuge for dacoits.

A CHANGE HAS BEEN MADE in the Burma Ruby Mine regulations, by which heavier penalties are imposed for smuggling. The new rules, per contra, allow natives to pay fees for licenses instead of royalties on rubies found, which latter system the company found difficult to work. They will now derive their income from licenses instead of royalties.

THE REPORT of the excise administration in Burma for the past fiscal year shows that the opium revenue in the lower province increased from 18,69,134 rs. in 1889-90 to 19,74,206 rs., while the substitution in Upper Burma of the central distillery system for that of outstills caused a decline in revenue from 3,76,625 rs. to 2,83,237 rs. It seems that the whole opium business in Burma has got into the hands of Chinese, and that by combination they have succeeded in keeping down the prices at the public auctions. The Chief Commissioner treats this as a matter requiring serious attention from the local authorities, not only because of its injurious effects upon the revenue, but also because by cheapening the price of opium to the vendor, and consequently to the consumer, the increased consumption of the drug is promoted. It is suggested that, by fixing a minimum upset price, in those districts where the combinations are known to exist, for the licenses, the evil would be remedied, or at least abated. In spite of the combinations, however, there was a large increase in the revenue from sales. The illicit consumption of opium is still very prevalent, and the number of offences against the excise laws relating to liquor are also very numerous. Opium-smuggling prevails in Upper Burma, and no effectual mode of dealing with the evil has yet been devised.

CASHMERE.

THE impolicy of sending a small detachment of only 200 Goorkhas and so many European officers to the isolated and now dangerous position at Gilgit is manifest, thinks an Allahabad paper, and may lead to a repetition of the Manipore disaster and tragedy. However loyal the Cashmere troops may be, they could make no stand whatever against the Russians, or even against the wild brave mountain tribes. The only time we had the Jammu-Cashmere troops as allies was at Delhi, during the Sepoy Mutiny of 1857, and there they lost their position and guns, which had to be retaken by our own troops at the point of the bayonet, and were driven back by the rebel sepoys as chaff before the wind. Moreover, the court and religious party out of power in Jammu are necessarily hostile to us. However much and well that hostility may be dissimulated and concealed at present, it doubtless exists, and only awaits favourable opportunity to develop itself into true colour. The traditional policy of the Indian Foreign Office to send a corporal's guard where an army is required has, unfortunately, not yet died out. But the enemy to be ultimately met on the Pamir steppe does not represent a weak Asiatic, but a strong European military Power.

HYDERABAD.

IT IS BELIEVED that the Nizam's Government contemplate establishing a central printing press at Hyderabad, the superintendent of which will probably be Mr. Patrick Gallagher, the proprietor and editor of the Deccan Standard newspaper. In the event of this scheme being carried out, the Deccan Standard, which is at present the only English paper published at Hyderabad, will, in all likelihood, cease to exist.

SPECULATION IS RIFE as to who will succeed Mr. George Palmer as Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Nizam's Government in the P.W.D. Some say that Mr. Syed Hussain is the man, while many, Indian Engineering states, are disposed to think that an R.E. will step in—for instance, Colonel Fox. It is also alleged that Mr. Gauntlett will be provided for on the Godavery Valley Railway project.

SOME RAILWAY SHARES in dispute between the Nizam and Sirdar Dilar Jung Abdul Huk will stir up and bespatter mud, the same paper says. The defendant Sirdar has filed answers to the plaint of the Hyderabad State charging him with fraud to the extent of 60 lacs in respect of 21,500 shares in the Chanda Railway in the possession of Abdul Huk but claimed by the Hyderabad State as its property. The defendant maintains that at the time the scheme was formulated he was granted permission by Sir Salar Jung to receive any remuneration the company might offer him, as they were entirely duties outside of his office as Home Secretary and Director of the Mines and of the Railways of Hyderabad.

A CORRESPONDENT AT HYDERABAD writes on Oct. 2 :—

The Rev. H. Fitzpatrick, who has been for nearly seventeen years chaplain at Chudderghaut, has gone away for a year. His health has not been good of late, and the work in Chudderghaut being heavy, the Bishop of Madras has arranged that he should be gazetted to Pooramallee, a small station on the coast near Madras, and it is hoped the change to the seaside, and the lighter work, will soon restore him. His parishioners presented him with a purse of 700 rs. on leaving, as a small token of their affection and esteem. The Rev. J. English, of the Madras establishment, arrives on the 6th inst. to act for him. He is not a stranger to the place, having been already acting chaplain at Bolaram.

The Nizam's Government are endeavouring to retain the services of Mr. A. C. Newcombe, executive engineer, British Public Works Department, for the survey of the proposed extension of railways in his Highness's dominions. The line from Hammon Kondah through Yelgundel, Indoor, Nandiar, Bhir, and Aurungabad, will in all probability be the one finally decided on, as it opens up the richest parts of the country.

On Monday Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick gave the last of the "Cinderella" dances that have been such a pleasant feature in our amusements during the rains. An unusually large number of people were present, all anxious to show their appreciation of the hospitality extended to them by the genial host and his daughters. Next month will see many new faces at the Residency, as Major and Mrs. Garrett proceed to England on a year's furlough in November, almost immediately after the departure of the Resident.

This month will also witness many changes, as the 7th Hussars leave here for Mhow, and their place will be taken for the present by the 19th Hussars, who in their turn will be relieved by the 21st Hussars from Bangalore, the 21st going there. The first detachment of the 19th Hussars arrive by troop train on Saturday and Sunday, and they at once take over the horses from the 7th. They will be located in the Bedfordshire lines till such time as the 7th vacate the cavalry lines. The detachment of the Bedfordshire that is about to join the 1st battalion at Rawul Pindi leaves to-night. The Bedfordshire, called in those days the 2nd and 16th, commenced its services in India in this station when it arrived in the country in 1876, returning here in 1888 to finish it. We shall part with them with regret, as they have made many friends.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

A LUCKNOW CORRESPONDENT telegraphed on Oct. 6 :—One of the largest public meetings ever held at Lucknow took place last night to protest against the opium traffic. The interest culminated after two hours' speaking in the adoption by acclamation of an anti-opium memorial to the Imperial Government.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOODS are reported from Lucknow. The cellars of the Club, a correspondent says, are full of water, and there is danger of the floor breaking up. A wooden bridge was carried away at noon, and four natives were drowned. Many villages on both the banks are destroyed, and the villagers are seeking refuge on the high ground in hundreds. The Judicial Commissioner's Court is declared unsafe, the floor having sunk several inches. The river seems now to be falling. The lower parts of the city are under water.

THE LEADERS of the Mussulmans and Hindoos at Gaya held a jalsa on Oct. 7, in token of the reconciliation which has taken place between the two parties. The whole town was invited, and a large compound, where the assembly was held, was filled with a crowd of some thousands of people of both religions, mixing amicably together and watching the nautches and other amusements provided for their entertainment. The whole affair was most successfully carried out, and the large mass of people collected were orderly and good-humoured from beginning to end.

THE CONFERENCE which the Governor-General's Agent will hold at Quetta in November will devote itself mainly to the consideration of the fuel question. An examination will be instituted into the progress made in developing the coalfields and petroleum deposits of Beloochistan, and how far these are equal to supplying fuel for railways. Intimately connected with this is the question of forest policy. Petroleum in Beloochistan has proved rather disappointing so far, though nearly 120,000 gallons were supplied to the Chaman Extension Railway in 1890-91.

ACCORDING to a transfrontier correspondent, the first engagement in the campaign between Umra Khan of Jandol and the allied forces of the Khans of Nawaghi, Lalpura, and Girdani has been fought, resulting in a decisive victory for Umra Khan. There were several thousand men engaged on each side, and the losses are said to have been about 180 on the side of the defeated Khans, and only seventeen of Umra Khan's men. If this is confirmed, and if the rest of the campaign goes in favour of Umra Khan, the Ameer will probably be forced to take an active part, because the Khans of Lalpura and Girdani are fighting under his orders and on his behalf. On the other hand, the Government of India should not tolerate the direct interference of the Ameer with the independence of Bajaur and Swat.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

We may note here that an interesting article may be found in the St. James's Gazette of Oct. 21, on the Pamir Question, in which is given a clear account of the position, with a sketch map.

In an article, published on Oct. 19, the Novoe Vremya observes that the meeting of the Russian and British expeditions was inevitable, owing to the fact that the British by their incursions and the Afghans and Chinese by their raids had violated the conventions forbidding them access to the Pamir. The journal considers that it is consequently imperative to determine the exact frontiers of the region in question, and presumes that Russian diplomacy will have no difficulty in establishing the suzerain rights of Russia over this fertile country.

Telegraphing on Oct. 20, the Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent says:—In reference to the Pamirs, though a good deal has been written, nothing of real importance has yet been made known. A general feeling of surprise is expressed at Captain Younghusband complaining of being turned back. The conviction prevails that the matter will be easily and amicably settled.

A telegram from Berlin, dated Oct. 22, states that the Russian expedition to the Pamir is making preparations to winter at Ak-Baital Valley, hoping to be able to draw supplies from the adjacent fertile region of Tagharma.

The Standard correspondent telegraphs from St. Petersburg (Oct. 22):—The Press here asserts that a Conference will be called on the Pamir Question, to meet at St. Petersburg. But before such a body could set to work it would be necessary, as a preliminary step, that a Commission should visit the spot, and, as the winter is approaching, no expedition could start now for six months. Consequently, the talk about a Conference may be dismissed for the present as merely idle gossip.

The Novoe Vremya is informed from Cabul that the Ameer of Afghanistan has sent an extraordinary mission to Russia, in order to conclude a Russo-Afghan commercial treaty.

Reuter telegraphs from St. Petersburg (Oct. 21):—The reports recently circulated of an impending invasion of the Russian Turkestan province of Ferghana by a relation of Koudaiar, the former Khan of Kokhand, are devoid of foundation. After the annexation of the Khanate of Kokhand by Russia the members of Koudaiar's family entered the Russian service, and at present they hold official posts in Turkestan. Indeed, Mirza Hakim Ouminow, who formerly used his influence with Koudaiar to induce him to abdicate, is at the present moment staying in this capital. He has, moreover, entered the Russian service, and bears the title of Councillor of State.

A report from Peking gives a more detailed account of the endeavours made by the Chinese to stop the progress of the Russian expedition. This incident has already been mentioned by our Indian contemporaries. It seems that the Chinese frontier officer, Chang, met the Russian expedition coming down from the Alai Plateau, near Murghabi, a place on the Murghab River not far from its confluence with the Aksu (Upper Oxus), and protested in the name of the Chinese Government against their entering Chinese territory. The Russians, however, being in much greater force than the Chinese, disregarded Chang's representations, and continued their march for some distance, subsequently dividing into two parties, one proceeding to the Alichur Pamir and the other to the Great Pamir.

Reuter telegraphs from St. Petersburg, under date Oct. 19:—In view of the possibility of complications arising between Russia and China in connection with the alleged infringement of the Chinese frontier by Russian expeditions, the military governor of the Siberian Transbaikal province has ordered the removal of all Jews residing within a distance of 100 kilometres of the Chinese frontier in order to prevent their being employed as spies by the Chinese. The families of exiled Jews who have taken up their residence with the exiles in Siberia will be sent back to the districts of the Empire especially assigned to Jews for their permanent and obligatory residence.

When Captain Younghusband, on his arrival at Bozai Gumbaz, found Russian detachments on the Little Pamir and heard of more to the north, he sent off Lieutenant Davison to Alichur Pamir to discover what was the strength of the main body. This, says the Times of India, was before receiving the notice to quit, which he eventually had to obey owing to his having no escort with him to enforce his right to remain on neutral ground. Lieutenant Davison journeyed past Wood's Lake (Sarikol) and then turned to the north-west to another lake, the Yashil Kul, into which the Alichur river empties itself. He reached the village of Somartash on the western extremity of this second lake, having crossed the high range, in which the principal passes are the Bash Gumbaz and Khargosh. He was then on the borders of the Afghan province of Shighnan, which marches with the Chinese territory, and he no doubt thought that he could not possibly be interfered with by the Russians. The latter, however, had practically taken possession of Alichur Pamir and the valley through which the river of that name runs, and they promptly ordered him to leave. He was not allowed to rejoin Captain Younghusband, and so took a northern route to Yarkand.

In alluding to "the cloud in Central Asia," the Pioneer remarks that when General Kuropatkin was appointed Governor-General of the Trans-Caspian Province, it was a foregone conclusion that there would very quickly follow significant indications of Russian activity in Central Asia. He is one of the most ambitious soldiers in the Czar's army; he is wedded to the scheme, which Skobelev believed possible, of disturbing British rule in India; and he has about as much respect for a boundary line as a Cossack has for a Jew. We have quite enough evidence to show that the Russians have made their preliminary moves from Merv on the one hand, and Charjui on the other. This does not imply war in a month or even a year, but it indicates that Kuropatkin is not going to sit idle and trust to chance for an easy march into Afghan territory when he is ordered to cross the frontier. Like a chess-player, he looks to make his "opening" as effective as possible. As to the affair of the Pamirs it is serious enough as it stands, but we have almost exhausted the subject during the past few days. The "exploration" of the Hindoo Kush Passes was a movement made in sympathy with the military activity at Merv and elsewhere. Its very boldness insured its success, and we have seen how well the coup of expelling Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison was delivered. Stormy petrels of the Russian army like Kuropatkin and Gromchevsky will rejoice at the prospect of Russia and England being embroiled by this incident; their trade is war, and they are reckless of consequences when the prospect of a campaign opens before them, but it is difficult to believe that M. de Giers will continue to give them a free hand in Central Asia. If he does, then the cloud in that quarter will very rapidly become charged with all the elements of danger and disturbance.

The Cabul correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette recently narrated the efforts which the Ameer was making to conciliate the foreign merchants at Cabul, whose trade through Afghanistan he has ruined by extortionate duties. The meeting of the merchants was, however, unsatisfactory, and our contemporary learns from a Peshawur correspondent that the Ameer has renewed his efforts there, having instructed his traffic agent to hold a meeting of the merchants and promise them better treatment in future if they will resume their trade via Afghanistan. It adds:—When complaints were reaching us every day of the exorbitant duties levied by the Ameer's agents, we warned his Highness that he was killing the goose that laid the golden eggs, and any farm wife will tell him that the goose is a bird which it is much more easy to kill than to bring to life again. If, however, he keeps the promises now made to the merchants, it may not be quite too late now to prevent the complete extinction of the through caravan trade.

M. VAMBÉRY ON THE PAMIR QUESTION.

The following letter, from Professor Vambéry, appears in this morning's Times:—

SIR,—Finding that a paper of mine, which I published in the Pester Lloyd on receiving the news of Russia's recent encroachment upon the Pamir, and of which you also printed an extract in your columns, has been variously commented upon by the English and Continental Press, I must ask the hospitality of your valuable space to enlarge my views on this subject, and to explain my reasons for my assertion that Russia has no right whatever to claim the district of Alichur, or even of Little Pamir, as her own, on the ground that this outlying portion of the Pamir was an integral part of the former possessions of Bokhara or of Ferghana.

As far as historical evidence can be traced, it may be easily proved that the countries adjoining the Pamir on the west—namely, Badakhshan, Roshan, Shugnan, Dervaz, and Wakhan—have belonged to the descendants of Timur, whose central seat was in Herat, and who were the undisputed masters of the whole country that we call Afghanistan to-day. After the overthrow of the Timurides by Sheihani Mehemed Khan, the founder of the Oezbeg dynasty in Central Asia, certain portions of the said territory—namely, Badakhshan, Roshan, and Dervaz—were theoretically annexed to Bokhara, but no sooner had the Afghans consolidated their power in the north of the Hindoo Koosh than the aforesaid principalities became partly independent and partly gave allegiance to the rulers of Cabul, in spite of the remonstrances of the then Emirs of Bokhara and of Khokand. When Wood made his memorable journey to the sources of the Oxus, having become thus the first explorer of the Pamir after Marco Polo and Goes, he owed his success greatly to the then prevalent influence of the Afghans over the western portion of the Pamir, and from 1838 up to the present the claim of Afghanistan over the petty Khanates was fairly acknowledged, and temporary rebellions against Cabul were only fostered by the Emirs of Bokhara.

Similar to the position of Afghanistan in the west of the Pamir were the relations of China to the north-eastern portion of that high plateau called the "Roof of the World." When China took possession of Kashgar in 1759, the Chinese General, in pursuing the leading Khodjas, is said also to have penetrated as far as into Badakhshan; but, taking this as an exaggeration on the part of the victorious Chinaman, we can, nevertheless, take it for granted that the sway of the Celestial Empire over the eastern portion of Pamir has since that time always extended upon the Pamir as far as the Sari-Kol district. Although Captain (now Colonel) Trotter modestly says that the boundaries laid down on the map accompanying the "Report of a Mission to Yarkand in 1873-74," by the late Sir Douglas Forsyth, are approximate only, and ought not to be considered authoritative, yet it is beyond all doubt that Tashkurgan has always remained Chinese, and that Wakhan, the Little Pamir, as well as the Alichur Pamir, if regarded by Russia as a debatable ground, or even as nobody's land, might well form the subject of a dispute between China and Afghanistan; but never and by no means can it be claimed by Russia, whose rights, as the ruler of the ancient Khokand, entitle her only to the northern slopes of the Alai Mountains, and not further southwards than to the Muk-su, in the Trans-Alai district. In support of this assertion of mine, I beg leave to remark that the Kara-Kirghizes, who roam with their flocks on this table-land when anxious to escape the tax-collectors of the former Khans of Khokand, always took refuge in the Khargush and Reng-kul Pamir as being non-Khokand territory, where they thought themselves safe from oppression, and where the Khokandee tax-collectors never dared to pursue them, in order not to come into collision with the Chinese outposts.

Under the aforesaid conditions it is difficult to comprehend the reasons which the Cabinet of St. Petersburg will adduce in favour of her claim upon the Little Pamir and Alichur. It was in 1872 and 1873, when the diplomatic correspondence about the region of the Upper Oxus was carried on between London and St. Petersburg, that Prince Gortchakoff gave his consent to a delimitation by the Murghab (an affluent of the Upper Oxus) of the Russian sphere of influence, or, as was said at that time, to the southern boundary of the Khanate of Bokhara. Owing to our insufficient geographical knowledge of the Pamir region this arrangement was illegitimus rather of an academical value; but still it denoted the ne plus ultra of Russian aspirations, and we are really at a loss to understand how the same Government can now come forward with the pretension that the region nearly 150 kilometres further southwards can be also incorporated in the said Russian sphere of influence without any palpable reason of conquest or voluntary cession.

It is, therefore, the mildest expression we can use in speaking of encroachment, and if we inquire into the reasons or the ultimate scope of this newest Russian advance towards India, we cannot say that it is the mere insatiable earth-hunger which actuates her, but the hidden desire of doing mischief, or, plainly speaking, her intention of augmenting the ways and means by which she believes herself to be capable of approaching the outer limits of the Indian Empire by tampering with Gilgit, Yassin, and Chitral through her active agents, and by creating disturbances among the easily inflammable elements in the north of Cashmere. As to the possibility of marching an army across the wilderness of Pamir, I daresay even the most sanguine Russian military adventurer will consider it twice before he ventures to cross a wholly uninhabited country of high barren mountains and of steep passes, available only during a few months in summer, and totally inaccessible during the winter. A march, à la Gourko, feasible in the Balkan, is utterly impossible over the high passes of the Kizil Art (4,440 m.), the Ters-Akar (3,700 m.), the Chimchiblik (4,540 m.), the Chihil Gumbaz (3,140 m.), and many other routes of great altitude leading from the north to the south; and it is perhaps only a very small detachment of foolhardy adventurers who might try to plunge in the wilderness of the Pamir, but whose final result is greatly questionable. In fact, as far as historical record goes, no army has ever crossed from Bokhara and Khokand across the Pamir to India, and if the Russians, nevertheless, try to penetrate into this region, it is only their intention of political mole-work, for the Russian rouble has frequently proved more effective and more dangerous than the Russian gun.

The great question which remains to be answered is always whether England will and can acquiesce in the recent move of her northern rival, and whether she will remain indifferent on seeing how the semi-circle of Russian conquest is fastening round the north-west and north-east of Afghanistan. Quite recently a rumour has been spread in the papers that Emir Abdurrahman does not care much about Wakhan, but this thought is evidently the child of Russian desire, for it seems quite improbable that the present ruler of Afghanistan, so anxious to validate his right in the outlying skirts of his kingdom, will show indifference towards a Russian footing on the Little Pamir. This is decidedly a mistake. Shugnan, Roshan, and Wakhan are de jure and de facto integral parts of Afghanistan, and England cannot exonerate herself of the obligations to protect her ally in this part of his territory, as she has done in the north-west. Of course, the result will be a new delimitation of the Russo-Afghan frontier, a continuation of the line between Puli Khatun and Bosaga in a further north-eastern direction to a point on the Pamir which has to be settled. A material benefit can hardly be expected from this prolonged frontier of greater length without strength, but it will serve as a provisional barrier to Russian encroachment, and it will show that England, having broken with her old policy of laissez aller, keeps a watchful eye on the doings of her rival, even in the remotest and obscurest portion of Asiatic ground.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been published since our last issue:—

SINGAPORE, Oct. 21 (Times).—Shanghai advices up to the 10th inst. state that everything continues outwardly quiet. Missionaries who have arrived from the interior have been ordered by the Consuls not to return. The French squadron is arriving. The distribution of violent literature still continues.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22 (Dalziel).—Shanghai advices just received here give details of the rebellion in the province of Fukien. The centre of the rebellion was the city of Thema (?). The insurgent leader was a man named Chen, and he had a force of 2,000 men under him. The banner which led his troops bore the words, "Sweep away the Tsing dynasty and tranquillise the people." The force was gathered under the pretence of opposing the labourers at the salt works. Incense was burnt and prayers were offered for success before the banner was unfurled. The first expedition was directed against the salt works, the offices of which were stormed and burnt. The deputy-superintendent and his assistants fled. The rebels seized one man and nailed his hands and feet to a board, and then cut him in pieces as a sacrifice to the flag. Chow, the local magistrate, gave up his post to a new magistrate, Thas, two days before the outbreak. There was no time to take precautionary measures before the insurgents, flushed with their first success, attempted to seize the city. The deputy-magistrate Yu raised a thousand volunteers, and repulsed the rebels, who thereupon began a siege. The volunteers held out for three days. But then provisions ran short, and the insurgents scaled the walls and captured the city. They immediately released all the prisoners. Chow escaped, but Yu was last seen fighting against heavy odds. Chow reported the insurrection to the nearest Government military authorities, who sent forward a thousand soldiers, in fear of whom the insurgents abandoned the city and encamped on a hill. A large number of men on both sides were said to have been killed in the fighting. The rebels killed all their prisoners. An epidemic of cholera is reported from Amoy. Among the dead were a number of English and American missionaries. Mr. M'Gregor, the doctor of the Church of England Mission, and his wife are reported among the victims. They died six hours after being seized, and were buried on the same day. The Chinese were dying by hundreds. Coffins were being brought from the interior as the local supply was not equal to the requirements. In the villages the people, instead of taking preventive measures, spent their time in worshipping the "god of sickness and death," and a great deal of money was being spent in burning sacrifices and acting plays to please this terrible deity. The United States war vessels Charleston and Monocacy were at Yokohama, and Her Majesty's ship Alert arrived there on Oct. 5 from the Behring Sea.

HONG KONG, Sept. 23 (Reuter).—A great sensation has been caused by the arrest of Mr. Mason, an English official in the Imperial Customs, on the charge of being in league with the dreaded Chinese Secret Society, Kolao-Hui, and assisting to provide them with arms, ammunition, and dynamite. On Sept. 14 three telegrams from different sources reached Chinkiang saying that a Mr. Mason, of the Customs, who had been away on a short holiday, should be stopped on the arrival there of the steamer Chiyuen, and that he should be searched. This was done, and in his baggage was found a quantity of dynamite weighing between five and ten pounds. Moreover, he was found to be in charge of thirty-seven cases, which were stated in the bill of lading to contain steel rails, but which really were filled with rifles. Mr. Mason was afterwards taken to Shanghai, where he has undergone a close interrogation, being meanwhile set at liberty. He has since written a long and remarkable letter to a newspaper, in which he denies that he had any intention of conspiring against the Chinese Government, or of taking service with the Kolao-Hui, but states that he has been trying to gain admittance to the councils of the latter, in order to obtain information which might be of serious value to foreigners.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 23 (Times).—The Yangtse Valley is now quiet. The case of Mr. Mason is being strongly urged by Sir R. Hart's enemies in China as an argument for his dismissal.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 23 (Dalziel, Times).—Tseng-Kouo-Ch'uan, the Chinese Viceroy at Nankin, is paying the foreign claims for compensation arising out of the disturbances at Wuhu. At the Yangtse ports there are now eight war ships, and here there are twelve. The British admiral squadron is at Nagasaki. Viceroy Li's northern squadron is still in dock at Port Arthur. Everything is apparently quiet.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph writes:—The Sviet, the organ of the Slavonic party, declares that the present difficulties of China with four of the great Powers constitute a splendid opportunity for Russia to annex and extend her protectorates in Central and Eastern Asia.

On Oct. 20 the French Cabinet considered the question of increasing the subsidy to Tonquin and Cochinchina, now ten and eight millions respectively. It was decided to grant five millions more in order to construct twelve new gunboats and to incorporate 3,000 militiamen in the Anamite Tirailleur Regiments. This would make the Tonquin force consist of 7,500 Frenchmen and 9,000 natives.

The Standard publishes a long letter from Lord Connemara on the situation in China. Lord Connemara, who is now staying in London, writes:—"Your correspondent confirms the impression at which I arrived when travelling in the disturbed districts—that the riots have been caused by the teaching of the literati and the influence of the 'Kolao-hwei' Secret Society. These two forces have so taken hold of the rabble which exists in all Chinese cities, that they have been able to accomplish the mischief they have for a long time been desirous of bringing about.

"The agitation at Ichang was not originally directed against the missionaries. One day, while the Commissioner of Customs, Count d'Arnon, and I were sitting at dinner, a mob of several hundred persons forced themselves into the room and began tossing about the furniture. We were living in an old temple, and the excuse they made was that a Joss had been removed from the temple, and that this was the cause of the bad harvest. I need not say that this allegation was false. After doing a certain amount of damage the mob withdrew, and the authorities caused several to be punished.

"The outrages on convents and churches lower down the river then extended to Ichang, and it is grievous to read of the violence and brutality to which the nuns have been subjected. I happen to know the Reverend Mother at Ichang very well, as she was stationed at Ootacamund for some years before she was ordered to China. A more gentle, hard-working, and devoted lady does not exist. At Ichang she and the Sisters spend their lives in school and hospital work, and numbers of poor Chinese mothers bring their children to the convent, imploring the nuns to take them. This is the case not only at Ichang, but at all the places in China where the Sisters are carrying on their charitable labours. It does not seem to be known in England that poor parents are constantly in the habit of selling their children in China; and in many instances they prefer to bring them to the Sisters, whom they know will nurse, feed, clothe, and educate them. In the steamer upon which I travelled from Ichang to Hankow last June there were sixty children in charge of a Chinaman, who had bought them at Chungking, and was taking them to Shanghai.

"All statements to the effect that children are brought to the convents by the persuasion or stratagem of the nuns are foolish, but mischievous, fabrications. The Sisters have far more children on their hands than they can manage, and no persuasion is necessary to induce parents to leave their infants in the convents.

I have seen a great deal of missionary work in various parts of Asia, and I can affirm that none is more beneficent, or carried on with less friction to the religious feeling of the natives, than the work to which these Franciscan and Vincent de Paul Sisters are devoting their lives.

"With the political situation I cannot now deal. It is complicated and difficult. England has no wish to weaken the very weak Government of China. The Pekin Government is as bad as possible for administrative purposes—corrupt and obstinate. The European Powers have different policies. Russia and France have designs of territorial aggression, and Germany is moving heaven and earth to supplant England in the markets of China. I have, therefore, little faith in any policy based upon European concert, which, I trust, may never be attempted. But I hope and believe that our Foreign Office is both willing and able to make the Chinese Government feel that we cannot permit a repetition of those barbarous outrages which have occurred on the Yangtze during the past few months. Allow me, in reference to your correspondent's letter, to say we have no better Consul in China than Mr. Everard, of Ichang, and Sir Robert Hart has no more able or prudent Commissioner than Count d'Arnon. So, if faults are committed, they will not lie at the door of these excellent men."

A correspondent writes from Berlin on Oct. 22:—The statement that Germany will take the lead in any common action of the Powers against China is altogether a mistake. Such an idea has never been mooted, but the question has been considered whether, in the event of a joint naval demonstration in Chinese waters, the supreme control should not be entrusted to the German Minister at Pekin, as the doyen of the Diplomatic Corps. None of the Powers concerned raised any objection, but the matter is, of course, still in abeyance.

The Shenpao gives a long and highly imaginative description of the riot at Ichang by its correspondent there. It describes the crowd as incited by the loss of a child, and how, "increasing every moment, it rolled on like a mighty wave, and its confused murmur resembled the rending asunder of a mountain . . . thousands upon thousands blocked up all the streets," &c., &c. It attributes to the "knowing ones" the diversion of the crowd from the Consulate and custom-house, which is a confession that it was not a mere sudden mob which did the damage. "The civil and military officials were utterly exhausted in their exertions to keep order"—when the whole affair did not last half an hour. Then we learn to our astonishment that it was not the people after all, but that "the rioters were principally crews on board the Kueipu boats."

The China Mail of Sept. 8 says:—"A propos of the disturbances in the north it may or may not be a significant fact that the following shipment of arms and ammunition has been made by a European agent here to-day for Shanghai:—100 Winchester repeating rifles with 10,000 rounds of cartridges, 50 'Bull Dog' revolvers with 5,000 cartridges, and 50 Martini-Henry rifles with 10,000 cartridges. The shipment was made by the s.s. Chiyuen. It is said that the arms and ammunition have been ordered by that lively organisation known as the Ko-lao Hui." As soon as this became known telegrams were sent to Shanghai, and in consequence the Customs were on the alert, and after the Chiyuen arrived here they seized thirty-five boxes of rifles, pistols, and ammunition. The articles had been put on board as merchandise; consequently the nature of the contents was not known to those on board the vessel.

We take the following items from the North China Herald of Sept. 18:—

Mr. W. B. Russell has been appointed Commissioner of Customs at Chin Kiang.

Mr. Mowat, the acting Chief Justice and Consul-General, will leave Shanghai on Oct. 3 to take up the duties of Judge at Yokohama, relieving Mr. N. J. Hannen, who is expected to arrive in Shanghai about the 15th of the same month. Mr. Jamieson, the Assistant Judge, is to be in Shanghai before Mr. Mowat's departure.

It is very rarely that there is so large a gathering at the New Cemetery as was present on Wednesday evening at the funeral of Mr. Charles F. Woodward. He was one of the most generally popular of the younger residents of Shanghai, a good cricketer, a genial companion, and public-spirited withal, as he showed by the energy he evinced as honorary secretary of the cricket club. The circumstances of his death added to the sadness which always accompanies the quenching of so much promise so soon: he was taken ill just as the Hong Kong team were arriving, and his long struggle, the hope that he would yet conquer, increased, if possible, the sorrow his many friends felt when that hope was finally disappointed. The Rev. H. C. Hodges conducted the funeral service. The coffin was covered with wreaths and crosses of flowers, one of them a graceful tribute from the Hong Kong Cricket Team, and it was borne to the grave by Messrs. Arthur Anderson, president of the cricket club, C. Evans, A. Macleod, J. Orman, W. Bruce Robertson, C. S. Sharp, R. W. Shaw, Murray Stewart, H. T. Wade, and T. Wood. Mr. Akew and the cricket-ground boys were present, with other Chinese who had known Mr. Woodward.

One of Shanghai's oldest residents, Mr. George Grout, died in the Shanghai General Hospital on Sept. 14. The deceased, who came out to China in 1856, was formerly in the British Navy, and was decorated with India and China medals.

The following telegrams have been received from Siam:—

BANGKOK, Oct. 20.—An unusual amount of pressure has been brought to bear upon the Siamese Government with a view to obtaining for German subjects the benefit of the annual contracts. The British Minister has been compelled to intervene in order to protect the Native Government from the consequences of any weakness in this matter.—(Standard.)

SINGAPORE, Oct. 20.—Prince Prachak, who is by his ancestry connected with the Mekong Valley, left Bangkok on the 8th with his family to establish a Government at Mouang Hong Kai. He takes with him well-bred cattle and selected seeds. Siamese deputies will shortly leave for other districts of the Mekong.—(Times.)

SINGAPORE, Oct. 21.—Mr. Murray Campbell, a Singapore contractor who is building the Perak and Selangor Railways, has tendered to construct the Korat Railway, a Siamese Government undertaking, for 9½ million ticals, against 12 millions tendered by a German house. Mr. Campbell is backed by Messrs. Jardine & Matheson, of London and China, and will almost certainly get the contract. The price is equal to about 6,500*l.* a mile.—(Times.)

State Purchase of Iron and Steel-Work in India.—An interesting monograph has been issued giving the history of the agitation against the recent regulations restricting the State purchase of iron and steelwork in India. The pamphlet includes the memorial submitted last year to the Governor-General in Council, the recently published Resolution of the Government of India on the subject, and various press opinions. It does not appear, an Indian paper says, that the industries concerned are, as a whole, satisfied with the concession of last June. These concessions are regarded generally as of rather a graceless and grudging character, and it is thought that their value to the Indian manufacturer will largely depend upon the interpretation which is put upon them by the Government. The clause which notifies that rigid adherence to the limited list of items specified as purchasable in India is not necessary is very naturally regarded with distrust; and it is to be hoped that it will not be used as a means of defeating the obvious intention of the Resolution.

The Shipment of Unstamped Cotton Piece Goods to China.—An ordinary meeting of the Board of Directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce was held on Oct. 21. Mr. Henry Lee (president) occupied the chair, and there were also present Sir F. Forbes Adam, C.I.E., Mr. Robert Barclay, Mr. Gustav Behrens, Mr. J. A. Beith, Mr. Benjamin Carver, Mr. G. F. Fisher, Mr. William Fogg, Mr. W. H. Holland, Mr. J. Thewlis Johnson, Mr. Duncan MacMahon, Mr. Alfred Neild, Mr. Samuel Ogden, Mr. Reuben Spencer, and Mr. John Thomas. A letter from the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce was read, stating that for some time past a practice had prevailed of importing into China cotton piece goods bearing no kind of trade mark or "chop"—the term commonly applied to trade marks in that country. Such goods are sent by the original Chinese buyer to the ports on the Yangtze-kiang, the northern ports, and to the large inland centres, where the packages are opened and the pieces stamped with the exact imitation of the well-known trade marks of English firms. The goods then pass into the hands of retail dealers and consumers, who accept them as genuine. This fraudulent practice is difficult to deal with in China, because there is no legal provision for the registration of trade marks. In a few instances, however, where this malpractice has been detected and traced to its source, it has been brought under the notice of the Chinese authorities, who have issued a proclamation to the effect that these falsely marked goods would be liable to confiscation. Notwithstanding this action the practice complained of has continued to extend, and the Shanghai Chamber is endeavouring to secure the co-operation of the Native Piece Goods Guild. The object of the letter from the Shanghai Chamber was to suggest to the Manchester Chamber that possibly the shipment of "non-chopped" English goods for a purpose so evidently fraudulent is an offence which might be dealt with under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887. The confident opinion was also expressed that if the Manchester firms who have hitherto executed orders for "non-chopped" goods had been aware of the fraudulent purpose for which they were intended all orders for them would have been declined. The letter was referred to the Trade and Merchandise Marks Committee.

LONDON: MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1891.

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

THE latest developments of the Central Asian Question are so complicated, and in some ways so mysterious, that the English Press can hardly be blamed for not at once perceiving the true and full significance of the situation. We have yet to learn what it was that the Russians said or did to CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND, who these particular Russians were, and under whose orders they were acting. Still less do we know the precise nature of the claims which Russia relies on to justify whatever action she has taken. Lastly, if these claims extend over the Pamirs, it would be difficult to say either how far they can be justified or how far they ought to be repudiated and resisted. Afghanistan, Bokhara, Russia, and China meet on the Roof of the World, but the frontier lines of each are undefined, and with so many unknown factors, any attempt to furnish an accurate solution of the problem would be hopeless. In these circumstances it was only natural that the comments of the English press should be vague and in some cases extravagant. A clear, sensible, and accurate exposition was not to be looked for. As we have already pointed out, however, more than one leading newspaper has given currency to opinions which are singularly wide of the mark, and it may serve a useful purpose to indicate the main points on which there is likely to be any dispute between England and Russia, as well the more important considerations which will have to be taken into account when dealing with such a dispute. To begin with, it may be noted that a serious conflict of opposing interests is by no means the inevitable consequence of recent events. The Anglo-Indian Press is just a little inclined to exaggerate the urgency and gravity of the case, and this inclination to make the worst of things is to be deprecated. Had the frontiers of Afghanistan in this region been defined at the proper time, there would be no uncertainty now. As it is, the question has been left open till the Russians are actually on the spot. We must now make the best bargain we can, and there is no reason why we should not make a fairly satisfactory one by diplomatic arrangement.

It is with regard to Afghanistan, probably, that the worst difficulties are to be anticipated. Whatever the Russians may say, Wakhan, Shignan, and Roshan are territories belonging of right to the AMEER ABDUL RAHMAN, of Afghanistan, and we are bound by treaty to protect him from external aggression. The position of Wakhan, in which are situated the Great and Little Pamirs, must especially be borne in mind. During the negotiations in the AMEER SHERE ALI'S time, the Russians at first asserted that Wakhan was an independent state; but they afterwards abandoned this contention. PRINCE GORTCHAKOW'S memorandum, communicated to LORD DERRY in May 1875, contains the following passage:—"Under these circumstances the Imperial Cabinet, anxious not to defer further the settlement of the question, consented in their despatch of the 19th Jan., 1873, to the incorporation of Badakshan and Wakhan in the Afghan territory." From that arrangement the English Government has never receded. We may also give SIR HENRY RAWLINSON'S account of the bargain:—

Ultimately (Sir Henry said), in 1873, the point was conceded, and Badakshan and Wakhan were admitted by the two Governments to form a portion of Shere Ali's patrimonial territory. The frontiers of these districts were not discussed, but it was assumed in a general way that the Oxus was the limitary line between the Afghan districts to the south, and Bokhara or Kirghiz territory to the north. Later exploration has shown, however, that this was altogether a wrong assumption.

The Russian Foreign Office, in 1883, when the AMEER

ABDUL RAHMAN occupied the adjoining Khanates of Shignan and Roshan, pretended to put a different interpretation on the compact; but whatever may have been our understanding with Russia, we were pledged to the Afghans, and are bound to defend Wakhan if the AMEER asks us to. Here, however, another consideration enters into the case. It is by no means certain that the AMEER wants us to keep Wakhan for him. He makes very little out of these Afghan provinces; Afghan rule is detested by the people; and, last of all, his Highness may have reasons of his own for taking up an attitude of masterly inactivity. Should the report that he has abandoned his claims to the Khanate be confirmed, we shall then have to decide the question whether, as a simple matter of expediency, it is necessary to place obstacles in Russia's path. Here, again, we must guard against exaggeration. It is not a case of "scuttling," of evacuating a position actually held, of relinquishing a conquest, always to be deprecated as an acknowledgment of injustice, or incapacity or fear. If our obligations to the AMEER are cancelled, the matter must be considered on its merits; and there is something to be said on both sides. We have seen to what lengths of hysterical jingoism Anglo-Indian opinion, as quoted the other day by the Standard, may go. Against this we may set the moderate counsels given by LORD LYTTON at a time when, as may happen now, our engagements to the Afghans had ceased for a while to be binding. LORD LYTTON wrote:—

I am aware that great stress has been laid on our retention of Wakhan, through which lies the only high road of commerce between Eastern and Western Central Asia. If we are prepared boldly to cross the great mountain range, occupy the valleys of the Oxus on one side and Kashgaria on the other; and contest Central and Northern Asia with Russia, then undoubtedly we should never allow Wakhan to pass out of our hands. But if, as I hold, we should in the main confine ourselves to the south of the great mountain range, only occupying such points beyond it as are absolutely necessary for the protection of India, then I think Wakhan should naturally pass into the hands of the Power that spreads over the north of the mountains.

We do not say these arguments are unanswerable, but they will demand due consideration should it prove a fact that the AMEER no longer regards Wakhan as an integral part of Afghanistan. In this connection we may mention that according to one story, CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND remonstrated with the leaders of the Russian Expedition, telling them that they were on Afghan territory, to which they replied, it is said, that they were there by the AMEER'S permission. It is useless, however, to draw deductions from rumours of this kind. For the present it is enough to know that for the next five or six months nothing can be done, either by the Russians or ourselves, on the Pamirs. These high plateaux are already covered thickly with snow. Even our outpost at Gilghit will be cut off from communication with India; and whether the English Government decides that Wakhan is to be retained within the British sphere or to be handed over to Russia, it would be impossible, till next spring, to carry out any such decision. Still, the interval may be profitably spent in ascertaining the views of the Indian authorities, and also in discovering whether the Russian Government considers itself bound in any way by the agreement of 1873. Another subject for investigation is the extent of Chinese rights and claims on the Pamir. On this point we may have something to say in a further article.

The question of Afghan claims, however, must not be dismissed without a passing reference to HERR VAMBÉRY'S letter on "The Pamir Question," published in the Times this morning. HERR VAMBÉRY contrives to make a remarkable series of blunders. He speaks of SHEIHANI MEHEMMED (a misprint for SHEIBANI) as the founder of the "Oesbeg (sic) dynasty in Central Asia." According to MR. HOWORTH'S "History of the Mongols," the founder of the power of the Usbegs was ABULKHAIR, SHEIBANI'S grandfather. HERR VAMBÉRY, again, states that when CAPTAIN WOOD, of the Indian Navy, made his memorable journey to the sources of the Oxus, "he owed his success greatly to the then prevalent influence of the Afghans over the western portion of the Pamir." We may observe that MURAD BEG, of Kunduz, who at the time of Wood's journey was the leading chief north of the Hindu Kush, was not an Afghan but an Usbeg. Then HERR VAMBÉRY states that from 1838 up to the present time, the claims of Afghanistan over the petty Khanates were fairly acknowledged. This is hardly consistent with the fact that, in 1839, the KHAN OF KOKAND compelled the people of Shignan to recognise his authority. According to MR. SCHUYLER, Shignan and Darwaz continued to pay tribute to Kokand till that State was annexed by Russia. Next we may note HERR VAMBÉRY'S assertion that "Tashkurghan always remained Chinese"; that is, we presume, since the Chinese conquest of Kashgaria. In a report submitted to the Indian Foreign Office in 1883, the late MR. DALGLEISH wrote: "It was solely on my strong recommendation that the Chinese occupied Sirikol or Tashkurghan." Lastly, we may protest against HERR VAMBÉRY'S reference to the Murghab river as an affluent of the Upper Oxus. According to all the best authorities, the Murghab is the main stream of the great river. HERR VAMBÉRY'S endeavour to show, on historical grounds, that the Russians have no right on the Pamir, will not carry much weight if his facts and dates are so strangely incorrect.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS AGITATION.

WE agree with a contemporary that the draft memorial which has been privately circulated among the officers of the Indian Staff Corps is not a regular document. It may, however, serve the purpose of indicating to those who have assumed charge of the movement how many of their brother officers share their views. With the best intentions in the world the leaders have acted a little precipitately in sending round a draft which had not been submitted to those whom they expect to support it. It professes to be addressed to the House of Commons "through the Secretary of State," who cannot be asked to undertake any such duty. Moreover, as one contemporary points out, and as those concerned were some weeks ago warned by telegraph, printed petitions are not received by the House of Commons. We see that the gentlemen who are guiding the movement state that the intention is to ask MR. H. S. KING, M.P., to take the matter up. MR. KING has as yet made no pledge to advocate the case, though he has expressed his readiness to give the alleged grievances of the Indian Staff Corps his best consideration. Moreover, he is of opinion that the matter should first be brought before the Secretary of State and the military authorities, and that before this has been done it would be inadvisable to refer the question to the House of Commons.

The circular which has been issued to Members of Parliament and others as a statement of grievances appears to us to be not sufficiently explicit to be convincing to non-military readers. A fuller and more detailed exposition of the case is advisable. If we may offer our counsel to those who are moving in the matter we should recommend them not to incur the risk of failure by presenting a case which has been imperfectly worked up. The Uncovenanted Service were occupied for months in getting together and setting forth in detail the arguments for their case, and in substantiating it from personal experiences and a careful review of the regulations. This ought to be done, and carefully done by the Staff Corps, which may risk important interests by hasty or perfunctory action at the outset.

The responsibility for the choice of agents to receive subscriptions rests, we are informed, entirely with those officers in India who have charge of the movement, and appears to us to be a matter of no importance. It certainly does not imply on the part of the agents selected any other obligation than that of receiving the funds, and naturally does not involve them in any responsibility for the action of the promoters. We see no reason why reception of the funds should be confined to one agent, if to name others would increase the facility of collection.

THE IMPERIAL DEFENCE OF INDIA.

IN the issue of the Standard for Oct. 17 will be found an interesting summary of the work accomplished under the scheme for the Imperial Defence of India instituted by LORD DUFFERIN. Less than three years have elapsed since the first steps were taken towards training the contingents of Native States for active service. Nearly 20,000 men have already been disciplined and armed, although in some of the more important States—notably Hyderabad—nothing has been done as yet. It is possible, and unless some unforeseen cause should prevent the Government from continuing in this course, it is very probable, that the number of men in the disciplined forces of the Native States of India will before long reach 40,000 or 50,000.

There can be no doubt that some of the material placed at our disposal by the native princes is of an admirable kind. Especially is this true of the Punjab. The men in the new forces are equal to the best soldiers in our Sikh and Punjab regiments, and their officers are specially chosen from men of good family. There are now some 6,000 men, who are equal, perhaps, in training, and certainly in physique, to the best men in the Native Army. If they had the advantage of being led and handled by British officers, they would probably behave as well in action as our best troops. In Rajpootana very good results have also been obtained, especially in the mounted branch of the service. It is claimed that by the successful working of this scheme, not only has a considerable addition to the numerical strength of our army been made at a trifling cost, but the military spirit and enthusiasm of the warlike princes of India have been evoked and enlisted on the side of the Government.

There are, besides minor States, three large States which have yet to be brought under the scheme. Something has been done in Gwalior. The work has not been begun yet in Hyderabad, Indore, or Bhopal. The difficulty, and it is a very real one, in applying the scheme to these States and to Gwalior, lies in the fact that a large proportion of the troops entertained by them consists of mercenaries. It cannot be denied that the policy of training and arming up to our own standard the troops of native princes is a bold one, which has its risks. In the Punjab and Rajpootana, where the men are of the same caste or clan as their princes and can be trusted always to follow their natural leaders, there is not so much danger of inconvenience from the creation of a powerful native force not under the immediate control of British officers. But where the forces to be trained are not recruited from the natives of the State, and are bound to the Prince who employs them by no tie higher than that of a merely mercenary nature, one may well pause before making them in arms and training equal to our own troops. It is impossible not to approve and sympathise with the feeling which prompted LORD DUFFERIN and his advisers to adopt this trustful policy towards the armies of the Native States. At the same time, those who have not forgotten the Mutiny will not be entirely free from apprehension, and will desire to see caution exercised in carrying the policy into effect. In the matter of creating a large and efficient force of Native Artillery, the greatest caution and circumspection are necessary. There is some reason to fear that the lessons taught by the Mutiny are not so vividly remembered now as they used to be, and that the anxiety to increase the force of artillery may lead men to under-estimate the danger of employing Native gunners. It has always been accepted since the Mutiny that the number of British troops must bear a certain proportion to the number of the Native Army. The new imperial troops are practically an addition to the strength of the Native Army without any counterbalancing increase having been made to the British regiments. It must be borne in mind that our danger in India lies chiefly in the fact that reverse and misfortune will try severely the loyalty of our Native troops and allies. In all our proceedings we should consider not only the assistance we may obtain in a career of success and victory, but the difficulties and dangers that may arise behind our backs in case of a defeat.

DAWĀG AND THE PAMIR.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

DEAR SIR,—Recent events on the Pamir induce me to refer to my letters, which you were good enough to find space for in THE HOMEWARD MAIL in February 1890, on the subject of a Captain Pokotilo of the Russian Service, and certain "discoveries" made by him relating to the district or khānate of Dawāg. I submitted my views that this Dawāg was the Dawāng, situated near the confluence of the Āmū Daria and Kokcha rivers, and that the Russian was apparently manipulating the country between that position and the eastern portion of the Āmū Daria, somewhere about Khairābād, with a view to Russian encroachments later on. You took a different view of the case, and opined that the Dawāg in question meant Darwāz, further north, and belonging to Bokhāra. Both Darwāz (or a portion of it) and Dawāg or Dawāng, be it remembered, are on the left bank of the Āmū Daria or Oxus. Now if "Y" in his letter to the Standard, to which you allude in your last two issues, is right in defining the territory now claimed by Russia, by a straight line drawn from above Sar-i-kul or Lake Victoria to the confluence of the Āmū Daria and Kokcha rivers, my first contention would seem to be borne out, and the trouble has come, or is threatening, in the very region to which I ventured to draw attention.

You say, alluding, I presume, to "Y's" letter, that "it might have been hoped that all that has been done to strengthen the frontiers would have enabled us to endure the presence of a few Cossacks in the distant region of the Pamir with equanimity, &c.," but what does our experience of the presence of these Cossacks on border countries teach us? We have only to go back a few years to Panj-deh to be unpleasantly enough reminded. I do not think we can afford to comfort our souls with such poor consolations; but it behoves us to labour day and night not only in strengthening our frontiers, but also in efficiently officering our fine Native Army, and it is good indeed to see this most important point being pressed home. Only by this last Mail a young friend wrote to me from India thus:—"Just fancy, the C.O., the Doctor, and I are the only European officers with the regiment!" "Just fancy," too, Mr. Editor, that regiment being sent up to the front! Three European officers, and one of them a non-combatant.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, October 6.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Oct. 1, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 3 per cent., although the bazaar had apparently expected a further advance.

Below are the figures given of the bank's statement for the week ending Sept. 29:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 4,80,848	Increase
Do. at Branches.....	7,30,853	Decrease
Other Deposits	7,52,362	Decrease
Post Bills	4,23,486	Increase

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 11,46,955	Decrease
Loans.....	5,80,751	Increase
Accounts of Credits.....	1,60,292	Increase
Mercantile Bills	7,06,962	Increase
Cash at Head Office.....	10,20,937	Decrease
Do. at Branches	1,41,267	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a further increase of about 17½ lacs in Public Demand made up as follows:—By a decrease of nearly 7½ lacs in "Other Deposits," together with an increase of over 5½ lacs in "Loans," about 1½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits," and over 7 lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of nearly 4½ lacs in "Post Bills." The Treasury Balance stands augmented by over 4½ lacs at the head office, while there is a decrease of over 7½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were decreased by over 11½ lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of about 10-15 lacs in the cash at head office, and an increase of about 1½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 5,09,08,694 rs., equal to 58.9 per cent. of the current liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 59.5 per cent. last week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—The week has been a phenomenally dull one in sterling exchange. The business put through has been inconsiderable both as regards buying and selling. Supplies of private paper, in spite of the lower rates ruling, have been very moderate for the time of year, and the demand for Bank drafts has also not been large. Rates for ready Bank wire have varied between 1-4-15/16 and 1-5, while for credits 1-5½ to 1/32 lower has been feasible throughout the week, but the market has been uniformly dull and dragging.

TEA.—Sales have been held on two occasions since last mail day. On Sept. 24 14,000 chests were offered, and 12,600 sold; prices were somewhat irregular, and for some teas occasionally rather easier. On the 5th 12,200 were offered, and 12,000 sold. The lowest grades were slightly cheaper owing to large supplies; other descriptions were fully steady at last sale's rates.

JUTE.—The market has been demoralised owing to the pressure of several thousand bales which had to be resold; these having been disposed of, the tone is now firmer, and the position healthier. First native marks cannot now be bought under 32-8 rs. The loose bazaar is firm for any good dry staff, but easier for wet jute.

GUNNIES.—Business generally has been on a small scale, and the tendency of the market is in favour of buyers. The only business of any consequence reported has been in E's for October-December at 15 rs. f.o.b. from second hands.

HESSIANS are steady, with a small business passing in 8 oz. 40" cloth for October-December, and wheat bags December-January.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—Business has again been almost confined to sonapets, and other stocks have scarcely moved.

BANK OF BENAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, October 9.

There has latterly been a renewal of activity in wheat, and a large export business has been done in that staple in a strong market, and at some advance in prices. Otherwise there has been but little movement in exports, cotton having been in but moderate or small demand both by shippers and local consumers; while seeds have not attracted much attention from the former, both markets having been quiet or steady at previous rates. Exchange, after being weak and declining, has become firm at some recovery in rates, but quotations are still 1-16d. lower for Bank bills, and 1-32d. for credits than they were. Government Paper has fluctuated in price, but, on the whole, a decline of ½ per cent. in Fours has taken place. Freights have been weak, with little inquiry for prompt shipment, but firm for forward loading, at somewhat enhanced rates, and the market is now quiet but steady. A slight improvement in the Mofussil demand for staple Manchester goods is the only fresh feature in the import market, in which prices generally are unchanged, and local inquiry slack.

MONEY.—After the great increase in the Presidency Bank's cash balance of some 82 lacs shown in the previous statement of affairs, the comparatively trifling falling-off of 3½ lacs last week was neither here nor there, and would hardly call for comment, but that, taken by itself, it failed to moderate what was disclosed by the figures given in the return issued on Oct. 5, namely, that during the week covered thereby there had been a further diminution in the trade demand of 19½ lacs. This, though only a third of the decrease shown at the close of the previous week, was still important as illustrative of the continued sluggishness of trade, and was due to the large accession of over 41 lacs to Private Deposits, reduced by some increase in Bills Discounted, and by a materially larger amount on Loans, owing, probably, to the requirements of last settling day for Government Paper. The gain to the cash balance from the reduced requirements of trade was, however, more than counterbalanced by a considerable decrease in Government Deposits. Although, since the return was issued, there has been a return of activity to one branch of export trade, the demand for money has not increased appreciably, and the Bank's minimum has been altered to remain at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been a slightly improved demand for staple grey goods for the up-country markets. Buyers, however, have only been operating to a moderate extent, and at the current rates, steadily refusing to make purchases whenever higher prices have been asked. Stocks are still heavy, and quotations generally the same. Bleached, dyed, Turkey red, and printed goods have been quiet, but prices have been steadily maintained by sellers. There has been a slight improvement in the demand for local goods, but the pressure to sell is increasing. Rates are unaltered. The clearances of imported goods have been larger, at 2,200 packages, those of local goods having been 1,000 bales.

YARN.—Only a small business has been done in imported yarn, but prices are unchanged, and the tone of the market quiet.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper, and an advance of 4 annas per cwt. has taken place in prices in a steady market. Yellow metal is also higher by 2 annas per cwt., but the tone of this market has been quiet, and business upon only a small scale. Iron is steady at a general advance of 8 annas, a moderate business having been done.

COAL is firm. Sales have been made of 2,000 tons of Powell's Duffryn Cardiff for October-November-December shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton; and of a like quantity of Beyts Merthyr Cardiff, ex Ashland at 14 rs. per ton. There are forward buyers of Powell's Duffryn, and Davison's West Hartley, for October-November-December shipment, at 15 rs. and 14 rs. per ton respectively.

Exports.—COTTON.—A moderate business has been passing in this staple both for export and local spinners' account, on a steady market, and on the basis of previous rates. The feeling is steady, and prices have shown no quotable change, but demand has fallen off in both directions, and only a small business has transpired. The week's purchases have aggregated about 9,000 bales, of which about half have been for export, consisting chiefly of Ginned Compta, Westerns, Oomra descriptions, and Bengals; the other half, taken by the mills, being made up mainly of Oomra kinds, Westerns, Dharwar, and Compta Ginned. The market closes steady for old cotton, with prices as quoted a week ago; but the arrival market for the new crop was firm, with rates quoted 1 to 2 rs. higher.

WHEAT.—This market became firm in tone at the end of last week, and the same feeling prevailed thereafter for several days, an advance of ½ a. per cwt. all round having been established in prices, though the volume of business passing was only moderate; but afterwards an active export inquiry sprang up, and large transactions have been reported at a further rise of ½ a. per cwt. in a strong market.

SEEDS have not attracted much attention from shippers, and no more than a moderate business has been done on any day; but the tone of the market has been steady, and prices are unchanged for all descriptions.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO. Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, St. Russell-st., W.C.

COUGH, COLD, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) discovered a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. —See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON. REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simple, Jan. 5, 1880.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourner there will be evanescent. We could multiply instances of the infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Oct. 14; Madras, Oct. 15; Bombay, Oct. 17.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Nov. 1:—The Supreme and Provincial Governments are now in course of moving from the hills to the plains, and will settle down to work at their respective winter capitals within the next few days. For the moment there is little news of importance. The Viceroy continues his tour in Cashmere. He has visited several places of interest and enjoyed some days' shooting during the past week.

There is no truth in the rumour, says the Times of India, that the Viceroy's visit to Cashmere is likely to end in the purchase of the State by the Government of India.

The Rangoon Gazette states that it is doubtful if the Viceroy will visit Burma this cold season. In the opinion of many of those best acquainted with the province, says the Times correspondent, the visit would be unadvisable. The prevailing scarcity would certainly prevent the Burmese from indulging in the lavish expenditure on triumphal arches and pandals to welcome the Viceroy which marked the visit of Lord Dufferin to Burma in 1886, and the absence of such signs of welcome might be attributed to other causes. On the other hand, if Lord Lansdowne does not visit Burma this season, it will be difficult for him to do so during his Viceroyalty. For a considerable period no accommodation would be available in Rangoon for the Viceroy and suite. Government House, Rangoon, which is unsuitable in the present condition of the province, will be pulled down next year, and the new Government House which is to be erected on the same site will require two years for completion.

The Viceroy has accepted an invitation to be present at the St. Andrew's dinner in Calcutta, which takes place the day after his arrival.

The Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Lady Roberts and attended by the usual suite, left Simla on Oct. 15. The principal military officers assembled on the Ridge to witness his Excellency's departure.

According to latest arrangements, Sir Frederick Roberts and suite will arrive at Rangoon on Feb. 12, and leave again on the 20th.

The Governor of Bombay will make an extended tour in Sind this month. During the journey, it is stated that Lord Harris will decorate the Mir of Khairpore with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Order of the Indian Empire, to which dignity he has recently been admitted.

It is supposed, says the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, that Sir Charles Crosthwaite will succeed Sir Auckland Colvin as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces. It is not yet known who will succeed Sir C. Crosthwaite as Minister of Public Works. Colonel Pemberton, the acting incumbent, has the advantages of technical knowledge and long experience in the Public Works secretariate. The other names mentioned are Sir Raymond West and Sir Charles Pritchard. Sir R. West has earned a reputation as a learned economist, and this knowledge would be useful in dealing with large engineering problems. Sir C. Pritchard is known as a vigorous administrator.

If Sir R. West is removed to the Viceroy's Council, the correspondent adds, Justice Birdwood will probably succeed him as judicial member of the Bombay Council. He is highly respected and popular in the Presidency, was a Fellow of his college at Cambridge, has always taken keen interest in education, and is a Vice-Chancellor of the Bombay University.

The permission given to Sir Harry Prendergast to remain at Mysore as Resident until the end of the current official year, has somewhat disturbed calculations as to his successor. The Viceroy will, the Pioneer believes, give a final decision on that point very shortly.

A Bombay telegram of Oct. 26 says:—Captain Young-husband has arrived at Gilgit from the Pamir country, accompanied by Lieutenant Davidson. He will proceed to Srinagar to meet the Viceroy.

The Russian officer who was in command of the advanced detachments on the Pamir, and who peremptorily ordered Captain Younghusband to leave, was Colonel Banoff. He is unknown to fame in Central Asia, the Pioneer states.

Colonel Tweedie, political Resident in Turkish Arabia, retired from the Political Department on Sept. 31, Colonel Peacock succeeding him. Colonel Mockler will officiate during Colonel Peacock's absence on leave.

A Colombo telegram of Oct. 26 says:—The Arcadia, with Lord Sheffield's team, arrived to-day, and the visitors played eighteen cricketers of Ceylon before an immense attendance of Europeans and natives. Stoddart scored seventy; Grace, fourteen; Abel, ten; Read, four; Peel, sixteen; Lohmann, thirteen; Briggs, three; Philipson, four; Attewell, seven; Sharpe, one; Macgregor and Bean, nil; extras, one—total, 143. Ceylon scored seventy for ten wickets, when rain stopped further play.

The Executive Council met at Simla on Oct. 13 for the last time before the close of the Simla session.

The result of current negotiations between the British and Chinese representatives at Darjeeling in connection with the Sikkim-Thibet frontier will probably not be made known, the Pioneer states, until after the arrival of the Government of India in Calcutta.

The Ameer is so much in earnest in his desire to visit England that he has ordered his English tailor to prepare for him such warm clothing as is likely to be needed for the trip. His Highness may not perhaps realise that the climate of Western Europe is not so trying in winter and spring as that of Cabul and Northern Afghanistan generally. A poshteen would be a revelation in England to all but Anglo-Indians.

Prince Golitzyn, who is expected at Leh, has a passport from the English Embassy at St. Petersburg empowering him to enter India. He was formerly at Marghilan, and is described as a keen traveller.

Mr. J. R. Bell, having started work upon the new Mari-Attock Strategic Railway, has left for Jammu to examine the railway routes into Cashmere. He will cross the Banihal Pass and return by way of Poonch.

On the new line of railway up the Mushkaf Valley, which avoids the worst parts of the Bolan, all the bridges and tunnels are to be made wide enough to take a double line of rails. Provision will thus be made for doubling the line throughout should such a step ever be considered advisable.

It is probable that the special rates charged on goods traffic on the Sind-Pishin Railway will be shortly abolished. This, it is hoped, will give an impetus to trade with Southern Afghanistan and Khorasan.

Cholera has appeared at Peshawur, and it still lingers along the North-Western Frontier border, cases occurring at Kohat, Quetta, and Pishin. The detachment of the 5th Goorkhas, marching from Abbottabad to Gilgit, have had no cases of cholera since leaving Abbottabad. They proceed as rapidly as possible to their destination.

Returns of the land trade of British India during the three months, April to June, of the present year show an enormous increase as compared with the corresponding period in 1889 and 1890. The total trade amounted in value to 248 lacs, as compared with 183 lacs in 1889 and 184 lacs in 1890. The increase has been general throughout the country, Burma alone showing a slight falling off. The land trade of Bengal has grown from 61 to 72 lacs, of Assam from less than 1½ to over 2 lacs. Sind and British Beloochistan show a startling increase from 3 lacs in 1889 and about 4½ lacs in 1890, to over 34½ lacs during the present year.

Colonel Charles Edward Stewart, her Majesty's Consul-General at Tabriz, Persia, arrived in London on Oct. 28.

We (Times) understand that Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff and Dr. Whitley Stokes, C.I.E., have undertaken to write a memoir of the late Sir Henry Maine. No one is more competent to write the life of the great jurist and ethnologist than the late Governor of Madras, while Dr. Whitley Stokes, as one of Sir Henry's successors in India, and the first living scholar in one department of prehistoric research, is well qualified to collect and edit the Indian speeches and minutes.

Prince Damrong, brother of the King of Siam, was received on Oct. 30 by President Carnot. The Prince was accompanied by his nephew, the son of the King of Siam. The interview, which lasted half an hour, was, it is said, very cordial. At the moment when Prince Damrong was taking leave of the President, M. Carnot placed in his hand the insignia of Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour, and presented the Cross of the Legion of Honour to the aide-de-camp of the Prince. The Prince left Paris yesterday for Copenhagen.

The Indian troopship Euphrates, which left Bombay on Oct. 7, arrived at Portsmouth yesterday, after a fine voyage, nearly twenty-four hours before her official programme time, being the first return vessel of the Indian troopships for the season 1891-92. She brought the 1st Dragoon Guards, under Lieutenant-Colonel D. William, numbering 13 officers, 393 rank and file, and 30 soldiers' wives; a detachment of the 17th Lancers from Egypt, numbering three officers and 134 men; and details of Royal Artillery and infantry time-expired men and invalids, consisting of 25 officers, with 9 ladies and 16 officers' children, 555 rank and file, 48 soldiers' wives, and 71 children. Two deaths occurred on the voyage, one through heat apoplexy in the Red Sea, and the other from heart affection shortly before the vessel arrived in port.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times:—

OCT. 30.—The outlook in Madras has immensely improved. In Chingleput and North Arcot, where the centre of distress has hitherto been, the rains of the last ten days have filled the tanks and wells. Agricultural operations are now proceeding briskly, but anxiety is now being felt for Kurnool, Salem, Bellary, and parts of the Ganjam district, where, so far, the rains have been very moderate and inadequate. Kurnool especially is feeling the drought. The centre of the drought in Ganjam is Surada, where even drinking-water is scarce. The rain-fed paddy, or rice, crop is withering in large areas in Bellary. The dry crops also are failing largely, and in one sub-district, Rajadurg, even the wet crops are suffering. The number of persons on relief works in the Presidency has decreased by 12,000 during the week ending Saturday last, and the number of kitchens by 2,000. A further decrease is expected this week, but if the drought continues in Salem, Kurnool, and Bellary an increase must be expected again within a few weeks.

The proposed new permanent alignment of the Bolan railway up the Mushkaff Valley has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The total length will be about sixty-five miles, and the cost is estimated at 170 lacs.

The Commission to inquire into land indebtedness will meet at the end of January. Sir Charles Crosthwaite, who first made his mark as a settlement officer, will act as president. The Governor of the North-West Provinces has nominated Mr. Evans as member of the Commission for the Punjab, Rivas, and Bombay, but has not yet nominated a member for Bengal. Madras will not be represented. The first business will be to inquire into the working of the Deccan Ryots' Relief Act, and whether it should be extended to all parts of the Presidency. The next question to be considered is the indebtedness of the landed interest in the Punjab, the North-West and the Central Provinces, and whether its condition calls for relief, and what measures should be taken. The subject is vast and complicated, and will occupy the Commission probably for a year.

NOV. 1.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is visiting Behar, and will make a minute inspection of that province before returning to Calcutta. A good deal of anxiety was felt about harvest prospects in Behar a month ago, and although timely rain has now removed the apprehension of famine, still Sir C. Elliott wishes to see for himself what the actual position is. But little rain fell in Bengal during October, and it seems almost certain that high prices will prevail for some months throughout the province.

Reports from Madras indicate an improvement in the outlook. There has been fairly plentiful rain in several districts, but in others the prospects are still gloomy. In the Cuddapah district a rain-making experiment by the explosion of dynamite was attended with very successful results.

A body styling itself the Bengal Provincial Conference has been sitting in Calcutta for the last few days. It discussed a variety of topics, and resolved to impress on the Government the necessity of improving the administration of civil justice, reforming the police, and instituting stricter control over the allotment of the education grants.

The docks which have been under construction at Calcutta for the last six years are now practically completed. They were first used on Friday, when the British India Company's steamer Lindulu was admitted to the graving dock. The question whether these docks will prove of benefit to the trade of the port has been a fruitful source of controversy ever since the inception of the scheme. It will soon be possible to settle it by the light of actual experience.

THE Pioneer correspondent at Simla wrote on Oct. 7:—The Fancy Dress Ball given in the Simla Town Hall on Friday last was in connection with the series of entertainments organised in aid of Lady Roberts's Fund for Officers' Hospitals and Homes in the Hills for Nursing Sisters. Though the attendance was not so large as we are generally accustomed to on such occasions, the defect was more than atoned for by the richness and variety of the costumes. Out of nearly two hundred persons present, all, save those in uniform, were really attired in a manner that could not fail to be effective, and the grouping in the square dances was extremely pretty from the artistic point of view. The Commander-in-Chief and his Staff wore the uniform of a century ago, one which has linked with it grand historic memories. The Viceroy's Staff appeared as Knight Templars, a striking dress of which the pure white was relieved by that Red Cross, worn many hundred years ago by the militant Order that checked the Saracen advance on Europe. The Grand Master, draped in a crimson mantle, was a distinctive figure among the Knights. To describe a few of the dresses in detail, one has but to say that the queenly robes of "Anne Boleyn," the deep black velvet set off with robes of pearls, could not have been more fittingly worn or have adorned a more graceful presence. The old-world robe worn by the lady whose name is associated with the movement which we have given practical support to during the past week, the richness and vivid colouring of a Bojar Roumanian, the picturesqueness of those who claimed but to be ranked as poudrées, the diversity of dresses of the bevy of fairies who had charmed us in the "Midsummer Night's Dream"—all these must be recorded as having attracted notice. A witching "Grace Darling," an English Hussar with a Polish rival, two "White Duchesses," who would have delighted an artist's eye; the wearer of the "Union Jack," in quite one of the prettiest and most effective costumes that could be devised; a fascinating figure emblematical of Winter; a "Galatea," robed in white samite; and more than one lady whose costume dated centuries back. These should be put in the roll of honour. As for the nobler part of creation, the old military uniforms and the Knight Templars' dress were, as said already, particularly good. In pure "character" parts nothing could have been better than the Pathan, the Shan Chief, and the Sotnia Commander of Kurban Cossacks. A Cossack Chief; two Egyptian syces, red and black; "Jack Point," as we knew him last year in the "Yeomen of the Guard"; a representative of the Directoire Period; and a Turk, should also be enumerated as good men and true, who did their duty in careful realisation of the parts they had selected to play.

Lord Harris performed the ceremony of the investiture of the Hon. Sir Charles Bradley Pritchard with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire on Oct. 8, at Government House, Poona, in the presence of a large and distinguished assembly. His Highness the Thakore Saheb of Morvi, Sir Raymond West, General Pottinger, the Hon. Mr. Moore, Major-General Blundell, Lady Sassoon, seven Knight Commanders, and thirteen Companions of the Order were among those present. A large number of guests, including Sir Charles Pritchard, dined at Government House, and, after dinner, the Companions and Knight Commanders assembled in the drawing-room and marched in procession, followed by the Knight Grand Commander, Lord Harris, into the durbar-room. At 9.30, after all had taken their seats, the secretary read the grant of the Order, and Sir Charles Pritchard was conducted to the dais where his Excellency sat, who then conferred on him the title, degree, and honour of a Knight Bachelor of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and afterwards he was invested with the star, riband, and badge of the Order. All the Knights and Companions left the room in procession. The function was conducted with all customary ceremonies, and was very imposing.

The departure of Mr. and Mrs. Moore, writes the Poona correspondent of the Times of India, is nothing less than a social calamity. When the former erred, it has always been on the side of leniency. None of us can ever remember his saying an unkind word of, or to, anyone, or doing an unkind action. All our old residents remember with gratitude the public spirit he has displayed in the interests of Poona cricket, in the furtherance whereof he for years spared no possible effort, collecting men from all parts of the Presidency for our big matches, and watching every one of them—generally from the scorer's table—from start to finish with the utmost keenness. In Mrs. Moore Poona loses a hostess of a type very uncommon in these days. The people who give dinners to those who can afford to ask them back are plentiful all the world over; those who habitually invite guests, who can make little or no return for their hospitality are scarce as flowers in May, and equally welcome. Many a poor young married couple, many an impecunious youngster will regret the departure of our Commissioner and his wife, and sigh in vain for a good dinner and a glass of the Boy on Sunday evening. In "Johnny Moore" we lose the last surviving local specimen of a type of Civilian which will in a very short time be extinct as the Dodo or the Megatherium.

The members of the Civil Service in Poona entertained the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore and Mrs. Moore at a farewell dinner on Oct. 10 at the Hon. Mr. J. R. Naylor's house in Queen's Gardens, as a mark of the esteem and regard with which Mr. Moore has inspired his brother civilians during his long service in India. Several civilians from out-stations also joined as hosts on the occasion. The following is a list of the ladies and gentlemen who were present:—The Hon. Mr. Moore and Mrs. Moore, the Hon. Sir Raymond West and the two Misses West, the Hon. Sir Charles Pritchard, the Hon. Mr. Naylor, Messrs.

Mackenzie, Spence, Loch, Lee-Warner, and Candy, Mr. and Mrs. Reid, Dr. A. D. and Mrs. Pollen, Messrs. Wilkin, Ommaney, J. Pollen, Edgerley, Drew Cappel, Logan, Seyed Nurudeen, Hill, and Brown. The band of the 10th Bombay Infantry was in attendance, and played a selection of music during the evening. After the health of her Majesty the Queen-Empress had been drunk with due honours, Sir Raymond West, in an eloquent speech, proposed the toast of the evening. He recalled the sympathy, capacity, and devotion to duty which have marked Mr. Moore's public life, and which make his approaching retirement felt as a heavy loss to the service and the country. He alluded to the graceful share taken by Mrs. Moore in the social kindness and courtesies which have attached to Mr. and Mrs. Moore so many friends in Poona and throughout the Presidency, and assured them of the affection and good wishes which would follow them to their retirement in England. Mr. Moore, in replying on behalf of Mrs. Moore and himself, feelingly expressed the pain of parting from the service and its associations, and from the many friends they would leave behind, many of whom, Mrs. Moore and he hoped, they would meet again at home, not once but often. The party broke up at a late hour with renewed expressions of goodwill, and with hearty cheers for the departing guests. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were entertained on Oct. 12 by the members of the Club of Western India.

A fund is being raised among the members of the Poona Gymkhana Club to perpetuate the memory of Mr. Moore, who has been president of the Gymkhana Committee from the first. It has been resolved that the memorial shall take the form of a presentation—a cricket bat to be presented annually in perpetuity to the member who makes the best batting average during the year. This, says a correspondent, is very appropriate; for several years Mr. Moore took an active part in the national game, and to the end has evinced a very lively interest in cricket.

In continuation of the report given last week of the Bombay Polo Tournament, Vikar-ul-Oomra's team scratched on Oct. 7. On Saturday, the 10th, the Tournament concluded, when the 7th Hussars beat the Golconda team, and having won three years in succession retain possession of the Cup. The game was exciting throughout and was watched by a large crowd of all classes. The players were:—Hussars: Lieutenant the Hon. J. Beresford, Captain Haig, Captain Nicholson, Lieutenant Herbert. Golcondas: Sheikh Goolam Ahmed, Mahomed Ibrahim Beg, Mahomed Hossain Khan, Abbas Khan. In the first round play commenced punctually, and no time was lost in making goals, as no less than four were got in this round—viz., Hussars 2, Golconda 2. Time, 9 mins. In the second round, when the ball was hit off, the Hussars kept it in the neighbourhood of the Golconda goal for a time, and had two tries, neither of which was successful. The Golconda men then pulled themselves together, and a fine run by Ibrahim Beg resulted in a goal to their side. A good run by the Hussars captain was well stopped by the Golconda's goal keeper, and a scrimmage in front of the goal took place. A foul was claimed by the Hussars and allowed, and Captain Haig getting the ball, succeeded in placing it between his adversaries' goal posts, thus making the game 3 all. Almost immediately after the ball came into play again he repeated the performance. The Hussars were thus 4 to the Golconda 3 goals. Time—17 min. 8 sec. In the third round there was good all round play for two or three minutes without either goal being seriously threatened, until the captain of the Hussars' team got the ball and had a try, which was well stopped by the Golconda goal-keeper. The Hussars, after a scrimmage in front of the goal, sent the ball through, thus scoring their fifth goal. No further scoring took place on either side during the rest of the round, which finished as follows—Hussars 5, Golconda 3. Time 25 min. 20 sec. In the fourth round the Hussars held their adversaries pretty well all through, and added two more to their score, making the Hussars 7 to Golconda 3. Time—33 min. 34 sec. The fifth round was the most exciting of the game. Play throughout was fast and furious. A try at the Golconda goal was well stopped, and, Ibrahim Beg getting the ball, made a magnificent run up the ground, resulting in a goal for his side, and shortly after made another good run without results. The Hussars had two good tries at goal, but failed to score further, the round ending—Hussars, 7; Golconda, 4. Time—41 min. 40 sec. In the sixth round, with only 6 min. 20 sec. remaining to play in, both sides played up magnificently, but without adding any score. The Hussars thus won the final by 3 goals. Score: Hussars, 7; Golconda, 4 goals.

A very delicate problem has just been exercising the sagacity of one of the minor tribunals of Burma, says the Times of India. The marriage contract is not permitted in that country to press unduly upon the tied, and its people have long since learned to conjugate (but in the masculine gender) the verb "to Jacksonise." If a man tires of the partner of his joys and sorrows he makes his wife some slight compensation in money or in kind and dissolves the partnership, and the lady acknowledges this prerogative with becoming meekness. In this particular case a separation agreement was amicably come to between the pair, and as there would soon be a third party to provide for, the husband made a "contingent contract" that if the tertium quid were a boy he would contribute 30 rs. towards the expenses of accouchement, and, if a girl, 20 rs. As he was going on a journey of some distance he concluded to be on the safe side, and with thoughtful liberality left the larger sum in the woman's charge, and departed. At the first blush this would seem to have satisfactorily settled the matter, whatever happened. Singularly enough, however, that was exactly what it did not do, for, with the perversity of her sex, the second party to the contract complicated the contingency by being safely delivered of a boy and a girl; and of course she claimed on both. The ex-husband (whose generosity had its limitation) repudiated the claim on the ground that he had faithfully performed his part of the contract in paying down the 30 rs., while the plaintiff had obviously exceeded hers. To do him justice the man did not suggest any mala fides on the woman's part, but he urged (through counsel) that he had right on his side, and that the Myook could not compel him to go outside the terms of a contract by which the contingency was distinctly limited. It was an American philosopher who observed that the two things for which we are never prepared are twins, and this was exactly the Burman's case. The Myook was puzzled, as well he might be, and all the legal talent of the Bar was puzzled likewise. Solomon himself might have hesitated in such a case. The code of Manu, the texts of the ancient law givers, and even the records of the High Courts were searched in vain for precedents; and eventually, in despair, the judge nonsuited the plaintiff, and decided that the man had duly fulfilled his contract. The Rangoon paper which reports the proceedings suggests that, as the case is not to go up on appeal, the President of the Law School at Rangoon should obtain the record from the Deputy Commissioner of the Shwegyin district, in which the case was heard, and have it up for discussion in the School. The idea is not a bad one, and the proceeds, if any, might appropriately go towards the support of contingency number two.

Colonel Wallace, manager of the North-Western Railway, has applied to have his leave extended to December, when he intends to retire.

Dr. Lethbridge, inspector-general of gaols, will probably succeed Colonel Cadell as chief commissioner of the Andamans next April.

In Mr. Richard Wall, of the Civil Service, who has just retired on the eve of completing thirty-five years of Indian exile, these Provinces, says the Pioneer, have lost an old and faithful public servant, familiarly (but never disrespectfully) known as "Dick" Wall. His sudden retirement is sure to awaken sympathy not only for the sad causes that indirectly led to it, but also in view of the character and estimation of the man. It may be said of Mr. Wall—what can be said of very few public servants—that he had no enemies and many friends. He was a man of sweet temper and of scholarly instincts; and if he was not a genius from the official standpoint, he was none the less a sound and capable officer. He carries with him the best wishes of his many friends.

In the previous examination of the University of Cambridge held in October, the following students passed in Part II. Second Class—K. N. Nair (non-collegiate). Third Class—Sultan Ahmad (Christ's); H. A European clerk named O'Brien, in the Public Works Department, committed suicide at Simla on Oct. 13 by shooting himself with a Martini rifle. Monetary troubles are believed to be the reason. The deceased was about sixty-five years old.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Colonel Sir Stephen John Hill, K.C.M.G., C.B., died last week. He was born in 1809, the son of Major William Hill. He entered the Army in 1823, became lieutenant in 1828, and captain in 1842. With the latter rank he commanded a detachment eighty miles up the Gambia in 1849, and in the same year commanded a detachment of the 2nd and 3rd West India Regiments in an engagement with pirates off the island of Basis, in Western Africa. For this he received the rank of major. The rest of his public service was under the Colonial Office. He held the rank of colonel when he was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief at the Gold Coast from 1851 to 1854; then he was successively Captain-General and Governor at Sierra Leone, 1854 to 1862, during part of which period he was acting judge in the mixed Commission Court at Sierra Leone; Governor of Antigua and the Leeward Islands, 1862-1869; and Governor of Newfoundland from the latter year till 1876. He was created C.B. in 1860 and K.C.M.G. in 1874. Sir Stephen Hill was twice married; first, in 1829, to Sarah Ann, daughter of the late William Munnings, Chief Justice of the Bahamas; secondly, in 1871, to Louisa Shiell, daughter of the late Chief Justice of Antigua.

Mr. George Sibley, C.I.E., Memb. Inst. C.E., F.R.G.S., died on Oct. 25 at his residence, The Mount, Whitehill, Caterham, at the age of sixty-seven. He was educated at University College School, London, from 1831 to 1836. On leaving school he served the usual period of apprenticeship with his father, who was an architect and civil engineer in London. In 1845 he was employed upon the Bristol and Exeter Railway, under Mr. Brunel, and afterwards under Sir Charles Hutton Gregory. In 1851 he went to India, and was engaged upon the East India Railway, under Mr. James Meadows Rendel. He gradually worked his way up, and in 1859 became the chief engineer of the North-Western Provinces Division, and, in 1868, chief engineer of the whole line of 1,500 miles. He retired from the service and from the profession in January 1876. Among the more important works constructed under his supervision may be mentioned the Jumna Bridge, Allahabad, which was completed in 1866, and was, at that time, the largest bridge existing, being supported on fourteen piers, and having a railroad above and a carriage and footway beneath. Mr. Sibley was a great traveller, and there are but few parts of the world, even those remote and uncivilised, that he had not visited at some period or other in his life. He made various contributions to scientific, engineering, and geographical journals, and it is understood that he has left a considerable legacy to the University of Calcutta for the purpose of founding engineering scholarships, and for other ways for the encouragement of native engineering students.

Mr. France, District Superintendent of Police, Burma, died at Shwebo on Oct. 6. He was twenty-eight years old, and entered the Burma Police in 1885.

THE IMPERIAL DIAMOND CASE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

HYDERABAD (DECCAN), Oct. 30.—The Resident at the Nizam's Court, Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, has written the following letter to the Minister, Sir Asman Jah, on the subject of his Highness's Proclamation in connection with the Imperial diamond case:—

"I have to thank you for yours of 3rd inst., enclosing copies of the letter addressed to you by his Highness in connection with his examination as a witness in Jacob's case. The incessant labour of the Commission must be my excuse for not acknowledging it earlier. I read his Highness's letter with much pleasure, and was much impressed, not only by the breadth and liberality of view and high-minded independence it exhibits, but also by the kindly feeling of his Highness towards his subjects and the tender regard shown by him for their pardonable prejudices, which are apparent throughout. I was further glad to learn from his Highness's letter that the important principles referred to in it, and on which Western lawyers so strongly insist, are supported by the teaching and example of the great leaders of Islam. I am convinced that this letter will have a most beneficial effect, which will not be confined to the present occasion or to Hyderabad. For I believe that the example set by the native Ruler who stands first in dignity in this country, cannot but have an important influence both upon other Indian Princes, and upon the host of magnates of lesser degree, who at present imagine it to be derogatory to them to give their evidence in the manner essential for the furtherance of the ends of justice. I have forwarded a copy of your letter and its enclosure to the Government of India."—Standard.

A Bombay telegram of Oct. 10 says:—Mr. Jacob has been interviewed at the Great Western Hotel by a Bombay Gazette correspondent. He denies the story of his life, as well as of course that of the diamond, given by the Pall Mall Gazette. "It is all nonsense for anybody to say I am afraid to go to Hyderabad. Consider how often I have been there, and how many dealings with the Nizam I have had. Every time I went there before this dispute arose I was a guest of the State. I have remained for a fortnight and longer, during which time I received the most handsome treatment from his Highness. I know that he treated no other merchant who visited his State so kindly as he did me, and that, as you may guess, created some jealousy among—well I cannot tell you whom. I must not, in the meantime, tell you all I know, or I would be showing a trump card, but you may believe me when I say that the jealousy which exists is at the bottom of it all, setting the machinery in motion which has caused this dispute. But to say that I am afraid for my life to go to Hyderabad, and that I am feigning sickness here as an excuse for not going, is nothing but nonsense." Referring to the Pall Mall Gazette article, he said:—"It is quite true I am an Italian, and that I once stayed with my father in Constantinople. The writer is quite right too in regard to the name of Barré. That was our family name, but Jacob was my father's name and so it is really mine. The story of my life I told to Mr. Marion Crawford in Simla as I have now told it to you, and he made use of it in his novel, in which he called me Isaacs. I never went under such a name as Suliman Roomani. I was never a slave, nor did I pretend to be a Mahomedan. I am a Roman Catholic, and never was anything else. I was employed at Hyderabad, but not by the late Nizam. I remained with my Hyderabad master for a year and a-half, and then went to Calcutta, where I got work from Charles, Nephew and Company, jewellers. Leaving them I served for a short time with the Nawab of Rampore. I never pretended to be an Armenian, and I never was in the service of the Maharaja of Ulwar."

The Commission to examine Sir D. FitzPatrick, the Resident, sat at the Syfabad Palace, Hyderabad, on Oct. 14, before Mr. Crawford, First Assistant Resident, and the Commissioner.

Sir D. FitzPatrick, examined by Mr. Inverarity, deposed to getting information from private sources about the deposit of 23 lacs in Calcutta, and having an interview with the Nizam on July 12. Sir D. FitzPatrick here put in a written statement, showing that his conversations with the Nizam and the officials on State matters were privileged on political grounds, and that as he considered that in this matter certain questions of State were involved, it was possible he could not answer all the questions asked. Subsequent evidence showed that the Resident did disclose nearly every question he was asked, and in re-examination expressly stated that in matters he had declined to disclose there was nothing which was in any way in his judgment beneficial to the case for the accused.

In his examination-in-chief Sir D. FitzPatrick confirmed the Nizam's statement that the Nizam told him he was not going to take the stone, and that the Nizam did so at an early stage of the interview. The Resident said he was doubtful at the close of his interview whether anything he said to the Nizam had stopped the purchase of the diamond. The private information he got was that the Nizam was free to take the diamond or not as he pleased, and this was confirmed. At an interview he did use certain arguments with the Nizam against his taking it, but he did not express disapproval in so many words, and the Nizam said he would not buy it. Just as he was entering upon these arguments, the principal thing said to the Nizam was that the Resident had heard of the deposit of 23 lacs, and looked on the matter as serious, and was anxious about it. There was no further interview after that or communication with officials as far as he could remember, except as to a casual conversation prior to Aug. 3.

In cross-examination, the Resident stated he understood from the first that the Nizam was perfectly free to take the diamond or reject it on its arrival as he pleased, that he in no way put or exercised any pressure on the Nizam, and his action in the matter was not in any way influenced directly or indirectly or brought about by the Nizam's Minister or any officials, and that he acted spontaneously and on his own motion on information obtained from sources independent of the Minister or anyone acting on his behalf; that from his interview with the Nizam he completely understood that the Nizam expressed his intention not to take the diamond. It was the Nizam's voluntary act; that he had no doubt whatever as to the absolute sincerity and truth of the Nizam's assurance that he did not intend to take the diamond, and that whilst Resident he had found the Nizam punctiliously a man of his word and truthful.

Mr. Inverarity's re-examination was short, and consisted chiefly of questions as to whether the Resident had said anything about the Nizam's officials not giving him information about the proposed purchase before he got information from other sources.

The Commission then closed.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

THE circular which has recently been issued setting forth the "grave discontent as to the disadvantageous rates of promotion in the Indian Staff Corps" will not advance the cause of the officers whose grievances it professes to deal with, the Pioneer says. It is stated that it has been adopted by a majority of the Staff Corps, but this is certainly not the case, for of the four hundred or so petitions sent in up to the end of August only one hundred were from the Bengal Presidency. What has been done in Madras and Bombay we cannot say; but it is scarcely possible that the majority even there have committed themselves to the circular. The case for the Staff Corps could not, in fact, have been worse stated. For instance, in calculating the relative rates of promotion in the British and Indian services, British cavalry have been included. It has been ascertained that "the present average service for the rank of captain in the cavalry and infantry of the British service is eight years only, and for all arms combined $8\frac{1}{2}$ years; for the rank of major respectively $15\frac{7}{12}$ and $15\frac{3}{12}$ years, and for the rank of lieutenant colonel respectively $24\frac{1}{2}$ and $25\frac{1}{2}$ years." Now in a calculation of this kind British cavalry should be certainly excluded, for the conditions of service in it are totally different from those of the Staff Corps. There is a constant flow of promotion in most regiments owing to the fact that the officers, being mostly men of ample means, are continually retiring at all stages of their service, when for one reason or another it suits them to go. Taking the British cavalry regiments in India at the present moment, as they appear in the Bengal Army List for July 1, it will be found that promotion to the rank of captain has been attained in the majority of instances in from six to seven years; in many it is as low as five, in a few only four. There are some officers who have been unfortunate by reason of exchanging or from some other cause but they are few and far between. With these figures before him, will any unprejudiced person venture to argue that British cavalry should come into the reckoning at all? If they are excluded, the relative rates of promotion will be very different from those which will appear in the circular. The demand made is that the qualifying service for promotion in the Staff Corps should be reduced from 11 to 9 years for the rank of captain, from 20 to 17 for that of major, and from 26 to 25 for that of lieutenant-colonel. The memorialists, of course, leave out of sight the notorious fact that promotion in the British Service is now getting slower every day; but can they really suppose that the authorities will be blind to it? In three or four years—in British infantry, at least—the rate will almost certainly be identical with that which now rules in the Staff Corps. The block is inevitable, as actuarial calculations made at home have shown.

But apart from the vexed question of comparative promotion, the circular strives to make out that the Staff Corps officer is the better man all round; that he has seen more active service than his fellow-officer in a British corps; that while still comparatively junior he has been habituated to officiate in command or second-in-command of a regiment; and that he is better qualified as a rule to command a mixed force of British and Native soldiers. And yet, it is added, British officers "who have many of them never seen a shot fired and know nothing of Indian campaigning come out to India and supersede officers of the Indian Staff Corps who, on the score of age, length of service, experience, and professional attainments, have every claim to seniority." Comparisons of this kind are in sorry taste; they can serve no good end, and they will effectually alienate the sympathy of the British service. There is no need for Staff Corps officers to blow their own trumpets, or to disparage others. They can quite afford as a body to stand on their own merits, and the best men and truest soldiers among them will, it is certain, feel something like resentment against the authors of this ill-advised circular. Some of its statements are certainly ingeniously framed. Thus it is made out that the Staff Corps officer is actually worse off in the matter of pay over a period of twenty years, than the British officer who gets his company in eight years and his majority in sixteen; but the advantages derived from those very acting regimental appointments which were dragged to the front for use in the argument above are carefully ignored. Besides, twenty years is a very arbitrary limit to take: let it be extended to thirty or even longer, and see on which side the advantage lies. Again a point is made about the reservation of certain staff appointments for the British service: the fact is overlooked that all the "colonels on the Staff," commanding first-class stations, belong to the Staff Corps. "Officers of British regiments, independent of taking their turn at regimental depots, go home on relief after a certain tour of service in this country." Doubtless they do, but they cease at the same time to draw the pay with which a comparison has been instituted above, while even if they serve all their time in this country they cannot get Indian pensions. The framers of the circular get confused too on some points. "It may," they write, "be put forward that officers of the Indian Staff Corps are compensated as regards any difference in pay and promotion between themselves and those of the British service, by the superior rate of pension they receive on retirement. This is no argument. The higher rates are given as a compensation for long service and residence in the trying climate of India. They cannot stand in lieu of loss of pay and promotion while actually serving." Where does the loss of pay come in? It is admitted that junior officers are constantly in the enjoyment of officiating appointments in their regiments, all of which carry pay with them; while after twenty years' service the Staff Corps officer has an immense advantage in the matter of his total emoluments. There is no one but desires to see officers who have selected the Indian Army for their career treated fairly and even generously; but they can scarcely hope that concessions will be made to them when they base their claims to consideration on circulars such as that now issued. It should be disowned at once by all who are not committed to it, for no case could be worse put. On one point only is it sound. Staff Corps officers who retire, or are invalided under twenty years' service, receive neither pension nor gratuity: the officer of the British service gets a gratuity of 1,200*l.* after twelve years. This is a distinct advantage, and it is one which might well be extended to the Indian Army.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL. THE PUNJAB MUNICIPAL BILL.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla on Oct. 8, Mr. Rattigan moved that the Punjab Municipal Bill be taken into consideration. He made a long and exhaustive speech.

The Lieutenant-Governor said he should assent with full confidence to the motion presently to be brought forward that the Bill be passed; the changes in law seemed to him, so far as they went, calculated not only to facilitate Municipal Administration, but to encourage and strengthen it. Suspicions were at one time excited in some quarters that the measure was to be retrogressive in character, and that it would put the Committees more into leading strings than before; this idea of the scope and objects of the Bill would, he hoped, be seen to be quite inapplicable to the Bill, both as introduced and as it now stood. The new provisions did not involve a comprehensive working out of any new principle; they were merely supplementary to the present law, modest as they were in plan. Then the general tendency, almost without exception, was not to curtail municipal action, but to confer greater power and increased responsibility upon the Municipal Committee. In fact, this development of function was so considerable that in some instances it was only most advanced Municipalities that would be able and willing to undertake all the duties which the law permitted to be entrusted to them. Sir J. Lyall concluded by saying:—"Being responsible for the original draft of the Bill which is so closely connected with the life of the townspeople of the province, it has been to me, and I believe to those educated townspeople, a source of satisfaction and confidence that the Legislative Council in dealing with the measure have had the assistance of my friend Mr. Rattigan, for by his long experience of the Punjab—more especially in regard to the life of its great cities—he is peculiarly well-fitted to act as a guardian of popular interests, and an exponent of popular wishes in all matters connected with municipal administration."

The motion was then agreed to, and the amendment introduced by Mr. Mitter at Mr. Rattigan's request, under which arrears of taxes can be recovered from defaulters, in whatever part of the country they may be; and the Bill was then formally passed into law.

The Burma Municipal Act was also passed, with certain amendments introduced by Sir P. Hutchins. The most important of these was a clause adopted verbatim from the Punjab Bill relating to strikes among sweepers.

Sir P. Hutchins, in bringing up the Bill extending Act I of 1882 to certain parts in the Central Provinces, remarked incidentally that he hoped Government would shortly make public the amendment regarding that Act which controlled coolie emigration.

The Bill was passed, and the Council adjourned sine die.

Third Brigade (Col. Gough, commanding; Capt. Pirie, brigade major). Troops—16th Lancers, 4th B.C., and Central India Horse. 4th Brigade (Col. Macpherson, commanding; Capt. Haig, brigade major). Troops—18th Hussars, 2nd B.L., and 3rd B.C. One company of Sappers will attend the camp in the final manoeuvres. The Southern Division will be commanded by Col. Cooke, with Major Muir, 17th B.C., as assistant adjutant-general, and Capt. Edwards, adjutant, Behar Light Horse, deputy assistant adjutant-general. The division will consist of A, C, and T batteries, Cols. Jennings, Gough's, and Macpherson's brigades. The Northern Division will be commanded by Col. Buller, with Major Roche as assistant adjutant-general, and will be composed of A battery, and two brigades, one under Col. Grant—viz., 7th Dragoon Guards, 10th B.L., four squadrons of the Imperial Service Cavalry; and another under Col. Clifford—viz., 6th B.C., two squadrons of the Central India Horse, and some squadrons of the Imperial Service Cavalry.

Posts of deputy assistant adjutant-general of the 2nd Division at the Cavalry Camp of Exercise and of brigade-major to Col. Clifford will be filled by officers from the Madras and Bombay armies.

The Government of India have sanctioned the grant of 15,000 rs., allotted for camps of exercise in the Madras Presidency during the current financial year, being utilised as follows:—10,000 rs. to be devoted towards the carrying out of a complete rehearsal of the defence of Madras, and the remaining sum for annual camps of exercise. The additional allotment of 3,000 rs. applied for the purpose of holding a camp of exercise either at Bangalore or Secunderabad has, however, been refused.

The Gilgit Agency Guard.—The actual strength of the detachment of the 5th Goorkhas which left Abbottabad for Gilgit on Oct. 8 to form the British Agent's guard was two British and four native officers and 204 rank and file. It has been decided that one machine-gun will be enough to meet the requirements of the Gilgit Garrison.

Horse-breeding Operations and Remounts.—The Government of India have addressed a despatch to the Secretary of State on the general question of horse-breeding operations and remounts. They have decided that the number of young stock to be purchased yearly shall not exceed 700, all being over eighteen months old. Mr. J. B. H. Hallen, general superintendent, Horse-breeding Operations, has been granted one year's extension, with effect from July 21 last. The question of a further extension will be considered next July.

The Deolali Paymastership.—The Bombay Government have asked the Government of India to sanction the appointment of Mr. Adam Smith, of the Military Finance Office, as paymaster at the Deolali depot. The one difficulty, as we before pointed out (says the Lahore paper), is the precedent that will be created by appointing an Uncovenanted servant to a post that has always been held by a military officer; but rather than the traditions of the department should sustain a violent wrench by such an innovation Lord Harris has asked that the honorary rank of captain be conferred on Mr. Smith, who, by the way, is already a major in the Poona Volunteers. Mr. Smith at one time was a warrant officer, and resigned his military rank, a fact which will, perhaps, make it all the more difficult for the Secretary of State—to whom the whole question must be submitted for final disposal—to see his way to bring Mr. Smith into the army as even an honorary captain. If ever there was an opportunity of recognising Volunteer rank in connection with military duties, surely this is one; but it has occurred neither to Sir George Greaves, Lord Harris, or the Government of India, to dispose of this question in the simple way of nominating Major Adam Smith, Volunteer Army, to the post of the Deolali paymastership.

The Volunteer Committee at Simla, says the Pioneer, have concluded their labours, after meeting daily during the past week. They had before them the question of the Reserve, and came to the unanimous conclusion that the body, instead of injuriously affecting active volunteering, had materially assisted it. They also considered a large number of questions connected with the interior economy and discipline of the Volunteer force, and the concessions to be granted in order to make the movement more popular. It was found impossible to make one class of concessions applicable to all, but it was attempted so to fit in the concessions as to give each class of volunteers a fair share. The difficulties and objections under each head were thrashed out, the moot questions all arranged, and information and opinions recorded, so as to facilitate these subjects being dealt with by the Commission which it is proposed should assemble in Calcutta in the cold weather. Regarding this Commission the Committee have suggested that each Local Government should nominate representatives of the several classes of Volunteers in their respective provinces. From these lists the Government of India will be able to select a really representative body, whose recommendations should carry great weight. The committee was composed as follows:—Brig.-Gen. Morton, nominated by the Commander-in-Chief, president; Col. Rivett-Carnac, commandant of the Ghazipore Volunteers; Capt. A. B. Patterson and J. P. Hewett, Volunteer Reserve; Lieut.-Col. Leigh, officiating commandant, Capt. Weston and Capt. Hayden, adjutant, of the Simla Volunteers; Capt. Maude, 1st P.V.R. We do not see what reasonable objection can be taken to the constitution of the committee, particularly as its work is to clear the way for a conference at Calcutta in the cold weather, at which will be assembled representatives of Volunteer corps all over India.

Arrival of the Troopship "Malabar."—Her Majesty's troopship Malabar, under the command of Capt. John G. Jones, arrived at Bombay on Oct. 13 from Portsmouth, which port she left on Sept. 16, calling at Queenstown on the 18th, Malta on the 26th, Port Said on the 30th, and Suez on Oct. 1. During the voyage one child died. The Malabar had very fine weather during the voyage.

The four ten-barrelled Nordenfeldt guns, with which the Seaforth Highlanders, now in the Murree Hills, have been equipped since the Black Mountain Expedition of 1883, are to be sent up to Gilgit with 10,000 rounds of ammunition.

Regarding machine-guns generally for the British infantry in India, it is expected that forty-eight of the Maxim pattern, firing ammunition similar to that used in the magazine rifle, will be sent out from England next year.

Col. Tillard is to succeed General Nairne as inspector-general, Artillery.

Cols. Chamber, Lance, and Palmer succeed to brigade commands, vice Low, Lockhart, and Keene. The districts to which the above succeed are not definitely settled.

Surg.-Major D. C. Davidson acts as superintendent of Mahableshwar during the absence of Surg. H. W. Stevenson on privilege leave.

Lieut. B. Upperton, 2nd batt. Oxfordshire Light Inf., has been appointed aide-de-camp to Major-General R. B. H. Blundell, commanding Poona district.

Capt. F. J. Carandini, 8th Hussars, has resigned his appointment of adjutant, Behar Light Horse, and proceeds home at once to rejoin his regiment.

Capt. R. P. S. Barnett, Staff Corps, 3rd Bombay Cav., Commandant, Military Police, Burma, has been allowed furlough to Europe for six months on medical certificate.

Generals Nairne, Lockhart, and Low are appointed to succeed to First Class District Commands, vice Generals Sir Hugh Gough, Sir John Hudson, and Perkins. The latter will be promoted to Lieutenants-General early next year.

Capt. M. Bean took charge of his duties as Port Officer of Bombay on Oct. 12. Capt. B. P. Creagh, of the I.M.S. Clive, will take charge of the offices of Port Officer, Madras, and Capt. Jones will take the command of the I.M.S. Clive.

It is now certain that Sir John Hudson will vacate the Meerut command on April 1 on his promotion to the rank of Lieutenant-General.

An honorarium of 5,000 rs. has been given to Col. Toker, of the Military Department, in recognition of his services in translating the military standard text-books for the Native Army.

The Commander-in-Chief has made the following promotions in the Indian Nursing Service:—To be Lady Superintendent—Miss Betty. To be Acting Superintendents—Misses S. Harris, Latch, Peresford, Moore, Hislop, vice Welchman, resigned, and Wildman.

Col. Channer goes to Assam when Col. Collett goes on three months' leave; Col. Graham to Rohilkhand, to relieve Brig.-Gen. Low; Col. Collett to Peshawur, to relieve Col. Keene; Col. Stedman, from the Burma Police, is appointed to succeed Col. Harris, D.A.G.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Oct. 14.

The New Imperial Secretariat, Calcutta.—This great pile of buildings, says Indian Engineering, is daily showing signs of receiving its finishing touches—the scaffolding is disappearing and the general effect is now apparent. Of course, as was always known, the architectural features are a reproduction, more or less exact, of what most people have become familiar with in the adjoining Financial Buildings. Internally, however, there is much that is different, and altogether we believe the new Secretariat offices, with the exception perhaps of some of the record rooms, will prove very satisfactory to the several departments occupying them. The library will, we expect, prove a particularly attractive feature.

The Kidderpore Docks.—When Mr. Reynolds in January 1885 introduced the Port Improvement Act Amendment Bill into the Bengal Council he stated that it would involve no "increase of taxation and enable the Port Commissioners to lighten the burthens upon trade." That, says Capital, was the distinct promise; what is the performance? At this moment the question of the dock dues is being considered, and we understand that it is proposed to enhance the landing charges on piece goods by 2 a. per bale. A more flagrant breach of faith it is difficult to imagine, and we are within a measurable distance of the time when it will be utterly impossible to attach any credence to any utterance, however solemn, of the Government.

Emigration to Burma.—A Bengal Government Resolution on the annual report of the director of Land Records and Agriculture states that the director has given his attention to the question of emigration to Burma as a means of relief to the over-populated tracts of Behar and Chota Nagpore, and an agreement has been entered into with the British India Steam Navigation Company, under which that company has undertaken to reduce the deck fare to Rangoon from 10 rs. to 7-8 rs., of which 2-8 will be paid by the Bengal Government as a subsidy, the balance being paid by the emigrants. It is hoped that local recruiting agencies will soon be opened in various parts of the tracts to be relieved.

Winding-up of the Baragunda Copper Company.—At the extraordinary meeting of the shareholders of the Bengal Baragunda Copper Company, Limited, held on the 1st inst., it was unanimously resolved to wind-up the company voluntarily, and to authorise the liquidators to give a firm offer, to remain open till Nov. 30 next, for the sale of the company's property, as a going concern, to any new company that may be formed under the scheme dated Sept. 22, 1891.

A Babu "hard up."—Babu Janoki Nath Bysack, counsel for the Manipore princes, has issued a circular. He is in pecuniary difficulties, not having recovered his remuneration from his Manipore clients. Messrs. Bourne and Shephard have produced copies of the original photograph of the Senaputty given to him for his services, and the Babu offers to sell copies to princes, chiefs, and noblemen at one rupee each.

A seam of anthracite coal of good quality has been found in the Burdwan district. The thickness, as shown by experimental shafts, is about 30 feet, at 60 to 100 feet depth from the surface. The land has been acquired and a company will be formed. This will be the first anthracite mine worked in India. A great demand is expected.

The prospectus has been issued of the Calcutta Omnibus and Carrying Company. It starts with a stock of fifty omnibuses and 160 horses. The capital is a lac and a-half.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Oct. 15.

Terrible Railway Accident.—A telegram to the Times of India from Mysore, dated Oct. 12, says that a terrible accident occurred on the Southern Mahratta Railway early that morning. The 1.20 A.M. train from Mysore and the special from Bangalore ran into each other between French Rocks and Yelligur. The Bangalore train carried Fillis's Circus with the animals. Three engines were smashed up and the carriages made into splinters. Three native third-class passengers and two native firemen were killed and twelve injured, among whom is the driver, Fox. The accident, adds the correspondent, is said to be entirely due to the station-master Settaramy of Yelligur signalling "line clear" to the station-master at French Rocks, and then despatching the Bangalore special. Settaramy has bolted. The line will be blocked for two days. Fillis's lions and tigers which are left on the line are secured in cages. The dead and wounded were brought into Mysore this morning and lodged at the Civil Hospital. The scenes where the accident happened are described as heartrending. A correspondent writes later:—Very little further information has been received regarding the late disastrous collision on the Mysore State Railway, but two of the injured—a male passenger and a fireman—have since died, so that the killed are at present one woman, three male passengers, and two firemen. The badly injured are eight male passengers, two drivers; and four firemen and three passengers slightly hurt. The passengers are all natives. Upwards of twelve waggons were smashed up; also two carriages and the three engines have sustained very considerable damages. A number of waggons were also derailed. The station-master of Yelligur, who absconded, has up to the present time not been arrested. The wreckage has not yet been cleared, and passengers are still being transferred at the site of the accident from train to train.

Lord Wenlock.—The following telegrams from Madras report the Governor's movements:—Oct. 12.—The Governor, accompanied by Mr. Rees and Captain Holmes, left Ootacamund at four o'clock on Monday and proceeded to Coonoor, thence to Burliar, where the bridge was washed away and the road breached and covered with landslips. The party was obliged at nightfall to retrace their steps to Coonoor, where they halted for the night, proceeding next morning to Metapollum, fording the rivers in basket boats. Great damage has been done by the recent rain to roads and bridges.

Oct. 14.—Lord Wenlock had to walk the greater part of the distance from Coonoor to Metapollum owing to floods and landslips.

Oct. 15.—The Governor of Madras yesterday and to-day inspected the Relief Works at Trichengode Taluq. This portion only of the Salem District is now giving cause for anxiety, the rains having held off, though falling around on all sides. Probably no portion of the presidency has suffered more, but with the labour provided on the roads, the people are doing well. In other parts of the Salem District test relief works have been opened. The people have all left on the exaction of a small daily task. The condition of the neighbouring district of Coimbatore is good. Agricultural operations there are progressing. Great floods are reported on the Godavary river at Rajamundry, and parts of the town are flooded.

Land Records in Madras.—The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the appointment of an assistant director of Land Records in Madras provisionally for a period of five years. The appointment being for the present temporary, the Government of India desires the local Government to furnish a report on the results of the appointment towards the close of the year 1895. The Government of Madras has resolved to appoint Mr. L. M. Wynch, acting sub-collector of Coimbatore, to the new office, and as there is already an officer in this Presidency styled the assistant director of the Departments of Land Records and Agriculture, the newly-appointed officer is, subject to the approval of the Government of India, to be called deputy director of the Departments of Land Records and Agriculture. He is to be mainly an itinerant officer, and for the present one of his chief duties will be the organisation of the training of Kurnams in surveying and in keeping the maps and demarcation up to date. The question of modifying the constitution of the Board of Revenue, and appointing an assistant secretary in the Land Revenue Department, is likewise engaging the attention of the Madras Government.

A Train Attacked by Dacoits.—We, Madras Times, have received this startling piece of news from a Tanjore correspondent. The incidents recall the Wild West of America, when the James Brothers and their crew were on this line of business, and it is hard to believe that in this Presidency such things can take place:—"On Monday, at about eleven o'clock, the ordinary mail train from Madras that leaves Tanjore station at about ten o'clock was dacoited by a gang of about fifty dacoits between Budalur and Tiruvarambur stations, and railway money, to the extent of about 20,000 rs., that was in the van of the chief guard of the train, was carried off. The train was stopped by the dacoits removing the rails on the line to a distance of about 50 yards, so that the engine might be derailed and the train brought suddenly to a dead stop. No passengers' property was lost, though some of them and the railway servants were hurt by stones and brickbats thrown by the dacoits. The occurrence has created a great sensation in Tanjore and at Trichinopoly. The police are already investigating."

The total value of the sea-borne trade of the Madras Presidency in the year 1890-1891, exclusive of treasure and transactions on account of Government, amounted to 27 crores and 62 lacs, or 45½ lacs in excess of that in the previous year. There has been a steady increase in the trade of that Presidency for some years.

The statistics of coffee cultivation in Mysore for the year 1890-91 show that the number of plantations had reached 27,848, and covered a total area of 147,543 acres, of which 18,991 acres have not yet been planted out. The outturn of tea in the year amounted to 8,768,366 lbs.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Oct. 17.

The Governor's Tour in Sind.—A Poona telegram of Oct. 15 says:—The programme of Lord Harris's Sind tour has been settled. His Excellency, accompanied by Colonel Rhodes, Mr. Edgerley, Captain Fowler, and Dr. Martin, will leave Kirkee Station by the early mail on Friday morning, the 13th instant, for Tanna, where a halt of about twelve hours will be made. Bombay will be reached at 7 P.M. on Friday. On Nov. 1 his Excellency and party will embark at Bombay on board the I.M.S. Canning for Kurrachee, arriving at the latter place on the 4th idem. Lord Harris stays there four days, then goes on to Hyderabad, where he spends two days, then returns to Kotri and rides thirty miles to Arabjvahi, where he halts on the 12th, 13th, and 14th. Sukkur will be reached on the 17th, Shikarpore on the 20th, and Jacobabad on the 22nd. His Excellency reaches Quetta on the 24th, and remains there till the 30th, where he goes to Ruk, and from thence by steamer to Kotrie, from where he proceeds by rail to Kurrachee, reaching the latter place on Dec. 3.

Proposed Mofussil Nursing Association.—A prospectus, signed by Mr. W. Lee-Warner, C.S., has been issued, which contemplates the formation of an association, to be styled the "Mofussil Nursing Association," for providing nurses to attend sick Europeans in Poona and the Mofussil, the charge for a nurse being 5 rs. per diem. Her Excellency Lady Harris, C.I., has consented to become the first patron of the association, and the four trustees are Surgeon-General Pinkerton, Major-General Blundell, Dr. Theodore Cooke, C.I.E., and Mr. W. Lee-Warner, C.S. Dr. Thomson, of the College of Science, has offered to undertake the duties of honorary secretary. The want of trained nurses to attend upon sick Europeans has long been felt in Poona and in the Mofussil, and it is to supply this want that steps are being taken to form the Association. The Sisters of the Pauch Howds Mission will have the control of the nurses, and will receive 1,000 rs. for each nurse they supply, until such time as the Association can obtain six nurses. Subscribers to the Association will have to pay 5 rs. a year as subscription. Every European will be invited to become a subscriber.

It was notified that the Bombay Government would assemble at Mahabeshwar on Monday, Oct. 19.

The amount of wheat for export carried by the N.-W. Railway to Kurrachee during the first half of this year was very nearly double the amount carried during the corresponding period of 1890.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Nov. 1:—

An important step has been taken towards establishing order on the Chinese frontier and settling the limits of British territory, and one which is, moreover, likely to result in a considerable increase of trade between Yunnan and Burma. Sir A. Mackenzie has obtained the sanction of the Government of India to the placing of a military post on the west side of the Kampoung Choung, or stream, on the Taiping route to China. The Kampoung stream flows into the Taiping river from the north, joining it about forty miles from Bhamo. This post, which will consist of one of the newly-raised Burma regiments, will be established at the same place where the Burmese Government formerly kept an outpost, which has been always regarded locally as the border between China and Burma. Since the annexation, however, no British force has been stationed on the Kampoung Choung.

A strong detachment of military police will hold Mannoung, which is a large village about halfway between the Kampoung stream and Bhamo, and which is a great depot of the Chinese cotton trade. The military and police will effectively protect Chinese caravans when within our border. Henceforward caravans will not be allowed to be accompanied by guards of Chinese irregular troops, which were formerly supplied them by a free lance on the border. The Kachyen chief will be made clearly to understand that no more raids on caravans will be allowed, and that if caravans are attacked exemplary punishment will be inflicted. The Chinese Government have been informed through Peking of the occupation of the post on the Kampoung Choung.

No material change has occurred in the condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma. Yeu and Lower Chindwin are in a worse plight. The stock of rice is now very low, but the price has fallen in Rangoon from the recent high quotations owing to the anticipation that the next paddy crop will be available at an unusually early date. Some rain is required in Lower Burma, but the prospects of the next crop are, on the whole, excellent. A great increase in the numbers employed on the relief works is anticipated this month, and the pressure will scarcely be very severely felt during the next six weeks.

How severe the scarcity has been is shown by the detailed official reports received. The Financial Commissioner mentions that in the Yamethin district many of the people had not tasted rice, their staple food, for three months before being employed on the relief works. He adds that the population of large districts in Yamethin and Meiktila may be described as completely run down owing to the result of the unfortunate years since the annexation. In the Myingyan district the Financial Commissioner reports that in four sub-divisions the people were all living on roots and leaves, and that there was absolutely no stock of grain in the villages.

The Rangoon Gazette, in publishing a Resolution by the Chief Commissioner on the subject of the grievances of the Chinese merchants at Bhamo, about which (it says) a good deal has been heard lately, and which have been deemed of sufficient importance to justify the despatch of lengthy and sympathising telegrams to The Times, goes on to remark:—"It will be seen that the Chinese gentlemen in question have not much to complain of, and are not deserving of much sympathy. The Chief Commissioner's orders were passed after careful inquiry into the grievances set forth in a long petition presented to him at Bhamo, detailing the grievances, or supposed grievances, of the Chinese community. The orders recite the general nature of the grievances, and show what view Sir Alexander Mackenzie took of them. There is, no doubt, a good deal of dissatisfaction among the Chinese at Bhamo. They resent any interference with their smuggling propensities, and are much annoyed because a wealthy merchant of their community, on whose premises a large quantity of illicit liquor was found, got three months' imprisonment for it. They have not realised that smuggling is a crime; but they must be brought to see this. They complain of the discourtesy of the Deputy Commissioner, but it is not easy to give a man three months' in a courteous way, or at least in one which he himself and his friends will consider courteous. The Chinese at Bhamo, if they would only see it, are much better off now than they ever were before. Of course, they can no longer smuggle, but on the other hand their licit trade is free from all the old arbitrary exactions and restrictions. They are better off than they would be in their own country, or in Tonquin. In China no official of the standing of the Chief Commissioner would have taken the trouble to inquire minutely into a number of whining complaints, even had the traders dared to make them."

FOR THE past year or two there has been a somewhat unaccountable depression in the States adjoining the frontier of Lower Burma, and the land trade of the Lower Province has been sympathetically stagnant; but it is interesting to find, from the official figures published, that the expectations formed of the trade resources of Upper Burma are likely to be realised to the full. At Mandalay and Bhamo and Meiktila the figures registered rose enormously last year—in the case of Meiktila nearly 40 per cent.—and there is every indication that the country is more settled, that the routes are more safe, and the people more prosperous than ever was the case before.

BESIDES THE numerous military columns operating on the Burma frontier this cold season, two police columns go out. One marches from Momeik, meeting the Bhamo eastern column at Namban. The other will explore the Sinkan Valley, south of Bhamo, which has been a place of refuge for dacoits.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

THE DEFENCE WORKS about to be undertaken at Rawul Pindi are estimated to cost between forty and fifty lacs of rupees, a considerable portion of which will have to be spent on roads, as the country about the station is much broken up by ravines.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA have offered to double any sum subscribed by the Punjab Government towards the new waterworks scheme for Simla up to a sum of two lacs. Thus, if the latter give two lacs, the Government of India will increase the amount to four, and the future of the station water supply therefore now largely depends on the support given to the municipality's demands by the local Government.

ON OCT. 13 the Hindoos of Meerut painted up a bull buffalo and formed a procession and led this animal through the city, to drive the choleraic demon out of their midst. Cholera has of late been very rife in the city, and few homes have been spared. However, the course of the disease has been erratic. In Baraut it was in its most virulent epidemic form, carrying off 300 to 400 of strong young Jats within a fortnight. Then it appeared just as had in the European infantry bazaar, and later there were three or four cases in the Lanciers, Fusiliers, Artillery, Bengal Cavalry and Infantry, and, lastly, in the city. The weather has become suddenly cooler lately, and sickness generally has abated in consequence.

FURTHER ACCOUNTS of the shooting of the two rifle thieves at Rawul Pindi by the sentry—Private Chandler, of the Bedfordshire Regiment—writes the Lahore paper, show that he acted with courage and presence of mind. Having been alarmed elsewhere, the thieves, five in number, attempted to escape past the sentry on all fours. He at first thought they were donkeys grazing, but challenged, when they all rose to their feet, and separated, as if to surround him. He challenged twice more, and then fired one round with the effect, as already stated, of killing one man and mortally wounding another. The fatal effect of the single round of buck-shot in this instance is confirmation of the soundness of our recommendation that for use at night, in jungle warfare and generally in fighting with uncivilised enemies, buck-shot should be freely used instead of bullets. In jungle warfare and in a skirmish at night a volley of buckshot would do infinitely more execution than several volleys of ordinary ball cartridge.

A VERY SATISFACTORY REPORT has been issued on the Excise Administration of the Punjab for the official year 1890-91. Here, as elsewhere, says the Times of India, the policy of the department for seven or eight years past has been to secure the concentration of the manufacture of country spirits by reducing the number of central distilleries. Some years ago there was a distillery at almost every tahsil in the province. There are now only twenty-nine distilleries, which, except in the Kangra and Hazara districts, are situated at the district headquarters. The Government of the Punjab claims, not without reason, that this concentration of the manufacture of spirits not only tends to an improvement of the methods of distillation and the quality of the liquor, but enables Government to maintain larger and better-paid establishments at the headquarters' distilleries, to improve and enlarge these buildings, and generally to introduce a better system of distillery management. The present number of distilleries is to be retained without further reduction until more information is gained as to the organisation of the liquor trade and the natural centres of production; but in the meantime the Excise Commissioner proposes that a system of wholesale licenses for the sale of country spirits should be introduced with the object of separating manufacture from vend, and thereby improving the quality of the spirits turned out. The question is to be made the subject of a separate report to Government.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE Khan of Khiva has decided to send his eldest son to Russia to complete his education, as he intends shortly to associate his heir with himself in the Government of his dominions.

A St. Petersburg letter to the Pester Lloyd gives some interesting details of the commercial relations between Afghanistan and Russia. About two years ago Afghan merchants began to visit the Fair of Nishni-Novgorod, and last year they made considerable purchases.

The greater part of their goods was, however, lost in the Caspian Sea by the foundering of a large steamer. Rear-Admiral Baranoff, Governor of Nishni-Novgorod, however, convened the wholesale merchants of Nishni, and induced them to recoup the Afghans for their loss gratuitously. On learning this the Afghan merchants visited the fair this year in greater number, and brought a letter from the Ameer to the Governor expressing his thanks to the Russian merchants, and inviting them to visit the Afghan markets, where every consideration would be shown them. From this incident arose the negotiations at present going on for a Commercial Treaty between Afghanistan and Russia. It is even rumoured that Abdul Rahman Khan, besides sending an Extraordinary Mission to St. Petersburg to conclude the Treaty, will even go so far as to exclude British goods from Afghanistan.

Colonel Grombchevsky, the Russian explorer of Pamir, who was stopped from entering Cashmere to pass the winter by our Resident there, Colonel Nisbet, has exhibited his soreness on the subject to M. Barnes Steveni. The latter gives an account of his interview with Colonel Grombchevsky in the new and greatly extended number of the Imperial and Asiatic Quarterly Review. The Russian explorer is indignant at the suspicion that he was engaged on a political mission, and he said to M. Steveni:—"The Czar, before giving me permission to go, distinctly impressed upon me—and these are almost the identical words of his Imperial Majesty—to 'avoid anything that would give England the least ground of complaint, otherwise I will not let you go. I do not wish for more territory. My late father has left me quite sufficient. All I wish is to keep what I have and to develop its resources.'"

A telegram from St. Petersburg, dated Oct. 31, says:—Judging from the disposition shown in Russian Diplomatic circles in regard to the Pamir Question, it is evident that the Russian Government intends to let the matter drag on in order to allow of the influence which time must exercise upon it, thus rendering a future settlement more easy. It is pointed out that negotiations for a solution of the question can only be proceeded with when the weather in that district is such as to allow of a meeting on the spot of the delegates of the countries interested for the necessary delimitation of the frontiers.

THE Civil and Military Gazette says:—Following close upon his abortive attempt to persuade the export and import traders, assembled at a meeting in Cabul on Sep. 6, to resume their traffic between India and Central Asia via Afghanistan, the Ameer has endeavoured to bring them to terms by a meeting at Peshawur. On the 2nd inst. the Ameer's dak agent summoned all the merchants at Peshawur to the Ameer's Serai near Edwards' gate, and after refreshments, consisting of tea and pilao, had been served, the Ameer's proposals were put before those present. The following is the translation which has been sent to us of the proposals:—

1. The Ameer regrets to state that since his accession to the Afghan throne they have altogether stopped importing and exporting their goods for Central Asia via Afghanistan, and have accordingly fixed Bombay and Moscow as the routes for importing and exporting merchandise for Central Asia and Persia, in which the Ameer's Government loses 1,72,000 rs. yearly.

2. Goods intended to be purchased for the Ameer's Government are obtained with difficulty, owing to the above cause of not passing through Afghanistan.

3. The Ameer requests each of you to adopt the practice hitherto done by them in the time of Ameers Dost Mahomed Khan, Afzul Khan, Mahomed Azum Khan, and Shere Ali Khan.

4. The Ameer promises to in future give them a commission on anything purchased by him from Russia or Central Asia, which would in every case be through him.

5. The Ameer further promises to charge less octroi on goods, which would not exceed the rate fixed by previous Ameers, especially of Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan.

6. The Ameer wanted an agreement of their abiding by the rules.

The merchants were allowed time for thinking over the matter, and the meeting dissolved.

At the previous meeting in Cabul the agents had been instructed to communicate with their firms in Peshawur, but the latter had given no reply to the different proposals. Apparently they were equally reluctant to commit themselves to anything at the second meeting: for nothing is stated in our correspondent's account of the spirit in which the proposals were received, one way or the other.

Another correspondent, however, adds that similar meetings of merchants were called at various centres in Afghanistan, and the same proposals read to them, when they were informed that if they did not agree to resume trading through the country as heretofore their agents would be expelled from Afghanistan and not allowed to return.

The same correspondent also states that the merchants replied that the reason of the abandonment of the through trade was the high octroi demanded by the Ameer, and that, if he would be content with the octroi demanded by previous Ameers, Dost Mahomed and Shere Ali, then they would resume traffic through Afghanistan, but not otherwise. This reply has been sent to the Ameer, and his answer is expected in a few days.

According to a trans-frontier correspondent of the Lahore paper the first engagement in the campaign between Umra Khan of Jandol and the allied forces of the Khans of Nawaghi, Lalpura and Girdani, has been fought, resulting in a decisive victory for Umra Khan. There were several thousand men engaged on each side, and the losses are said to have been about 180 on the side of the defeated Khans, and only 17 of Umra Khan's men. If this is confirmed, and if the rest of the campaign goes in favour of Umra Khan, the Ameer will probably be forced to take an active part; because the Khans of Lalpura and Girdani are fighting under his orders and on his behalf. On the other hand, the Government of India should not tolerate the direct interference of the Ameer with the independence of Bajaur and Swat.

The Pioneer writes:—It is not every reader, perhaps, who will understand how the solution of the question of Afghan sovereignty over Badakshan and Wakhan affects the right of Russia to seize the Pamirs. Badakshan is a province lying for the most part within the great loop of the Oxus and south of that river. Its dependency of Wakhan stretches eastward right into the great Pamir, in the western portion of which lies Wood's Lake, which was taken as the starting point of the Afghan frontier. The Russians now claim that they have perfect freedom of action to move straight down from the Alai Range, which has hitherto been considered their boundary, across the Pamirs to the Hindu Kush; and, as we know, they ordered Captain Younghusband out of Bozai Gumbaz, which is almost due south of Wood's Lake. This move gives them free access to the passes leading into Hunza, Yasin, and Chitral. Unfortunately for their contention that the annexation of this stretch of country from the Alai to the Hindoo Kush is a perfectly legitimate operation, there are facts at the command of the English Government which go to prove that they are guilty of a gross breach of faith. In the negotiations of 1872-73 Prince Gortschakoff placed special stress upon a memorandum drawn up by General Kaufmann, then Governor of Turkistan. The native name of Wood's Lake is Sarikul, and General Kaufman spoke of "Sarikoul, a province of Kashgar bordering on Wakhan." Later on he referred to Wakhan as a country which to the north borders on the Pamir Steppe; "to the east it marches with Sarikoul, which belongs to the States under Yakoub Beg." Here there is absolute evidence that the Afghan frontier—for Prince Gortschakoff acknowledged in the end that Wakhan must be accepted as belonging to Shere Ali—was continuous with that of Kashgar, then under the rule of Yakoub Beg, but afterwards conquered by the Chinese. It was General Kaufmann himself who thus defined the frontier; Prince Gortschakoff unreservedly accepted the conclusions which he formulated, and added that should the Ameer of Cabul extend his authority over Badakshan and Wakhan "he would find himself in immediate contact with Kashgar, Kokand, and Bokhara." Captain Younghusband considered himself in Chinese territory when he journeyed to the Pamirs, and the presence of a General from Kashgar in the Alichur Pamir showed that the authority of the Peking Government was real, and not a mere shadow; but the Russians had coolly brushed aside the local Chinese officials, and practically annexed the country which they pretended to be exploring. There cannot be the slightest doubt that the authority of the Governor of Kashgar extends to Sarikul and the Alichur, and that the Russians have no possible right to force their way through Chinese territory in order to seize the Little Pamir and the northern entrances to the Hindoo Kush passes. If they persist in justifying Gromchevsky's action in this matter, they must repudiate the utterances of Prince Gortschakoff and the memorandum of General Kaufmann, in which it was so explicitly stated that Sarikul was a Province of Kashgar, and that its borders marched with those of Wakhan.

When Captain Younghusband, on arrival at Bozai Gumbaz, found Russian detachments on the Little Pamir and heard of more to the north, says the Pioneer, he sent off Lieutenant Davison to the Alichur Pamir to discover what was the strength of the main body. This was before receiving the notice to quit which he eventually had to obey, owing to his having no escort with him to enforce his right to remain on neutral ground. Lieutenant Davison journeyed past Wood's Lake (Sarikul) and then turned to the north-west to another lake, the Yashil Kul, into which the Alichur River empties itself. He reached the village of Somartash on the western extremity of this second lake, having crossed the high range in which the principal passes are, the Bash Gumbaz and Khargosh. He was then on the borders of the Afghan Province of Shighnan, which marches with Chinese territory, and he no doubt thought that he could not possibly be interfered with by the Russians. The latter, however, had practically taken possession of the Alichur Pamir and the valley through which the river of that name runs, and they promptly ordered him to leave. He was not allowed to rejoin Captain Younghusband, and so took the northern route to Yarkand. There has seldom, we should think, been a case in which two British officers were treated with such scant courtesy on a pretext so utterly unjustifiable.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

The following telegrams have been published since our last issue:—

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 29 (Reuter).—A terrific earthquake has visited the southern coast of Nipon, the great island which forms the larger part of the Japanese Empire. Owing to the breaking of the telegraph wires, few details are forthcoming, but it is known that the populous city of Osaka and Kobe, the suburb of Hiogo, in which most of the foreign residents live, have suffered most severely. The shocks passed in a westerly direction along the shore of the Bay of Osaka. Both at Osaka and Kobe, which are twenty miles apart, and are connected by a railway, the havoc caused by the earthquake was immense. The houses are mostly of light construction, and hundreds of these were destroyed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (Reuter).—Dispatches have been received here giving details of the recent terrible earthquake in Japan. There appears to have been little or no previous warning. The shock passed from east to west, and was felt across the entire island. The unfortunate people had no time to escape. Thousands were crushed to death in an instant. Thriving settlements were wiped out, and their sites are only now marked by a heap of ruins. Those who escaped the first shock fled by thousands to places of safety. Hundreds of those who escaped with their lives have died from exposure and want. An enormous area is affected, and the havoc is unprecedented. The lowest computation gives the number of deaths as 24,000, but it is probable that this will prove far below the actual total. The officials are paralyzed. The efforts to provide relief are totally inadequate. It is feared that hundreds of poor creatures must still succumb to their miseries.

To make matters worse, over seventy miles of railway have been utterly destroyed, thus preventing rapid communication with the affected districts. It is feared that several European residents are among the victims, but two tourist parties now in Japan are all safe.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 26 (New York Herald).—The anti-foreign movement continues in the Hunan province. Among the rebel chiefs are many of the Viceroy's magistrates and generals. The Government seems unable to prevent the spread of the uprising and the propaganda against foreigners.

The following is the substance of a document which has been everywhere displayed on the walls.

"Let us, the inhabitants who are desirous of preventing the violation of our country, prepare a plan of defence so that every district may take up arms and assemble its forces. Every great district should furnish 20,000 men, every lesser district 15,000, and every small district 10,000. Let us chase from the province the devil-mouthed European pigs. Having power, money, and men, and being brave, let us destroy the enemy. It will be much better to burn the dwellings, churches, and mission buildings than to confiscate them for the purpose of increasing the revenues. We will extinguish fires dangerous to Chinese dwellings. Let us stamp out the cult of Jesus; let us punish the converted Chinese, the traitors; let us banish the families of the guilty on the ships of the American fleet. Germany comes flying to our aid."

The Shanghai correspondent of the Times telegraphs:—Mason, the British subject accused of supplying arms to a secret society, has pleaded guilty, and he has been sentenced to nine months' imprisonment.

The N. C. Daily News, in its issue of Sept. 25, as regards the steps contemplated by the Powers if the Chinese Government fails, as is expected, to give the protection to foreigners which is demanded, writes as follows:—What is contemplated is—and in mentioning this we are not in any way disclosing a secret that should be kept sacred, because it is already known to the Chinese authorities—that a fleet of some forty ships of the navies of the great Powers shall come here and occupy Shanghai and Woosung, until the Chinese Government grants our demands. Trade here will not be interfered with, but the Powers will take the receipts at the Custom-house and hold them meanwhile. The step is one that has been suggested lately in different quarters. Shanghai is the centre of China now, and beyond the actual recapture of Peking, nothing could have a greater effect on the mind of the Government than the occupation of Shanghai and the Woosung forts, and the command of the mouth of the Yangtze, by the Powers. There will not necessarily be any bombarding, or any destruction of property, or loss of life. The force of which the foreign commander-in-chief will dispose will be too strong for the Chinese to attempt resistance. It will not be war at all; it will merely be the holding of a material guarantee to enforce compliance with our just demands. The scheme has been well thought out, and will be executed at little expense, and this expense, if it is thought advisable, can be recouped from the Customs' receipts here. The best of the scheme is that it is so simple and so feasible that it will probably, as we all hope and trust, not have to be put in operation. The Chinese Government must give way as the time draws near; it may feel unwilling to risk the loss of "face" before its own people that giving way implies; but there is a chance of still greater disasters to the dynasty if it allows the Powers to carry out the scheme. None of us want to see China involved in a war with foreign Powers, with all the misery that a war, and possibly a concomitant rebellion, would bring; and we all hope that when the government at Peking realises the consequences of obstinacy, it will give way with all the grace it can. It is sometimes humiliating to accept the inevitable, but it is wise not to defer accepting it too long.

The China Mail, commenting on the above, remarks:—The occupation of Shanghai would doubtless stimulate the Government at Peking to do its utmost to grant protection; but, as the continuance of the trouble is due far more to the helplessness than to the unwillingness of the central Government the step proposed by the Foreign Powers would not greatly improve matters. However, the threat has had the effect of inducing China to adopt the only alternative she has for foreign occupation. According to a Reuter's telegram the Chinese Minister in Paris has informed M. Ribot that the Northern squadron, which is under the control of Viceroy Li, will be sent to the Yangtze. But unless the Northern squadron is backed up by Li Hung-chang's partially disciplined troops, the centre of the disturbance will remain untouched. The authorities at Peking dread giving Viceroy Li carte blanche to suppress the rebellion, fearing an outbreak of civil war, and distrusting the powerful satrap so far as not to wish the increase of his power that the employment of his troops would produce. If the Government's effort to quell the disturbance proves inadequate, the only effective course in the present juncture is the policing of the open ports by foreign sailors or soldiers. A company of 50 to 100 men well-armed would be sufficient to keep Chinese roughs in order. Finding disturbance impracticable, the rioters would desist from molesting foreigners, and the secret societies would probably abandon for a time their project of subverting the Government. A temporary solution of the crisis would thus be obtained, and perhaps before another outbreak the foreign nations most intimately concerned may have evolved a scheme of administering or "protecting" the country, should the Manchu or native authorities be incapable of performing the task. Meantime a feeling of uneasiness exists at all the treaty ports. In spite of the edict of the Emperor anti-foreign placards are still being manufactured.

The British Consul at Hankow called on H.E. Chang Chih-tung and returned the 5,000 taels which were paid to the ladies who suffered such bad treatment at the hands of the Wusueh mob. The Consul further told the Viceroy that the missionaries requested that the ringleaders in the Wusueh riot be not branded, as the disfigurement would destroy the possibility of the culprits ever reforming. H.E., on hearing this request, could not help exclaiming that such a good action was indeed that of virtuous men, and that he would grant the request with pleasure.

One of the conditions imposed by the foreign Representatives on the Chinese Government (writes the N. C. Daily News) is that the officials concerned in the recent riots shall be punished, and not merely the coolies, who were only the instruments of the conspirators. We now learn that the Wuhu Taotai, who was said to have been degraded for his culpable conduct during the riot of May 12, has returned to Wuhu and received the congratulations of the people and the gentry, and been presented with umbrellas and scrolls of honour. A petition to the Viceroy at Nankin for his re-instatement is, it is said, being got up, and it is reported that it will probably be successful. Now the conduct of this official is at the bottom of all the outrages; it was he who gave the first example of inactivity in the face of the riot. His famous telegram of May 12, which was made public and spread about everywhere, averred that he had found in the houses of the missionaries, carcasses, eyes, and portions of children. This evidence, which has never been revoked, has been the train which has lighted the fires from Wuhu to Ichang, and its author is now returning in triumph to Wuhu. It is not, therefore, astonishing that a placard, dated Sept. 11, has been posted at Wangkianghien (Ngankang Fu) saying: "Those who do not kill missionaries are not men; their houses should be burnt everywhere and to the ground; no one has been sent into banishment for doing it." We understand that these facts having come to the knowledge of M. Wagner, he has telegraphed them to M. Ristelhueber, the French chargé d'affaires at Peking, who has brought them to the notice of the Tsungli Yamén. The Yamén has telegraphed to the Viceroy at Nankin, but whether any steps will be taken promptly remains to be seen. The Ministers, though, are not prepared just now to accept the usual Chinese delays and excuses.

A telegram to the Times from Singapore (Oct. 27), states:—The Singapore Chamber of Commerce and the Straits Settlements Association yesterday petitioned Lord Knutsford for appellate rights from the Malay Native States Courts to the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements.

Unsatisfactory reports (says the Singapore Free Press) are to hand of the position of the British North Borneo Trading Co., their difficulties being attributed to bad management, low prices, and labour difficulties.

OUR BOOK NOTICES.

THE CONQUEROR OF BENGAL.*

THIS is a novel founded on the exploits of Todar Mall, and it is, therefore, of a quasi-historical character. The tale is very well told and naturally developed, and it obtained considerable popularity in its original Bengali form. A translation into Hindi has now made its appearance, and it is worthy the reputation of the original book. It is a good specimen of literary Hindi, written without affectation; and it shows how steadily the Hindi language is moving into prominence in the North-West Provinces. Gadādhār Singh has acted wisely in introducing into his province some of the excellent novels which have in recent years been published in Bengal. It is a form of composition which favours the development of a terse and colloquial style of prose, and will do much to cultivate the taste of North-Westerns. The book is not too difficult to form a reading-book for any European who may wish to improve his knowledge of the Hindi language.

A few years ago Gadādhār Singh published a translation of a novel called "Durgēśanandini," in which the gentleness, fortitude, and self-abnegation characteristic of the Hindū woman were pleasingly set forth in an entertaining form. This tale was also an historical novel, relating to events of the tenth century; and it gives a clear insight into several circumstances of Indian domestic life. It is pleasant to notice that a practical form of Hindi is growing up, which, while drawing on its Sanskrit prototype for refinement, makes use of such Persian, English, and other words as are generally understood. The attempt to build up an ideal language based upon Sanskrit only is happily being abandoned; and the far easier and more effective method of enriching the spoken language from every available source is becoming better appreciated and more constantly reduced to practice. Gadādhār Singh's style is good and clear, and he is certainly doing something to improve his vernacular.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GAYA DISTRICT.

MR. G. A. GRIERSON, the well-known Hindi scholar and popular Collector of Gayā, has put together an interesting description of his district, in the course of which he not only minutely describes its geographical peculiarities, but also the arts, manufactures, and antiquities of the place, introducing several legends both curious and historically valuable. As is well known, Gayā was the centre of Buddhism in ancient days, and an enormous number of relics of that faith lie scattered over the district and buried in the numerous mounds which dot the landscape. Unnumbered archæological treasures are there awaiting exhumation; and if careful exploration be carried on, it might be confidently predicted that from the earth of this favoured spot the whole history of the Buddhist idea would be recovered from oblivion. The interest attaching to some of the local legends may be illustrated by that related in connection with Dharmapuri. It is said that that place once had a Rājā named Padumchakra, who had a minister called Bhikham, and a son called Chandrasena, who fought with and overcame Somadatta. This is merely the mythical way of saying that the Lord of the Lotos and Wheel (padma and chakra), that is, Buddha, was assisted by mendicants (bhikshu); and that Buddhism was succeeded by the Leader of the Crescent-Moon (chandra-sena), or Siva, who vanquished the Soma-worshippers, or ancient Vedic ceremonial. The deductions of scholars have here the support of local tradition in the spot where the leading events must have occurred. Mr. Grierson's report will be valued by all students of Buddhism.

Government Resolution on the Gaol Reports.—A resolution on the Provincial Gaol Reports for the year 1890 says that the views of local governments on the suggestion in the report of the Committee which recently inquired into the working of gaols have been under consideration, and orders of the Government of India will shortly issue. The number of convicts in gaols at the beginning of 1890 was 81,629, against 75,765 in 1889, and 1,231 males and 48 females were sent in 1890 to Port Blair, against 2,090 and 50 in 1889. Of convicts admitted to gaol during the year 13,248 had been previously once convicted, 4,055 twice, and 3,255 more than twice. The total number of offences has risen from 82,000 to over 95,000, the increase occurring chiefly in the Punjab and Burmah. The gross expenditure has been 52,81,288 rs., and the gross average cost of keeping each prisoner has been 60-4 rs., or a rupee less than the former year. The cost is lowest in the North-West Provinces, viz. 43 rs.; and highest in Assam, viz. 79 rs. The total cash earnings of prisoners have been 10,09,038 rs., showing a decrease of nearly 45,000 rs. The health statistics are not so satisfactory as in 1889: the death-rate has considerably declined, being 30-68 per mille of the average strength, as against 35-63 in the previous year.

Parliamentary Papers.—Manipore.—A further batch of correspondence relating to the incidents at Manipore was issued on Friday. The most important despatch is that from the Secretary of State for India to the Viceroy, in which the policy of the Indian Government is reviewed. Lord Cross (as has already been briefly announced) expresses the opinion that the Government was right in deciding to interfere when the revolution took place. He goes on to say:—"I am equally satisfied that no interference which left the successful head of the rebellion, a man notorious for his turbulent and violent character, in possession of the real power of the State would have been adequate, and that your decision to remove the Senaputty from Manipore and intern him in India was sound and politic. The question whether the ex-Maharaja should be restored, or whether the Jobraj should be acknowledged as Maharaja was," continues Lord Cross, "by no means so clear as that of the Senaputty's removal. Your Government were at first inclined to restore him, and only yielded to the strong remonstrances which the Chief Commissioner urged against that course. I have very carefully considered the subject in the light of the objections urged by Mr. Quinton to the restoration of the expelled Maharaja, and am of opinion that your Government was justified in yielding to those objections. The obligations imposed on you by the declaration of the Government of India in 1851, though not limited to Maharaja Kirti Chundur, were necessarily dependent on the Maharaja's capacity to govern, and on his willingness to abide by our advice. In this case, the Maharaja's abandonment of his throne and territory (for I am satisfied that his abdication was deliberate and complete), and his unreadiness to follow the advice of your Government, absolved you from looking to any other considerations than those demanded by the interests of peace and good government, while the representations of the local authorities, as well as the Maharaja's previous history, indicated that these interests would in all probability be better served by the acknowledgment as Maharaja of the heir apparent, than by the forcible restoration of one who had shown himself incapable of properly exercising the authority conferred upon him. The decision to accept the Jobraj as Maharaja, if Sur Chandra Sing was not to be restored, followed as a matter of course. He had not taken part in the insurrection, he was the heir apparent, he was supposed to be capable, he had shown himself amenable to advice, and there was practically no other competitor. So far then as the policy of your Government is concerned, I am glad that Her Majesty's Government have been able to afford it their full support. It was honourable, it asserted the rights of the Government of India, and it was calculated to give assurance to feudatory chiefs. Nor do I doubt that you were right in leaving to the discretion of the Chief Commissioner the details of the method of enforcing your decision. One question remains, which I think may be better dealt with in considering the orders of your Government than in considering the action of your subordinates. I refer to Mr. Quinton's intention for causing the Senaputty, should he not surrender, to be arrested in durbār. I have considered this subject very carefully in the light of your telegram of May 11 last, in which you explained that you had no specific information on this point until the receipt of Mr. Gurdon's telegram of May 7, and I am satisfied that in giving your sanction to the proposals formulated in Mr. Quinton's telegram of March 18, you had no reason to contemplate, and in fact did not contemplate, this action. I fully concur with you that nothing like treachery can be imputed to Mr. Quinton in this matter, but care should be taken that persons summoned to attend durbārs, which are almost universally understood to be held for ceremonial purposes, should not be subjected therein to measures of personal restraint." [The price of the Paper is 3d.]

OFFICIAL GAZETTES.

NOTIFICATIONS.

THE STUDY OF RUSSIAN.

THE following Indian Army Circular has been published :—

In continuation of Indian Army Circulars of 1890, clause 33, it is notified that the Secretary of State for India has approved of officers of the Indian Army and Indian Medical Service, who are duly qualified, being permitted, should they so desire and the exigencies of the service permit it, to proceed to Russia from India for the further course of study required to enable them to qualify as interpreters.

2. An officer who receives the necessary permission will be required to leave India for Russia in May or November, so as to be on the same footing as the officers of his batch who go there from England. He will proceed to Russia at his own expense via Persia or such other route as may be approved by the Government of India, proceeding thence to England for the examination held by the Civil Service Commissioners in London, as the interpreter's examination is not held in India.

3. If an officer succeeds in qualifying to be an interpreter, he will receive the gratuity of 200*l.*, and a further sum of 20*l.* towards the cost of his journey to Russia, plus half the consolidated sum of 32*l.* or 42*l.*, which is allowed to an officer who has proceeded from England, for travelling expenses to and from St. Petersburg or Moscow, as the case may be. He will be required to rejoin in India within two months from the date on which the examination begins in London, unless he is granted leave or furlough beyond that period.

4. With the exception of those officers who pass out of the Staff College, no officer has a claim to proceed to Russia on duty, by reason of his having satisfied the test, and if more than eighteen months have elapsed since an officer satisfied the test, he will be required to undergo a fresh examination before receiving permission to proceed to Russia.

5. Officers proceeding from India to Russia will come under the general regulations laid down in clause 82 of India Army Circulars of 1888, with these modifications that, if they are subject to the leave rules for the Staff Corps, they will be considered as on leave from date of quitting appointment to date of arrival in Russia, and from date of quitting Russia to date of rejoining appointment in India; and if they are subject to the military furlough regulations of 1868 or 1875, or the Civil Leave Code, they will be entitled to count as Indian duty for promotion and pension, but not as service for furlough, the period from the date of quitting India until date of arrival in India within two months after their final examination.

6. The half-yearly examinations in India are held in January and July, and the names of the officers who are recommended by the Government of India for permission to proceed direct from India to Russia are furnished to the India Office as soon as the results of the examination are known. The names of the officers who are finally selected or communicated by the India Office to the Government of India, who give authority to each selected officer to take up his residence in Russia. The passport of an officer proceeding direct from India to Russia will be issued either by the Governor-General of India or by the Governor of Madras or of Bombay. The necessary visé should be procured by the officer at Teheran, or any other place on the route where there is an accredited Russian agent.

7. In order to procure the necessary special recommendation to be permitted to proceed to Russia, an officer should apply through the proper regimental or other channel, as early as possible before the date he intends presenting himself for the test examination if he has not already satisfied the test. In submitting such application the candidate's commanding officer or departmental superior officer will certify, as required by paragraph 3, India Army Circulars, clause 33 of 1890, "that the officer is in every way a desirable candidate, that his character as a soldier, and the nature of his services, are such as to make it likely that he would be employed as a Russian interpreter, or as a Staff or regimental officer on the frontier or in the field." If the applicant has already satisfied the test, the place and date and nature of the test examination should be stated and the authority quoted, and in every case it must be noted whether the applicant wishes to proceed to Russia from England or India. In the case of an officer who wishes to proceed from England to Russia, his application will be submitted, through the prescribed channel, for the orders of the Government of the Presidency to which the applicant belongs; in the case of an officer who wishes to proceed to Russia direct from India, his application will be submitted, through the prescribed channel, for the orders of the Government of India, who will issue the necessary instructions. An officer proceeding to Russia direct from India must report the date of his arrival in Russia (with his address), and subsequently the date he quits Russia for England to the India Office.

TRADE AND MONEY MATTERS IN INDIA.

THE Pioneer says:—Unquestionably the year that closed with the end of March last was an annus mirabilis in the history of Indian trade, and Mr. J. E. O'Connor, who holds that branch of the country's affairs under his special cognisance, did well to expedite the issue of the more material sections of his annual report while the features of the period were still fresh in the public mind. Many of the questions raised by the abnormal conditions then prevalent are still in the air. Year after year we have been accustomed to find the Financial Minister complaining that the revenues have been depleted and the estimates thrown out of joint by the fall of silver, and that all his calculations for the future are subject to the further fluctuations which he can foretell without being able to provide against in the value of that metal. But in the financial year just past it was brought home for the first time to the commercial community in a way that they could not help recognising, that currency instability is capable of doing damage in more than one direction; and it is to be hoped that the lesson will have impressed even upon the exporting interest a clear recognition of the monstrous condition of things into which the civilised world has been brought, under which trade and production have come to be swayed and governed by the metals which should be no more than their instrument. The rise in the value of silver, which was the feature of the year, commenced some time previous to April 1. The first symptoms appeared in December 1889, and the rise was sufficient to bring considerable relief to the Government finances by the time when it was necessary to close the year's accounts, as well as to cause great difficulties to the Indian export trade, which had not in the least reckoned with so unusual a phenomenon, and was further embarrassed by the extraordinary scarcity of money in Calcutta and Bombay. Throughout the early summer months, when the export trade should be most brisk, exchange kept steadily mounting. By the middle of July it had reached the then extraordinary point of 1s. 6½d. Immediately upon this followed the passing of the compromise Silver Bill by Congress, and the huge speculation which followed in the expectation that that measure would send silver to 1s. 9d., and keep it in that neighbourhood. The price mounted as a fact to over 1s. 8½d., but in virtue of these speculative purchases only. The crisis that came about in the New York money market during the autumn made the reaction more speedy and complete than it need otherwise have been: the holders of the metal were forced to sell, and by the end of the calendar year the price was again 1s. 6½d. In the remaining three months of the official year the conditions were exactly the reverse of what they had been a twelvemonth before. Exchange has been gradually falling instead of rising. Money instead of being unprocurable has been unprecedently cheap. Temporarily the conditions have been all in favour of the exporter again; but with such a history of vicissitude before us who shall say how the position will stand six months hence?

The story of this rise and fall has been narrated by Mr. O'Connor with his usual clearness, and there was nothing to gain by repeating in different words a statement of the case which all who are in any way interested in the questions of trade and exchange will certainly have studied for themselves. But it is not only as a matter of past history that fluctuations so violent and abnormal as those of last year have to be viewed. There is no virtue in the official April 1 to interrupt the continuous process of ebb and flow, of action and reaction, that is the standing law of the commercial world. The condition of things with the money market and trade in a given season is as surely the outcome of precedent conditions as the character of the monsoon is the outcome of the sum total of the climatic conditions at its outset. It is the fact that a Trade Report is not telling us only what happened last year, but, properly read, is explaining the phenomena of to-day that makes its interest so different from that of an ordinary administrative report that merely gives one a disconnected slice of official history. But as the difficulty of the meteorologist is to foretell or account for the result when some of the causes are in the dark and the relative value of the others uncertain, it is the extreme complexity and multiplicity of the forces operating to produce any given movement in economics that makes it so difficult in general to found any broad conclusions and to trace the connection between past and present. An abnormal period, therefore, like the last two years, when one or two overmastering influences have manifestly directed the whole turn of economic currents, is highly instructive from the theoretical point of view, though it may be fraught with disaster to the practical interests of commerce. From the à priori standpoint, the first thing that we should expect from a condition of things such as that which obtained in the spring of 1890, when the course of exchange was suddenly reversed, would be an arrest of export business and a stimulation of imports. Next in the particular circumstances of India, we should be entitled to expect with a rise in the value of silver a large expansion of the imports of gold. The desire for gold for hoarding and ornament is notoriously ever present in India, and every rise in the purchasing power of silver manifestly enables more persons to satisfy the inclination.

With silver, on the other hand, we should not be justified in anticipating à priori an increase of imports, but rather the reverse. The larger imports of merchandise for which payment has to be sent abroad, and the lessened exports of produce, the payment for which has to be made in India, are influences that in themselves should tend to diminish the flow of silver to this country. Yet the fact is notorious that the silver import during 1890-91 was extraordinarily large, the net imports amounting to 14,212,000 rs. Evidently, then, the chain of cause and effect is no longer a single one. To our mind Mr. O'Connor has supplied the explanation with convincing clearness. In the first place he has noticed that the "boom" in silver was a great inducement to speculators to send silver to India. It is obvious that great profits were to be made by bullion dealers who had stocks of silver to throw upon the rising market. But probably a more important and certainly much more diffused cause was the rise that took place in the value of Indian Government securities. Over 5 crores of Government paper were transferred from India to the London market, which had to be settled for somehow, and probably the settlement was largely in silver. Moreover, the Government itself at the same time brought up another crore of its own securities in accordance with its decision to increase the currency reserve, and of course threw that amount of silver from the Treasury vaults upon the market. All these causes therefore were working in one direction, and one can hardly enumerate them without being struck with their intimate bearing upon much that has been extraordinary and to most people puzzling in the phases of the money market ever since. By this time last year money, which had been practically unobtainable in the early spring, was becoming as cheap as it was previously dear. From that time onwards there has been a glut of silver in the embarrassed banks, who have found themselves under obligation to pay their fixed depositors 5 per cent., when the rate of ordinary bills in the market has been two and sometimes less than two. The banks, therefore, their coffers filled with silver for which they had no employment, had to buy largely of Government paper in order to get some interest for their money. But as we have seen, the supply of Government paper in the Indian market had just been reduced by a large Government transaction and by purchases from London, to the extent of six crores. The result was that the price began to rise vigorously in December, and for eight months the 4 per cent. stock has been maintained at the unprecedented figure of 108 and fractions. There are signs now that the movement has at last run its course. The notorious power of the country for absorbing rupees will assert itself in time, and will shake off the surfeit from which it has laboured under the extraordinary importation of the last two years; and as money begins to be in better demand, those who can employ it to advantage will release what they hold in Government paper, which is already on the decline. Thus the two dominating and extraordinary phenomena of the Indian money market during the last twenty months can be very clearly explained and accounted for, though it may be doubted if they were at all generally understood before Mr. O'Connor furnished the solution.

Another question directly impinging upon present interests that arises out of the facts we have just been discussing is that of the policy or impolicy of conversion. One of the first results of the great rise in Government paper last January was to set people asking why with the Four per Cents standing at 108 the Government of India did not take advantage of the firmness of its credit to borrow afresh at a lower rate of interest. We should assuredly do a gratuitous wrong to the reputation of the present Finance Minister to suppose that he is less alive than any other person in India to the advantages of reducing the Government's obligations; and a consideration of the very unusual conditions of the market that we have been dwelling on above, will in itself probably give the key to the reasons that have weighed with Sir D. Barbour in not thinking the season an advantageous one for the operation that has so often been recommended to him. It is clearly apparent that the late high price of Government securities was due to a rare combination of causes that made everyone anxious to get hold of these at the same time, and not to any intrinsic betterment of the Government's credit. The primary cause, moreover, which set the others in operation was the sudden and unforeseen rise of silver, reversing as it did all the tendencies that have ruled in the Indian money market for the last fifteen years. But this feature of the situation has already disappeared; and the abnormal conditions which it produced may be expected to give way and readjust themselves in the near future. In addition it has to be remembered that at the present moment Government paper is, so to speak, unnaturally high, because there happens to have been no fresh borrowing for the last two years. But this is really more in the nature of an accident than anything else; and for several months past there has been before the Government the prospect of having to borrow largely at any time on account of the apprehensions of agricultural distress in more than one part of the country. It is not when one stands in the midst of violent fluctuations and abnormal conditions that one can best judge of the permanent level of the public credit. The position of silver seems to be approaching to another crisis, possibly a final crisis. On the turn taken by events in America it depends for one thing, whether the five crores of paper that went abroad last year will find their way back to India, or whether there will come a fresh demand from London. The Government were no doubt in a position of some temptation; not only was the price of their paper unprecedented, but they had it in their power to raise it further by completing the operation contemplated in Sir David Barbour's measure and taking another crore off the market. That they should have preferred to wait until affairs had returned to a more regular position is only another proof of the wise judgment that we are accustomed to look for in the head of the Financial Department.

THE CLAIMS OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

A "LOVER OF FAIR PLAY" writes to the Times as follows:—

SIR,—Recently there appeared a telegram from your Special Correspondent in Calcutta announcing that Sir Frederick Roberts, Lord Lansdowne, and General Brackenbury had unanimously recommended Major-General Sir George White as the officer who should succeed Sir Frederick Roberts, and in your issue of the 19th inst. your correspondent on Indian affairs enlarges on this subject, and uses the powerful influence of the Times to support this recommendation.

I have no desire to enter upon the personal qualifications of particular officers for this high command. That is a matter for the highest authorities in the State to consider and decide on. By all means let the fittest and best be selected.

Your correspondent strongly supports this special recommendation, on the grounds that difficult and delicate measures are being carried on for the conversion of the Indian Army into a more efficient fighting machine, and also for the creation out of the present armed rabble of Native States of a powerful auxiliary force for the defence of the empire, and that various strategic questions connected with the frontier of serious importance to the safety of India are pending. The necessity for a personal acquaintance with Indian military and frontier questions is said to be the more imperative for the new Commander-in-Chief as the Governor-General's Council happens to be at the present moment exceptionally weak in political experience, the recently-appointed military member of the Council being without personal knowledge of the Indian Army, and, it may be said, of Indian affairs generally, except what he gained as a subaltern with the Central Indian Force more than thirty years ago. Consequently, the writer argues, it would be a public misfortune if Sir Frederick Roberts were to be replaced by a general who, however high his other qualifications, had no experience in actual Indian campaigning and in the handling of a mixed army of British and Native troops in the field.

My object in writing is simply to ask for a fair consideration to the claims of senior officers of her Majesty's Indian Army to a fair share, at least, of the higher commands and appointments connected with that Army in which they have served all their lives, with which they are intimately acquainted in all its branches, and many of whom have distinguished themselves by excellent service in actual commands in the field, men of tried experience, and whose honourable careers entitle them to the fullest recognition. Indian officers bear the burden and heat of the day with a vengeance, and only a few of them are fortunate enough to go through their service without a full share of all its disagreeable and trying accompaniments of climate and hardships, yet for all the higher commands they appear at present to be "out of it." There is no one to speak up for them, no one to represent them at headquarters, they feel neglected, and it would not be a matter of surprise if a feeling of discontent should arise.

The high appointment of military member of Council has been given to an officer of the British Service wholly without personal knowledge of India or any experience and with no claims on the Government of India—and now, for that very reason, the claims of another officer of the British Service are recommended for the highest military command in India in order that he may supply the deficiency!—while the chief commands of Bombay and Madras are also held by officers of the same service, the latter of whom has about the same amount of personal knowledge and experience of Indian affairs and military questions as the military member of Council—that is to say, nil.

The present state of affairs is such that it can scarcely be said there is justice in it—out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh—and I would fain claim for Indian officers that fair consideration which is all they would ask. They can at least bring something more than an open and unprejudiced mind to the Council Board.

The Orient Liner "Ophir."—This vessel, which arrived in the Thames on Oct. 27 from Messrs. Napier's yard on the Clyde, is the latest example of advanced speed in vessels so far as communication with Australia is concerned. She is the largest and swiftest vessel designed for the Australian service, and may also be pronounced the safest, seeing that the subdivisions of her hull are more abundant than any of her predecessors built for the Southern seas. She is also the first Australian steamer provided with a twin screw, and the first, consequently, that has been able with safety to dispense with masts and spars and the full complement of sails. She carries two short bare poles of steel, not much taller than her two funnels, and with only enough rigging to carry a couple of staysails and a foresail. The two sets of engines are placed side by side, and are separated from each other by a watertight bulkhead running fore and aft. There are two sets of boilers working to a pressure of 160 lb., the one set of four being next the engines, but cut off from them by a water-tight bulkhead, and the other set of three being separated from the rest by four water-tight coal bunkers occupying a space of 30 feet of the length of the ship. By this arrangement it would be necessary to penetrate the sides of the ship in different places over a length of at least 50 feet between the foremost and hindmost fracture before the ship would be brought to a standstill through putting out the fires and swamping the engines. In addition to the subdivisions for the protection of the machinery, the hull of the vessel is doubled nearly throughout, and in no case is the distance between the outer and inner skin less than 3 ft. 9 in. This double skin is subdivided into numerous compartments, many of which are used for water ballast so as to maintain the most desirable draught in all conditions of coal and cargo carried in the hull. As much as 900 tons of water may be carried in this way. The iron doors closing the water-tight compartments are in all cases worked from above the main deck by gearing capable of driving the doors through any obstruction short of a bar of iron, and, generally, the provisions for preventing a catastrophe seem to be about as complete as human ingenuity can devise. The chief feature of the Ophir, however, is the elaborate system of ventilation that has been provided to meet the necessities of a voyage across the equator. The sanitary arrangements are in other respects also most admirable. The Ophir sails on Nov. 6.

OUR INTEREST IN EGYPT AS AN AFRICAN QUESTION.

ONE point we have not seen insisted upon in the discussions on our position in Egypt, namely, that it is not solely—we might have written not chiefly—because of our interest in controlling the Suez Canal as a route to India that the Egyptian occupation is important to Great Britain. Since the partition of Africa into spheres of influence by the Great Powers, and our acquisition of territories on the East and South, the question of maintaining a paramount influence in the Delta, to be extended hereafter southwards up to the sources of the Nile, has become a matter of the deepest interest to this country. To the development of our future trade the control of this highway into Central Africa is practically essential, and if we release it without guarantees we shall be throwing away one of the finest openings that exists in any direction for extending our commerce. This is a point to which attention will have to be directed. The French already control a large part of the Mediterranean coast of Northern Africa, and neither Great Britain nor Italy can afford to allow her to extend her influence any farther to the East. If the moment ever should come when M. RIBOT or his successor would have to settle with Italy, Germany, Austria and England what kind of guarantees are to be taken for establishing a neutral and independent government in Egypt, they will find that among the precautions to be insisted on will be certain conditions excluding France from any hope of increasing her influence beyond the frontiers of Tunis.

The French seem to imagine that with our retirement from Egypt would come back to them that influence which they used—by intrigues which were not always honourable or honest—to maintain in the Delta; but it would be well for them to remember that since they abandoned the Dual Control, which secured them a defined position at Cairo, the political equilibrium has shifted. Then Germany had no territorial interests beyond the Suez Canal, and Italy no status of importance on the Red Sea. Now, both those Powers have a large stake in the maintenance of the freedom of the Suez Canal, and the keeping of French influence in Egypt within moderate limits. Their statesmen are keen enough to see that if England were to leave Egypt to the mercy of events, an international problem of the highest gravity would immediately supervene. France and Russia would conspire to obtain such an arrangement as would secure them the maximum of influence in the Delta; while Germany, Italy and England would be forced to combine on the other side to protect their several interests. In fact the evacuation of Egypt would at once bring the Central Alliance and the Dual Alliance into direct competition and give rise to the gravest difficulties. While England remains in Egypt the question rests in abeyance. There is nothing to quarrel about. The country is well-governed; the bondholders get their interest; the Germans and Italians are content to depend on British goodwill and sense of justice; the French may swear, but that does nobody any harm. But neither Germany nor Italy will listen to any proposal which would in the slightest degree tend to diminish the guarantees they now practically possess of uninterrupted communications with their East African colonies. And, as we said at the outset, it is to us chiefly, as now a great African Power, that the continued occupation of Egypt, or its absolute and guaranteed independence, has become a matter of vital interest. From that point of view we should like to see the subject fairly discussed.

In a note on the above question, the Overland Mail says: The ex-Premier's words have unquestionably encouraged the French Government in its determination to make us as uncomfortable as possible in Egypt. Apparently it is not intended to put forward further demands for evacuation, but, as the Soir suggests, to insist stringently on all the privileges to which France is entitled, or fancies she is entitled, under the Capitulations. This will make it more difficult to carry out to legitimate conclusions the reforming and organising policy of the English Government; the effectuation of which, one would imagine, would be the most rapid way of bringing Egypt into a condition justifying the demand that she should be left to her own independent action. The international guarantee of her neutrality, which is said to be M. RIBOT's solution of the problem that would be created by the withdrawal of British troops and administration, would really be ineffectual for securing the internal safety and good government of the country. It would not exclude that right of intervention which Turkey claims as the suzerain power, and which it was at one time French policy to denounce. Neither would it exclude international intrigues to obtain the predominant influence at Cairo.

THE REVIVAL OF INDIAN INDUSTRIES.

WE have not been able before to refer to the interesting Industrial Conference which was held at Poona in September, but it ought not to be allowed to pass without some remark. SIR RAYMOND WEST, COLONEL WOODHOUSE, PROFESSOR THOMPSON and others assembled under the presidency of CAPTAIN BEAUCLERK, of Hyderabad, to discuss the extremely important subject of the promotion and revival of Indian industries, a subject in which LORD REAY, while Governor of Bombay, manifested his interest by permitting the Reay memorial fund to be devoted to a new museum which will be carried on under the Industrial Association. The object of the Association is described to be "to encourage diversity of activity and stimulate existing industries, to revive those that have died out or are dying, and to introduce such as can thrive but at the present day do not exist among us." No more excellent objects could be suggested: the difficulty is how they are to be achieved. The ordinary economic process is that the general condition of a population is improved by the increase of wealth, with a not necessarily consequent, but often resulting improvement of taste and stimulating of demand for a better and more varied class of industrial products. This process may no doubt be encouraged and directed by superior intelligence, and it is a good thing that active-minded men in India, both European and Native, should be devoting time and talents to facilitating as far as possible its development. CAPTAIN BEAULIERK, who is one of the most active advocates of the movement, in a thoughtful address, discussed the various means by which the encouragement so much needed might be given; and even when critics cannot agree with some of his arguments or conclusions they can recognise the general utility of his aims and the advantage of having them advocated in a spirit at once so broad and earnest. The question however needs to be very practically considered. We are rather inclined to agree with the Bombay Gazette, which, in the course of some judicious comments on the proceedings, remarked:—"We are not hopeful of anything that local committees may do to develop the industries of any town or district, and are distrustful of any wide departure from the principle of trusting to individual initiative. But the experiment ought not to be discouraged at this stage, for it is quite conceivable that organisations of this kind may prove effective agencies for coaxing capital out of its hiding places, and for disposing of what is in reality the very crux of the problem." CAPTAIN BEAULIERK ought not to be discouraged if at the outset of a movement of this kind, he should find a difficulty in exciting enthusiasm in its favour, or in getting the Government to give a sympathetic hearing to his arguments. Obviously the first thing to do is to stimulate discussion, and this such conferences as that at Poona will accomplish.

"BLACKWOOD'S" ON EGYPT AND CHINA.

"BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE" for this month contains an article on "The Egyptians and the Occupation," based, the writer informs us, on personal experience, in which he reviews very graphically the work which England has done in the Delta and for the people. He points out how Greeks and Levantines, protected under the Capitulations, flooded the country and ground down the unhappy fellahen, and how, under the administration protected by Great Britain, in spite of the Capitulations, these bloodsuckers have gradually been restrained, though by no means as yet reduced to harmlessness. He summarises the work done in a few sentences:—

The financial outlook is just as bright to-day as it was dark in 1883. In 1883 all the heads of departments in Egypt, the Khedive leading the way, sacrificed 10 per cent. of their salary to enable the financial equilibrium to be preserved! Since then, taxation represented by 650,000l. per annum has been taken off the necks of the poorest of the peasantry. The Government has remitted 1,000,000l. of old arrears of land revenue which were recorded against the peasantry. In spite of these remissions, the prosperity of the country has become so great that the revenues of 1890 were higher than those of any previous year in the annals of modern Egypt. The surplus of revenue over expenditure in 1890 was 600,000l. The postage and telegraph charges have been halved. The interest on the debt has been reduced by 350,000l. per annum. The public works of the country have been so improved that land has risen 20 per cent. in value, in spite of the depreciation of agricultural produce over the whole world. The railways have been supplied with sufficient funds to maintain them in efficient order. A municipality has been created for Alexandria, and it has been given half the octroi dues of the city. A reserve fund of 1,750,000l. has been formed to enable the Government to meet all emergencies. The unified debt of Egypt has risen in value 26 per cent. It was quoted at 70 in 1883, to-day it is at 96. The financial position of Egypt is so good, that Egyptian bonds are now treated as first-class securities. Blue Book No. C 6,320 of 1891, which contains Sir Evelyn Baring's report on the finances of Egypt, reads more like the despatch of a victorious general than the financial statement of a country.

Referring to Mr. Gladstone's speech at Newcastle, the writer says:—

If Egypt is to be tossed into the British electoral arena as a football for party struggles, not merely the great fact of our occupation, but the whole spirit of heartiness in which our countrymen are carrying on their great work, will be exposed to very serious disadvantage. Mr. Gladstone, at Newcastle, rather insinuated than dared a disparagement of our continued presence in Egypt, and hinted that it would be the duty of his own Government, on coming into office, to put an end to the occupation. We quote his exact words, which are an excellent illustration of the science, "spargere voces in vulgum ambiguas," in which he is the greatest living adept. . . . A statesman who can compress so many malicious mis-statements into the compass of a single sentence shows no decline in those peculiar arts that have raised him to eminence. Mr. Gladstone knows quite well that our present occupation of Egypt was not brought about by a Tory Government, but was a direct legacy from his own Administration. He knows also that he can have no credit from a fact that is so full of security to this country and of benefit to the Egyptian millions, for he blundered into the bombardment of Alexandria and the campaign against Arabi, which planted us in Egypt without the option of removing, except at the risk of anarchy and revolution in the East. He knows also that, though he were returned to office to-morrow, his Cabinet would not or could not withdraw our troops and officers from Egypt. The insinuation, then, that the country is suffering from our occupation of Egypt, and that Mr. Gladstone will put an end to it when he comes back to office, is unworthy of the remains of a great statesman; and the British elector, whether Conservative or Radical, who cannot help reading with pride the great work of the regeneration of Egypt which this country is carrying out, will have his own views of the policy which seeks to make party capital by decrying and disparaging it.

Another article to which readers interested in the East will turn is that on "The Riots in China," in which the writer, who probably writes from the spot, reviews briefly past troubles in China, and after contrasting Sir Thomas Wade's effective conduct of British interests at Peking, with that which has since characterised our representation, declares that the Chinese "most enlightened statesmen are at heart as anti-foreign as any member of the most advanced secret societies." He points out that Sir Thomas Wade, in his report on the Tientsin outbreak in 1870, declared that "the rising was purely a question of brigandage," and then says:—

It is a noticeable fact that the late riots were directed against the missionary establishments at the ports. So far as we know, the inland stations have been left undisturbed. In the last number of China's Millions, a periodical which represents the 400 missionaries and agents of the Inland China Mission scattered over the empire, no mention whatever is made of any difficulties with the natives. Of the motives of the attacks there cannot be any doubt. In the eyes of Chinamen all foreigners are rich, and it is a common saying among native thieves that the contents of one foreign house are worth more than those of any ten Chinese houses. But besides this powerful attraction, there was an additional reason why the foreigners should be the object of attack. The members of the society have learned by experience that it is not only more profitable but that it is safer to pillage Europeans than natives. An act of brigandage committed on a native town or village is followed by a vigilant pursuit of the criminals, in which the people of the district eagerly take part; but the committers of a similar outrage on the European quarter of a city are secure from any great inquisitiveness on the part of the authorities, and, like the perpetrators of agrarian crime in Ireland, are sure to have the support and condonation of the people.

With such motives for riot it is always easy to manufacture a cry among so ignorant and superstitious a people as the Chinese, more especially among the natives of Hunan, who on these as on all other occasions of disturbance in that part of the Yang-tse-Kiang, have taken a prominent part in the outrages. Of all the provincials in China the Hunanese are the most bigoted, ignorant, and anti-foreign. No foreigner has ever been able to establish himself in the province, and chance travellers who have skirted its northern portion going westward have found it necessary to conceal themselves so far as possible in the recesses of their sedan-chairs or boats, and to hurry past the inhospitable frontier. This hatred of foreigners is made to extend to everything foreign, and only a few weeks ago the people on the border rose as one man to oppose the admission of the electric telegraph into the province. In this they were successful. They burned the poles, destroyed the wires, drove the native engineers across the boundary, and can now boast that Hunan is the only province in China which is uncontaminated by foreign inventions. For years past all the most virulent literary assaults upon Europeans have issued from this centre. A particularly violent pamphlet entitled "A Deathblow to Corrupt Doctrine," had its origin and chief circulation in Hunan. In this work every conceivable crime and immorality are attributed to foreigners, and especially to foreign missionaries. The wellworn accusation that they are in the habit of making medicine from the eyes of children, finds positive assertion in its pages, and the people are thus primed and ready at any moment to avenge their countrymen at the bidding of their leaders.

The writer has a profound disbelief in the sincerity of the Chinese Government, and urges that the only policy to adopt is "to insist on its carrying out to the letter the obligations due to us." In closing he argues that a treaty port ought to be established in the Province of Hunan, which is the centre of anti foreign animosity, and that the place to be chosen for the experiment should be Siantan, which is politically and commercially marked out as the best spot for the diffusion of foreign knowledge and influence. "At least," he writes, "this much is certain, that the establishment of settlements at inland towns in Hunan and Hupeh is the true remedy for the anti-foreign feeling which is now so unfortunately rife in those provinces, and which unless checked must remain a constant source of danger to the treaty ports on the Yang-tse-Kiang."

The following appointments have been gazetted:—Mr. Reginald Brett and Mr. K. J. R. Campbell to be her Majesty's Deputy Commissioners and Vice-Consuls in the Oil Rivers Protectorate and adjoining native territories; Mr. Walter Caine Hillier to be Consul-General in Corea.

BANK OF BENGA.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, October 16.

The renewed activity in wheat was not sustained, and, with native holidays intervening for two days, business in exports has been slow again, a spurt in cotton having been short-lived, while transactions in seeds have been upon only a moderate scale, though linseed has advanced somewhat in value. Exchange has fluctuated a little in sympathy with silver, and on the whole there has been a slight advance in both bank and private paper. Government paper has moved both ways, and closes 1-16 per cent. higher in Fours. Freights have been weak or quiet for new shipment, but steady or firm for forward loading, and the market is quiet but steady, with a good demand for April-May tonnage. There has been some increase in business in some lines of imports, but prices generally are unchanged.

MONEY.—Some increase in the demand for money during the period covered by the Presidency Banks' Statement of Affairs issued (owing to intervening holidays) on Oct. 14 for Oct. 12, was disclosed by the diminution of the Cash Balance to some 395 lacs, or a falling off of 47½ lacs since the date of the previous return. The principal change had been in Private Deposits, which had diminished by nearly 41 lacs owing, probably, in some measure to withdrawals in anticipation of the late holidays, during which the banks were closed; there was also an increase of 31½ lacs in Bills Discounted, and a slight accession to Loans, the increase in trade requirements since the close of the previous week being represented by nearly 45 lacs. No change in the rates of the Bank of Bombay has been made, and the minimum, therefore, remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been a slight improvement in the demand for staple grey goods in the bazaar, but the average daily offtake is not yet what it generally runs to at this time of the year, the slowness of the inquiry being attributed to the latter rain in the consuming districts. Prices generally are unchanged, and holders will not lower their pretensions at all in view of their inability to replace their stocks on lower terms.

YARNS.—The market for imported twist has remained quiet, and only a small business has been done; but prices are quite unchanged.

METALS.—A small business has been passing in copper, and prices have declined 4 a. per cwt. in a quiet market. Yellow metal has been in moderate request and steady in tone at former quotations. Iron has been taken to a moderate extent, and prices have given way 4 a., the market closing steady at the decline.

COAL is steady. Sales have been reported of ready Powell's Dufferin Cardiff for Knight Templar at 15½ rs. per ton; but no forward sales have been effected owing to the high prices asked by sellers. For forward shipment there are sellers of Powell's Dufferin's, and Davison's West Hartley at 15½ rs. and 14½ rs. per ton respectively, buyers' ideas being 15 rs. for the former and 14 rs. for the latter. Stocks at the bunker are still very heavy.

Exports.—COTTON.—An active demand from exporters and local spinners sprang up for this staple at the close of last week in anticipation of the American Agricultural Bureau monthly report regarding the cotton crop in the United States, and a large business was done in a firm market on Oct. 10, but without any advance in rates. On the reopening of the market on Oct. 12, however, inquiry from both quarters had subsided, and transactions were upon only a small scale, though the feeling was steady and prices were unchanged. Thereafter the tone of the market became quiet, with only a small business passing, and on the basis of previous rates. The purchases for export during the week have aggregated about 6,500 bales, including a line of New Bengals, for January delivery, at 165-6 rs., the balance being old stock from godown, consisting mainly of Oomra and Dhollera varieties, Ginned Compta, Westerns, and Bengals, while the mills have taken about 5,000 bales of old stuff, made up of Oomras, Dholleras, Ginned Compta, and Tinnevelly. The market closes quiet, with prices of old stuff unchanged, but rates for contracts in the new crop 2 rs. to 5 rs. per candy lower.

WHEAT.—Last week closed with a firm feeling in this market; but business was checked by an advance of 1 a. per cwt. in prices all round on Oct. 10, and only a moderate export business was done; and though the tone was still firm on the 12th there was no return of activity, and the market thereafter was generally steady or quiet, without further movement in rates, the occurrence of native holidays at the beginning of the week helping to restrict business. Seeds have been taken on most days to a moderate extent in a steady market, though latterly the feeling has been firmer and prices have not varied, with the exception of that for linseed, which advanced ½ a. per cwt. on two occasions.
